Mr. Raynsford: We have no current plans to commission further research.

The Department commissioned a number of research reports which informed the development of the policy in PPG6, including "Vital and Viable Town Centres: Meeting the Challenge", published in 1994, "The Effects of Major Out of Town Retail Development" published in 1992 and more recently research on the impact of out-of-town superstores on market towns, the report of which we will be publishing shortly.

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will estimate the proportion of retail turnover which takes place outside town centres. [45288]

Mr. Raynsford: The Department is funding a research study to enable identification of town centre boundaries and to generate basic statistics such as employment, retail turnover and floorspace for these areas. The research study is currently at the pilot stage. This work will enable the Department in time to gather and assess information on retail trends such as the proportion of retail turnover which takes place outside town centres.

Local Authorities (Public Transport)

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to remove the restrictions on local authorities providing their own public transport services. [46043]

Ms Glenda Jackson: My right hon. Friend the Minister of Transport announced on 11 June 1998, Official Report, columns 637–38, more flexible borrowing arrangements for investment in local authority airports. Otherwise, there are no plans to change the present arrangements; but the Government is keen that local authorities should be able to promote public transport as part of an integrated transport policy. Our proposals for this will be set out in the forthcoming White Paper.

Road Traffic Reduction

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what steps his Department is taking to assess the success of local authorities in complying with the requirements of the Road Traffic Reduction Act 1997; if he will publish the results of his Department's findings; what action he intends to take against those authorities that are failing to meet the terms of the Act; and if he will make a statement. [46045]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Guidance to local authorities on implementing the Road Traffic Reduction Act 1997 was issued in draft earlier this year for consultation. This made clear that each local authority would be expected to produce a report containing an assessment of levels of local road traffic in their area and forecast growth in those levels, together with targets for reducing those levels or their rate of growth, as required by the Act, by 31 July 1999. We will want to satisfy ourselves that authorities are taking their obligations under the Act seriously, and their performance will be a consideration in the founding they receive for transport capital expenditure.

Disabled Drivers

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what measures he plans to take to encourage technical improvements to ease the difficulties faced by disabled drivers. [46089]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions, through its Mobility Advice and Vehicle Information Service (MAVIS), works closely with vehicle manufacturers and adaptation specialists to promote improvements both in vehicle design and in the range and quality of adaptations available to enable disabled drivers to get in and out of vehicles and to control them safely.

North Circular Road, London

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what was the final cost or expected final cost for each of the contracts to extend the North Circular Road (A406) at Fore Street N18 extending east to the Waltham Forest boundary, and in each case what was the increase and the percentage charge over the original budgeted cost; and what is the date or expected date of completion of each contract. [45339]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I have asked the Chief Executive of the Highways Agency, Mr. Lawrie Haynes, to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. Andrew Love, dated 15 June 1998:

The Minister for Transport in London, Glenda Jackson, has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the improvements to the A406 between Fore Street and Hall Lane.

The information asked for is on the attached table with one exception.

I am afraid that for commercial reasons I cannot let you have an estimate of the final outturn costs. To do so would weaken our bargaining position with the contractor in the event of disputes over the final account or the settlement of claims. I have therefore given figures showing the spend so far.

The contracts were let under the Institution of Civil Engineers standard form of contract, which has been used for many years throughout the construction industry for major civil engineering works, and in which the contractor is paid for the actual, rather than estimated, work done. With road schemes it is not possible to identify all of the necessary work in advance of construction and this was true in this case which is a complex project in an urban environment.

The disadvantage of using this form of contract is the uncertainty of costs and time but the Highways Agency addressed these concerns in a review of its procurement strategy, which led to an announcement in June 1997 of new procurement initiatives. As a result we are beginning to use other forms of contract, which share risk more equitably. Partnering is being encouraged to get away from the adversarial way in which some of our contracts have been conducted in the past.

Highway scheme	Completion date	Original works budget[1] £ million—1992	Spend to date[1] £ million	Percentage increase
Contract A: Fore Street Underpass	Estimated late summer/early autumn (Tunnel-July)	56.6	56.5	—
Contract B: Angel Road Viaduct	28 November 1996	31.4	37.7	18
Total		120.7	133.5	10.5

[1] Figures include the cost of works, statutory undertakers, variations of price and contingencies. They exclude Traffic Control Systems Unit (TCSU), Preparation and Supervision (P&S) and Land costs

Note:

All figures are exclusive of VAT

Housing (Sewerage Services)

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions in respect of which projects the Environment Agency has opposed new housing plans because the proposed dwellings were not connected to a public sewer. [45838]

Angela Eagle: This information is not collected centrally.

London Regional Transport

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he proposes to advertise the post of chairman of London Regional Transport. [45813]

Ms Glenda Jackson: We are considering with our advisers how best to manage the recruitment for this important post.

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what directions and advice he proposes to give London Regional Transport in preparation for the establishment of a London Assembly. [45814]

Ms Glenda Jackson: London Transport is one of a number of bodies whose responsibilities will be taken over by the Greater London Authority subject to the necessary legislation being approved by Parliament. Discussions are already under way between the Government Office for London and London Transport, and the other bodies involved, with a view to effecting a smooth transition.

Bus Companies (Customer Service)

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what steps he is taking to improve bus companies' customer service standards (a) in London and (b) elsewhere. [45815]

Ms Glenda Jackson: In London such matters are for London Transport, in the letting and monitoring of contracts for bus services. Elsewhere they are chiefly for bus operators, and for local authorities where service subsidy contracts are concerned. I am glad that, in addition, a number of local authorities are entering into quality partnerships with bus operators, to make bus services more attractive to present and potential passengers.

Environment Agency

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his oral answer of 9 June 1998, Official Report, column 856, relating to the annual rental of the Environment Agency's new headquarters, if she will publish the name of the landlord of the premises. [45826]

Angela Eagle: The Environment Agency's new area office in Cumbria is leased from Allen Commercial Developments Ltd.

Special Areas of Conservation

Mr. Leslie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when the Government will announce the submission of further areas to the European Commission as candidate special areas of conservation. [46078]

Mr. Meacher: A further list of UK proposals was sent to the European Commission on 12 June. This consists of 14 new candidate Special Areas of Conservation, boundary extensions to 8 existing sites already submitted to the Commission as candidate SACs and the addition of further qualifying interests on one candidate SAC. I am pleased to be able to reaffirm the UK's commitment to the Natura 2000 process by announcing the submission of this further list of sites during the UK Presidency.

Barking-Gospel Oak Line

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what discussions his Department has had with Railtrack and train-operating companies concerning the electrification, upgrading and extension of services on the Barking to Gospel Oak line; and if he will make a statement. [45348]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I understand that Railtrack are currently assessing the options for upgrading the Gospel Oak-Barking line. The final decision will ultimately be a commercial one for Railtrack.

Rocket Launch Site, Anguilla

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the criteria to be used by the Environment Agency in deciding whether to approve a request to build a rocket launch-pad on Sombrero Island, Anguilla. [44649]

Mr. Battle: I have been asked to reply.

Beal Aerospace, a US firm, has approached the Government of Anguilla with a proposal to develop a satellite launch site on Sombrero Island. A US environmental consultancy firm is currently conducting an Environmental Impact Assessment (EIA) of the proposal. This EIA will form part of Beal Aerospace's planning application.

This will be the first application the UK has received for a commercial launch site and so it is not possible, at this early stage in the process, to list the criteria to be used in evaluating the application. Officials in the British National Space Centre (BNSC) will consult the US authorities who have relevant experience and, in conjunction with the Environment Agency (EA) and other relevant governmental organisations, they will provide advice to Ministers on suitable evaluation criteria.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Racial Violence

19. Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what has been the trend in the reported incidence of racial violence over the past five years. [44262]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The number of racial incidents reported to the police has risen in recent years.

Between 1992 and 1997 the number of incidents reported rose, from 7,734 in 1992 to 11,878 in 1994–95 and to 13,151 in 1996–97. That is why we are taking steps to tackle it.

Reoffending

20. Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the contribution which family responsibilities make to reducing reoffending; and if he will give priority to placing prisoners within easy reach of their families. [44263]

Ms Quin: Home Office research suggests that family responsibilities and the formation of a stable relationship are a factor in young women aged 14 to 25 desisting from offending. Young men may be similarly influenced, but at a later age. Further research is being undertaken.

The Government's view is that it is certainly desirable to keep prisoners closely in touch with their families and for them to be located close to their homes and families wherever possible.

25. Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to ensure that there is early intervention with young offenders to prevent reoffending. [44268]

Mr. Straw: My hon. Friend is right to stress the importance of early intervention with young offenders to prevent reoffending. The child safety order and local child curfews, both for under 10s, and the Final Warning Scheme, for those aged 10 and over, will help to nip offending in the bud. New local crime reduction strategies and the new youth offending teams will help local action to reduce youth crime. We are also providing new powers to enable the police to deal with truants in partnership with the education authorities.

Asylum Procedures

21. Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to announce the outcome of his review of asylum procedures. [44264]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: We hope to make an announcement before the recess.

Closed Circuit Television

22. Mr. Bill O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assistance he offers to private businesses to install closed circuit television; and if he will make a statement. [44265]

Mr. Michael: No direct assistance is offered to private businesses to install closed circuit television on their premises but businesses gain enormously from CCTV coverage of public areas in town and city centres.

34. Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what priority will be given to spending on closed circuit television beyond 1998 in the Government's spending review. [44277]

Mr. Michael: The expenditure plans we inherited from the previous administration made no provision whatsoever to support closed circuit television (CCTV) after 1998–99. Decisions on expenditure for 1999–2000 and beyond will be announced in a White Paper, to be published in July.

Metropolitan Police

23. Mr. Beard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the impact on security of contracting out the Metropolitan police information technology systems. [44266]

Mr. Michael: The Metropolitan Police Service is carrying out a thorough assessment of the security implications associated with all its Information Technology systems. It will not contract work out unless it is satisfied that all security needs will be met.

Prisons (Ministerial Visits)

26. Mr. Cranston: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on ministerial visits to prisons. [44269]

Ms Quin: Ministers visit prisons to see for themselves what is happening at individual establishments, to talk to staff and their union representatives, to prisoners and to members of Boards of Visitors about matters of concern to them. While most visits are notified in advance I have made it clear that I intend to make some unannounced visits. I also have sought to vary visits by arranging to 'shadow' governors and prison officers to accompany Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Prisons as one of his inspectors.

Prison Officers

27. Mr. Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in how many instances when the Civil Service Appeals Board has recommended reinstatement of a prison officer, that officer has been reinstated in the last five years. [44270]

Ms Quin: In the last five years, the Civil Service Appeals Board has recommended the reinstatement of four prison officers. This recommendation was accepted in two cases.

Parc Prison

28. Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he plans to take in respect of Parc prison, Bridgend. [44271]

Ms Quin: The performance of the contractor, Bridgend Custodial Services, is being monitored regularly by senior Prison Service officials and reports on progress conveyed to me. An action plan has been agreed to address areas of concern; and an experienced Governor has been seconded to Parc to support the recently appointed Director. Both the Director General and I have visited Parc on separate occasions. Deductions in respect of failures to meet performance measures are made from the invoices due to Bridgend Custodial Services in accordance with the contract.

Crime and Disorder Bill

29. Mr. Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to pilot measures contained in the Crime and Disorder Bill [Lords]. [44272]

Mr. Michael: We plan to pilot a number of initiatives to tackle youth offending; measures to tackle delay in the youth justice system; the drug treatment and testing order; and use of live TV links between prison and court. Provided the Bill receives Royal Assent before the summer, we plan to commence these pilots in the autumn.

Voting Commission

30. Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects the Independent Commission on the Voting System to report. [44273]

Mr. George Howarth: The Independent Commission on the Voting System began its work in January and was asked to report within twelve months. However, I understand that the Commission hopes to be able to complete its work ahead of schedule and report by October.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects the Independent Commission on the Voting System to report. [44259]

Mr. Straw: The Independent Commission on the Voting System began its work in January and was asked to report within twelve months. However, I understand that the Commission hopes to be able to complete its work ahead of schedule and report by October.

Rape Victims

31. Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to introduce measures to increase the protection provided to victims of rape. [44274]

Mr. Michael: Last week my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary published the report of the interdepartmental Working Group on Vulnerable or Intimidated Witnesses which we set up to help deliver our manifesto commitment to provide greater protection for victims, especially in rape trials. The report recommends a wide range of measures designed to provide greater protection to vulnerable or intimidated witnesses from the investigation stage through to the trial. The proposals include the use of screens, live television links, changes in the law to set out more clearly the limited circumstances in which evidence on previous sexual history may be admitted in evidence, and a ban on unrepresented defendants personally conducting cross-examination and power for the judge to clear the public gallery when the witness is giving evidence.

Crime Rates

32. Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what research he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the link between crime rates and the numbers of convicted offenders detained in prison. [44275]

Mr. Michael: Research published by the Home Office in 1993 suggested that a 25 per cent. increase in the prison population is required to obtain a one per cent. drop in recorded crime in England and Wales. The Home Office Research and Statistics Directorate continually monitor and analyse information on crime rates and prison populations in different jurisdictions. They are currently examining the relationships between these in a range of countries and the results of this work will be sent to the Home Affairs Committee shortly to assist their inquiry into Alternatives to Custody.

Supermarket Polling Stations

33. Ms Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what evaluation he has made of the use of supermarkets as polling stations. [44276]

Mr. George Howarth: The Home Office Working Party on Electoral Procedures which I chair will, in the course of its work, review recent experience in Dudley, the London Borough of Croydon and Rye, where polling stations have recently been set up in supermarkets.

Probation Service

35. Ms Ryan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent representations he has received about the work of the Probation Service. [44278]

Ms Quin: We have received a wide range of representations making a variety of points.

Speed Cameras

36. Sir Sydney Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement about the effect of speed cameras in reducing driving offences. [44280]

Mr. Michael: The Home Office "Cost Benefit Analysis of Traffic Light and Speed Cameras" has shown that the deployment of cameras has proven to be very effective in detecting offences, modifying the behaviour of drivers and reducing road casualties. A copy of the report has been placed in the Library.

The Government are committed to improving road safety and strongly support the police service in their use of enforcement technology. We are reviewing the current funding arrangements for these cameras to see what more might be done.

Prisoners

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on trends in the prison population in the United Kingdom since 1996. [44257]

Ms Quin: The prison population in England and Wales rose by 11 per cent. over the 12 months to 6 June 1997, when it stood at 60,850, and 8 per cent. over the last 12 months to 5 June 1998, when it stood at 65,434.

Trends in the prison populations for Scotland and Northern Ireland are matters for my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Scotland and for Northern Ireland.

Civil Liberties

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to amend the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 in respect of provisions relating to civil liberties. [44258]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Clause 35 of the Crime and Disorder Bill [Lords] amends section 25 of the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994. We are also considering the importance of the Murray judgment of the European Court of Human Rights, which has implications for the 1994 Act.

Suicides

Mr. Woolas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to issue guidance to police forces and coroners in respect of investigation into apparent suicides. [45130]

Mr. Michael: We have no plans to issue any guidance to the police or coroners on the conduct of their inquiries into deaths by apparent suicide. All such deaths are already subject to thorough investigation and reported to the coroner. The police will conduct initial inquiries into any death in suspicious circumstances. If the police are satisfied that no offence has been committed, it is for the coroner to decide what inquiries (beyond, for example, witness statements taken by the police) may be needed. This may include further information about the cause of death or the circumstances in which the death occurred.

The conduct of the coroner's inquiries is a matter for the coroner. The courts have held, though, that, to bring a verdict of suicide, the coroner or his jury needs to be satisfied in accordance with the criminal standard of proof (beyond reasonable doubt), rather than the normal civil standard. This is likely to require some indication that the deceased intended to take his or her own life.

While it is not for the coroner to establish the particular reason why the deceased may have killed him or herself, it may be necessary to seek to establish that there was some motivation for the suicide. Where there is documentary evidence in connection with this issue (ie notes or letters left by the deceased), the Coroners Rules provide for documentary evidence made by a deceased person to be admitted in evidence, but such documentary evidence need not be read aloud if the coroner so directs. Most coroners will publicly disclose only as much as may be necessary from such "suicide notes" for the purpose of the inquest.

Forensic Science Service

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what is the average time taken for scientific analysis to be carried out by the Forensic Science Service at the request of the police in respect of material submitted for DNA testing; [44165]

(2) what is the average time taken for analysis of blood to be carried out by the Forensic Science Service at the request of the police; [44163]

(3) what is the average time taken for scientific analysis to be carried out by the Forensic Science Service at the request of the police in respect of samples believed to be (a) heroin, (b) ecstasy, (c) LSD, (d) amphetamines, (e) cocaine and (f) cannabis. [44164]

Mr. Michael: The plans for the Forensic Science Service for the next two years include a focus on delivering improvements in turn-around times to meet all police requirements. This will mean an expansion in output of over 30 per cent. which will be achieved by the substantial recruitment and training of new staff and the development of existing staff.

Where police forces have requested analysis of material by techniques other than DNA (conventional blood grouping techniques), the average turn-around time (taken over the year 1997/98) is 66 days. This is compared with 65 days in 1996/97. The year 1997/98 has seen a 112 per cent. increase in submissions.

In cases involving cannabis identification, the average turn-around time (taken over the year 1997/98) is 24 days, compared with 19 days in 1996/97. For non-cannabis drugs, the average time taken is 22 days, compared with 17 days in 1996/97. Figures are not kept separately for each individual non-cannabis drug.

Where police forces have requested DNA analysis of material from crime scenes, or for intelligence or casework purposes, the average turn-around time (taken over the year 1997/98) is 44 days, compared with 71 days in 1996/97.

The times are measured from submission of the material to the Forensic Science Service to the delivery of a written statement. The average figures include urgent cases where a rapid response is needed and an improvement in turn-around times in all these cases over the year.

Prisoners (Incentives and Earned Privileges Scheme)

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Newark (Mrs. Jones) on 1 June 1998, Official Report, columns 50–51, what estimate he has made of the aggregate licence fees which would be paid in respect of in-cell television when it is fully available in the event of the ending of Crown exemption. [44609]

Ms Quin: None, as yet. The Government propose to consider the practicability of a licensing regime later on in the context of licensing arrangements more generally. Meanwhile, prisoners with this earned privilege will pay a weekly charge of about £1, against average weekly earnings of £7.50, which will fully cover the costs of sets, their replacement and wall brackets.

Incapacitant Sprays

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what assessment he has made of allegations that police officers in Cumbria have used oleoresin capsicum in an inappropriate way; and if he will make a statement; [44848]

(2) what reports he has received from the police service on the use of oleoresin capsicum to (a) make arrests that they would not otherwise have been able to make, (b) resolve peacefully potentially violent incidents and (c) enhance the effectiveness of women officers in dealing with incidents; [44847]

(3) what evidence he has collated on police officer injury rates following the introduction of incapacitating sprays; and if he will give such figures as are available on a police force basis. [44849]

Mr. Michael: CS sprays were first carried by police officers during operational trials in 16 forces between 1 March and 31 August 1996. Since then, an increasing number of forces have adopted the spray, and it is currently carried by officers in 40 forces in England and Wales. No force has introduced incapacitant sprays containing oleoresin capsicum.

It was found during the trials that there was little difference between trial and control locations in the risk officers experienced of sustaining injury requiring hospital attention. Officers in trial locations were slightly less likely than those in control areas to sustain other, more minor, injuries. The officers themselves were clear that carrying CS sprays significantly improved their safety.

There has been no subsequent evaluation carried out centrally of the effect of the introduction of CS sprays on officer injury rates. Overall statistics of assaults on officers may be affected by many factors. Statistics for 1995–96 and 1996–97 are as follows:

1. Serious assaults are those for which the charge would be under sections 18 and 20 Offences Against the Person Act 1861. Other assaults are those for which the charge would be under section 47 Offence Against the Persons Act, section 38 Offences Against the Person Act, sections 51(1) and 51(3) Police Act 1964 and section 39 Criminal Justice Act 1988

Firearms

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if registered firearms dealers will be permitted to act as referees for applicants for the granting or renewal of a firearm certificate under the Firearms Rules currently being prepared; and if he will make a statement. [45009]

Mr. Michael: The proposed new Firearms Rules will not permit registered firearms dealers to act as referees in applications for the grant or renewal of a firearm certificate. The Government have concluded that, despite the good character of registered firearms dealers, the risk of a conflict of commercial interest in endorsing an application could cast doubt on their impartiality.

The only exception to this rule will be when a firearm certificate holder is applying for renewal of a certificate in respect of a firearm held for target shooting. In his Report, Lord Cullen recommended that one of the referees in these circumstances should be an official of the target shooting club of which the applicant is a member, and the Rules will therefore provide that firearms dealers who are also club officials may act as referees in these particular circumstances.

Mr. Peter Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to settle claim Ref. NBRF 016830 under the terms of the Firearms Compensation Scheme. [45340]

Mr. Michael: The claim with the police reference number NBRF 016830 was received in the Firearms Compensation Section on 6 August 1997, and the Option A and B elements of the claim were processed on 12 November 1997. The Option C elements, which will require individual consideration of the evidence of value provided, will be dealt with as soon as possible. I outlined the timetable for these payments in the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Thanet, North (Mr. Gale) on 8 June 1998, Official Report, columns 438–39.

Mr. Peter Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the total of claims paid to handgun owners under option C of the Firearms Compensation Scheme; and if he will make a statement. [45387]

Mr. Michael: Payments amounting to £440,160 have so far been made to handgun owners under Option C of the compensation scheme. I outlined the timetable for these payments in the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Thanet, North (Mr. Gale) on 8 June 1998, Official Report, columns 438–39. These payments are in addition to the £2.6 million paid to firearms dealers under Option C, and the £49.4 million paid to owners and dealers under Options A and B of the scheme.

Special Advisers

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many special advisers, political advisers and other political appointees are working in his Department; at what annual cost to the public purse including recruitment costs, salaries, pensions and National Insurance contributions; and what was the position in the last full year of the last Government. [43322]

Mr. Straw: For details of the numbers of Special Advisers and the annual cost of employing them, I refer the hon. Member to the answer my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister gave to the hon. Member for Woodspring (Dr. Fox) on 11 June 1998, Official Report, column 664.

National Insurance contributions are excluded from the figures but are paid under the same rules and at the same rates as for other civil servants. Information on the paybill costs for Special Advisers within individual Departments is not provided in order to protect the privacy of the individuals concerned.

Information on the cost of employing Special Advisers in previous years was given by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster to the hon. Member for Gordon (Mr. Bruce) on 25 November 1997, Official Report, columns 472–73.

Electronic Monitoring

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if his officials have approved the Strategic Technologies' electronic tag system; and if it is currently in use. [45397]

Ms Quin: Strategic Technologies' system has not been approved by the Home Office for use in England and Wales.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the outcome of the test on the Strategic Technologies' electronic tag system. [45396]

Ms Quin: Strategic Technologies' design failed one element of the Home Office test. We understand that this is now being addressed by the manufacturer and that a new design may be submitted for acceptance testing in the near future.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if any offenders who have been tagged during the current trials have had an allergic reaction to the conductive loop tag system; and what research has been carried out into the cause. [45400]

Ms Quin: We are not aware of any offender having an allergic reaction to the electronic monitoring equipment used during the current trials.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many offenders who have been electronically tagged during the current trials have removed the tag without setting off the tamper alert mechanism; and what system was used. [45399]

Ms Quin: Of the 1,415 offenders tagged as of 8 June 1998, we are aware of three such cases. One was caused by an offender circumventing the strap of the equipment provided by Digital Products Corporation, which has since been withdrawn. The other cases were caused by critical medical information about the offender not being known to the contractor and an incorrect fitting.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what research his officials have conducted into the reliability of the conductive loop electronic tag system. [45398]

Ms Quin: All electronic monitoring equipment in England and Wales is tested, prior to its authorisation for use, against the technical criteria specified by the Home Office.

Forensic Science Inspectorate

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to establish a forensic science inspectorate; and if he will make a statement. [45359]

Mr. Michael: As my right hon. Friend indicated in the answer he gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Northampton, North (Ms Keeble) on 21 May 1998, Official Report, columns 449–50, the Government considered three sets of proposals for oversight of forensic science, including one by Professor Caddy recommending consideration of the establishment of an Inspectorate of Forensic Science Services. In light of the progress made in recent years by the forensic science industry to promote quality and standards, including the external accreditation of laboratories by the United Kingdom Accreditation Service and the British Standards Institution, we believe that the forensic science community's own proposals to establish a Registration Council for Forensic Practitioners offers the most practical way forward. The Government accordingly support the setting up of the Registration Council.

Members' Offices (Theft)

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many thefts from the offices of hon. Members have been recorded in (i) 1991, (ii) 1992, (iii) 1993, (iv) 1994, (v) 1995, (vi) 1996, (vii) 1997 and (viii) 1998. [45326]

Mr. Michael: The figures have been supplied by the Palace of Westminster authorities and relate to recorded offences of theft specifically from the offices of hon. and right hon. Members. Figures for 1998 are not yet available.

Year	Number

Private Prison Operators

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on how many occasions private prison operators have been fined for breaking contract conditions; if he will give details; and if he will make a statement. [45618]

Ms Quin: There have been four occasions on which payments have been withheld from the fees paid to the contractors running privately managed prisons, as shown in the table.

Payments withheld from contractors running privately managed prisons

Prison	Date	Amount £	Circumstances
Blakenhurst	February 1994	41,167	Temporary reduction in cell availability
Buckley Hall	February 1997	526	Reduction in payments due to failure to meet performance standards
Parc	April 1998	54,782	Non-reporting of incident
Altcourse	May 1998	28,088	Reduction in payments due to failure to meet performance standards

Animal Refuges and Sanctuaries

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to introduce the (a) registration, (b) regulation and (c) inspection of animals in refuges and sanctuaries. [45553]

Mr. George Howarth: There are no plans to introduce specific controls in respect of animal refuges and sanctuaries. The welfare of all domestic and captive animals is provided for in the Protection of Animals Act 1911, under which it is a criminal offence to cause any unnecessary suffering to such animals.

Police

Sir Norman Fowler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many police constables are currently employed in the police service in England and Wales; and if he will make a statement; [45176]

(2) what is the current police officer strength of the police service in England and Wales; and if he will make a statement; [45177]

(3) how many civilians, including traffic wardens and caterers, are employed in the police service; and if he will make a statement. [45185]

Mr. Michael [holding answer 11 June 1998]: Provisional figures supplied by the police, which are subject to validation, show that there was a total of 98,212 police constables as at 31 March 1998. The total police service strength was 126,769. The civilian strength, which includes contract catering staff, was 57,397, including 3,790 traffic wardens.

Ministers have no direct control over police numbers. Under the Police and Magistrates' Courts Act passed by the previous Government in 1994, it is for individual chief constables to determine the number of police officers in their force area, within the resources available to them.

Breathalyser Tests

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many breathalyser tests were conducted by police forces in England and Wales for each month in the last 10 years; and how many people failed. [45677]

Mr. Michael: The information requested is published annually in Home Office Statistical Bulletins "Breath Test Statistics, England and Wales", copies of which are in the Library.

Prison Visitors (Drugs)

Mr. Pearson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will estimate the number of visitors to prisons who were arrested by the police in connection with possible drug-related offences in the last year who were subsequently charged with an offence. [45328]

Mr. George Howarth [holding answer 11 June 1998]: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave him on 8 June 1998, Official Report, column 439.

Police and Fire Services (Pensions)

Mr. David Heath: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to review pension arrangements for the police and fire services. [44245]

Mr. George Howarth: Consultation documents on the police and fire service pension schemes were published on 31 March of this year. We have invited comments by 31 July on the issues raised in the documents. We will take careful account of the comments we receive when we come to consider any changes to the pension arrangements for new entrants to the police and fire services and to medical retirement procedures.

Drink Licensing Laws

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he plans to introduce legislation to amend the alcoholic drink licensing laws. [45966]

Mr. George Howarth: The Government's liquor licensing review will aim to produce general proposals, for discussion and comment, on how to modernise the present licensing regime. It is too early to set a timetable for legislation.

Animals (Scientific Procedures)

Mr. David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when his Department last inspected the Harlan UK animal breeding establishment at Belton in north west Leicestershire; with what results; and how it ensures that the treatment of animals bred at this establishment conforms to the highest standards of animal welfare (a) at the breeding stage and (b) for the rest of their lives. [44240]

Mr. George Howarth: The use of protected animals in scientific procedures is controlled by the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986.

All establishments designated under the terms of section 6 or 7 of the Act must comply with the terms and conditions of their Certificate of Designation and meet the standards set out in published Codes of Practice. All regulated procedures, including the breeding of transgenic animals, must be authorised in a project licence and all those carrying out the procedures must hold appropriate personal licence authorities.

Inspectors visit all establishments, on both an announced and an unannounced basis, to ensure that the terms and conditions of licences and certificates are being met.

Animals which have been used in procedures normally remain under the control and protection of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 for their lifetime. Discharge from these controls must be authorised by the Secretary of State and is considered only if a veterinary surgeon has certified that the animal is unlikely to suffer any adverse effects as a result of any procedure it has been involved in.

The Protection of Animals Act 1911 also provides for the welfare of laboratory, and other animals.

The establishment in question was last inspected on 4 June 1998. The visit lasted for five hours. No material departures from the standards set out in the Codes of Practice, or from the terms and conditions of the Certificate and licences, were found.

Feltham Young Offenders Institution

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many hours per day (a) 15 and (b) 16 year old inmates of Feltham Young Offenders' Institution spend locked in their cells. [43361]

Ms Quin: The Prison Service records time prisoners spend unlocked as a Key Performance Indicator. Time out of cell is not recorded by age group, but is dependent on location and status. At Feltham, the average time out of cell for juveniles on the remand unit holding 15 and 16 year olds varies from 2 to 8 hours for weekdays. The average time out of cell for juveniles on the convicted units holding 15 and 16 year olds varies between five and eight and a half hours out of cell for weekdays. The table shows how this time out of cell varies with the type of regime a juvenile is placed on.

Feltham: Time out of cell 15 and 16 year olds (weekdays)

Hours

	Basic regime	Standard regime	Enhanced regime
Remand over school age	2	4	9
Remand under school age	4	6	9
Sentenced (employed/USLA')	6	8	10
Sentenced (unemployed)	2	6	10

USLA = under school leaving age

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

"Excellence for all Children"

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when he expects to publish his Department's response to the consultation on the Green Paper "Excellence for all Children". [45972]

Ms Estelle Morris: There have been many thoughtful comments on the Green Paper. Taking account of those, and of advice from the National Advisory Group on Special Educational Needs, we expect to publish an action programme in the early autumn.

Schools Access Initiative

Mr. Terry Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how much money has been allocated to Birmingham under the Schools Access Initiative in each year of its operation. [45766]

Ms Estelle Morris: Birmingham Local Education Authority has been allocated £135,000 in financial year 1996–97, £75,000 in 1997–98 and £175,000 for 1998–99 as supplementary credit approvals under the Schools Access Initiative.

Departmental Employees

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many people are employed by his Department who are aged between 16 and 21 years, broken down by year, and of those how many are paid (a) less than £3.60 and (b) between £3.60 and £4.00 an hour. [44304]

Dr. Howells: The number of people employed by the Department are as follows:

Age	Total employed
19	13

Following implementation of the DfEE 1998 pay offer, effective from 1 April 1998, nobody employed by the Department will be paid less than £4.00 an hour.

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many people are currently employed in (a) his Department, (b) advisory bodies and (c) executive agencies responsible to his Department; and what the comparable figures were on 1 May 1997 or the nearest available date. [44303]

Dr. Howells: Information on the number of people employed in the DfEE and the Employment Service can be found in Annexe F of the Department's Annual Report (Cm 3910). A copy of this Report is available in the Library. There are no staff employed in advisory bodies.

Student Loans

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what were the costs of (a) fees, (b) expenses and (c) other items paid to N. M. Rothschild and Lovell White Durrant in the course of the sale of the first tranche of student loan debt; and if he will make a statement on the nature of the financial agreements to facilitate the sale of the second tranche of debt. [45638]

Dr. Howells: Contractual arrangements, including fees paid and expenses reimbursed, in respect of advice received from N. M. Rothschild and Sons and Lovell White Durrant during the first student loan debt sale are a matter of commercial confidence.

Rothschilds have been appointed to advise us during the second debt sale following a competitive tendering process carried out under EC directives. Lovell White Durrant's appointment as commercial legal advisers was renewed on the basis of their experience and expertise developed during the first debt sale. The financial arrangements and other terms and conditions under which both advisers have been appointed are again a matter of commercial confidence.

Standard Assessment Tests

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the national aggregate of the percentages of all maintained 11 year old pupils who are to attain Level 4 or better at Key Stage 2 in English by the year 2002 according to the targets agreed with the Government by each local education authority (a) on current pupil numbers per local education authority for 1998 and (b) on projected pupil numbers per local education authority for 2002; and if he will list the numbers of pupils per local education authority in each case. [43107]

Ms Estelle Morris: The national target for 2002 is 80 per cent. The targets agreed with each LEA will achieve that. The numbers of pupils in each LEA who took the 1997 Key Stage 2 English test are shown. The Department does not produce projected pupil numbers by age for each local authority.

Disabled People

Ms Keeble: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the total budget for capitation grants for disabled people in supported employment placements. [45322]

Mr. Alan Howarth: The total budget for 1998–99 for the supported employment grant, which is paid to Local Authorities and Voluntary Bodies, is £56.7 million.

Mr. Cotter: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what definition of disability will be used when assessing people as eligible for the training provisions set out under the Welfare to Work package; and if he will make a statement. [44979]

Mr. Alan Howarth: The New Deal for 18–24 year olds allows young people with disabilities who are claiming Jobseeker's Allowance (JSA) to choose to join the programme early. The definition of disability used for this purpose is that contained within the Disability Discrimination Act 1995.

To be eligible for the New Deal for Disabled People programme, disabled people and those with a long term illness must be claiming Incapacity Benefit, Income Support with a Disability Premium or Severe Disablement Allowance, or be at risk of moving onto those benefits as a result of a long term illness or disability.

Nursery Classes

Mr. St. Aubyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate his Department has made of the average number of children in each pre-year 1 nursery class in maintained schools in the most recent year for which information is available. [44985]

Ms Estelle Morris [holding answer 10 June 1998]: The average size of reception classes in mainland primary schools in England was 25.8 in January 1998.

Child Care

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment which of his Ministers has the lead responsibility for child care issues. [45793]

Mr. Alan Howarth: I have the lead responsibility for the National Childcare Strategy in England. I work closely with Ministerial colleagues within the Department for Education and Employment and elsewhere, including the Ministers for Women. I also work closely with Ministerial colleagues in the Scottish Office, the Welsh Office and the Northern Ireland Office who are each launching their own child care consultations focusing on the particular issues in those parts of the United Kingdom.

Access to Work (Wheelchairs)

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what proportion of the money spent during the past five years for financial assistance to purchase wheelchairs through Access to Work has been spent on (a) indoor/outdoor powered wheelchairs and (b) manual wheelchairs. [44679]

Mr. Alan Howarth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its Chief Executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Peter Collis to Mrs. Theresa May, dated 15 June 1998:

The Secretary of State for Education and Employment has asked Leigh Lewis to reply to your question about the financial assistance given towards the purchase of wheelchairs through the Access to Work programme during the past five years. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to Mr. Lewis as the Chief Executive of the Employment Service. I am replying in his absence.

I am afraid that we do not hold information centrally on the number of grants made under Access to Work for wheelchairs or their cost. I attach a table detailing expenditure under Access to Work over the last five years broken down by the main categories of expenditure. Expenditure on wheelchairs falls within the Special Aids and Equipment category.

I am sorry I cannot be more helpful.

New Deal (Foyer Organisations)

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list those Foyer organisations currently contracted to provide (a) the Gateway service, (b) services to the unemployed and (c) other services in the delivery of the New Deal. [45096]

Mr. Andrew Smith [holding answer 9 June 1998]: The following Foyer organisations have contracted directly with the Employment Service to provide Gateway services to New Deal clients. All of these contracts offer services to the unemployed in the delivery of the New Deal.

Camberwell Foyer
Sheffield Foyer
St. Helens Foyer
Western Foyer
Swindon Foyer
Yeovil Foyer
Darlington Foyer[1]
Ipswich Foyer[1]
Cambridge Foyer[1]
Lincolnshire Foyer[1]

[1] As part of local consortia

Organisations contracted to the Employment Service to deliver elements of the New Deal may themselves enter into sub-contracts with other organisations. Information on such sub-contracts is available only locally and is not held centrally. Foyers holding such sub-contracts may not be included in the list.

EU Structural Funds

Ms Jenny Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what method of scoring was used to assess the 1998 bids for funding under Objective 3 of the European Social Fund programme. [44418]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Key principles of the 1998 Objective 3 scoring process were that it should be impartial and transparent, with the aim of selecting the best quality projects which met the needs of the Objective 3 client groups. Selection criteria and a scoring framework were developed in consultation with regional partners, and endorsed by the Objective 3 National Monitoring Committee.

Projects were assessed against four main areas: labour market justification, integration, beneficiary analysis and outcomes. Each region also had flexibility to influence the scoring process to reflect regional aims and priorities.

Ms Jenny Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the definition of unemployed for the purposes of the bids for funding under Objective 3 of the 1998 European Social Fund's programme. [44419]

Mr. Andrew Smith: For the purposes of the European Social Fund (ESF), the general definition of unemployment is a period where a person is not in paid employment. Registration with the Employment Service is not required as evidence of unemployment. A more detailed definition of unemployment is in the ESF 1998 Applications Guidance part 1, which is available in the Library.

Ms Jenny Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how the scoring of bids for funding under Objective 3 of the 1998 European Social Fund's programme was monitored for accuracy. [44426]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Objective 3 Regional Committees and the Committees for Scotland, Wales and Gibraltar are responsible for the implementation of Objective 3 in their areas, in line with the Single Programming Document for Great Britain. A sub-committee of the Great Britain Monitoring Committee deals with national projects.

Regional and national scoring panels held standard setting exercises and took steps to maintain standards and to moderate scores. Scorers operated in pairs and switched around regularly. Some projects were re-scored by different scorers to ensure consistency in approach. Panel chairs ensured the impartiality and veracity of the process.

Applicants were informed of their scores and were given the opportunity to challenge them, and to appeal formally against the decision of the relevant Committee or GB National Monitoring Committee.

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment he has made of his Department's preparedness to meet the 1 January 2000 start date for the Agenda 2000 Structural Fund Programme. [43838]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Negotiation of the Commission's proposed Regulations for the Structural Funds in the period 2000 to 2006 have begun during the UK Presidency of the EU. Good progress is being made. It is too early to determine the detailed implementation of the new Funds but my Department will be ready to administer the European Social Fund from its agreed start date.

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what proposals he has to speed up payments to voluntary sector organisations running projects under the European Social Fund. [43846]

Mr. Andrew Smith: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave on 27 March 1998, Official Report, column 337.

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what the costs were in each year since 1990 of administering European Structural Fund programmes in England. [43840]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The figures in the table show the running costs of the European Social Fund in the Department for Education and Employment, and include some costs associated with the administration of ESF in Scotland and Wales which it is not possible to identify separately. The increase since 1990 is due to the increase in the sums administered in Great Britain and to the increasing complexity of the work involved.

European social fund unit: running costs budget

Year
1990–91	0.531
1991–92	0.808
1992–93	1.410
1993–94	1.701
1994–95	2.212
1995–96	2.387
1997–98	2.705

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many permanent and short-term staff are employed by his Department to administer (a) the European Social Fund, (b) the European Regional Development Fund and (c) other European Structural Fund programmes in the United Kingdom.

[43845]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The Department for Education and Employment Head Office currently has 87.6 permanent staff in post on the administration of the European Social Fund (ESF). It also has 30 short term staff in post to cope with peaks in workload, equivalent to 12.5 full-time posts averaged over the whole year. None of our full-time staff is involved in the administration of the European Regional Development Fund, but about 0.5 per cent. of a permanent post is involved in policy matters.

The equivalent of approximately 40 full time posts from this Department are funded by the DfEE in the Government Offices for the regions on the administration of the European Structural Fund programmes.

HEALTH

Emergency Contraception

Mr. Li[illegible]one: To ask the Secretary of State for Health w[illegible]plans he has to make emergency contraception more widely available in the United Kingdom. [43702]

Ms Jowell: As a prescription only medicine under United Kingdom and European Community legislation, the emergency contraceptive pill is currently available from general practitioners, family planning clinics, some accident and emergency units and many genito-urinary clinics. Currently no applications have been received to reclassify the product to allow wider availability.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the cost of emergency contraception on the National Health Service in each of the last five years. [43489]

Ms Jowell [holding answer 10 June 1998]: The information is not available in the form requested.

The number of National Health Service prescriptions for hormonal emergency contraception dispensed in England, and the cost of those drugs (excluding dispensing costs and fees), for the past five years is:

Year	Prescription items	Net ingredient costs (£)
1993	313,300	450,800
1994	363,800	520,800
1995	475,400	678,500
1996	565,600	900,200
1997	552,800	897,700

Excluded from these figures are occasions on which post-coital contraception was obtained via a family planning clinic service. These are (corresponding costs are not held):

Year	Prescription items
1992–93	68,600
1993–94	82,800
1994–95	102,200
1995–96	145,300
1996–97	174,900

In addition, intrauterine devices may be used as a form of post-coital contraceptive. Comprehensive figures for their use or costs are not held centrally.

Independent Advocacy

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what contribution he plans that (a) professional and (b) voluntary citizens' advocacy will make to improving access to services by people with learning difficulties and people with acute mental health difficulties. [44338]

Mr. Boateng: We attach great importance to advocacy for people with learning disabilities and people with acute mental health problems, and provide central government funding for the voluntary sector in this area. We have also issued guidance to health authorities and social services which includes the need to consider making appropriate arrangements for independent advocacy.

Complementary Medicine

Mr. Tredinnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the role of complementary medicine organisations in the proposed network of healthy living centres. [44375]

Ms Jowell: The aim of the healthy living centres initiative is to target areas containing the most deprived sections of the population in order to reduce health inequalities and improve the health of the worst off in society. Within this context proposals for local healthy living centres could include the provision of complementary therapies if they would contribute to achieving local health priorities. These would need to be evaluated for effectiveness.

Wheelchair Service

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will announce what input users will have into the new national service frameworks for the wheelchair service. [44669]

Mr. Boateng: The initial programme of national service frameworks will take forward the existing frameworks for cancer and paediatric intensive care and will begin to develop new frameworks for mental health and coronary heart disease. Suggestions for the next phase of the programme are welcome. However, there will usually be only one topic every year.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what specific guidelines have been issued by his Department or the NHS Executive on the procedures to be followed by health authorities and NHS trusts for consultation with user groups of the wheelchair service; and if he will set out those guidelines. [44663]

Mr. Boateng: When National Health Service provision of electrically powered indoor/outdoor wheelchairs was introduced in 1996 the NHS Executive issued guidelines which stated that users and their representative groups should be involved in the development of local eligibility criteria. These guidelines, and the guidelines issued when the wheelchair voucher scheme was introduced in the same year, also encouraged wheelchair services to use, or consult, the specialist staff of voluntary disability organisations who may have particular expertise in dealing with people with specific disabilities.

A series of national and regional conferences has promoted the involvement of users and their representatives in the development, monitoring and evaluation of wheelchair services.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what arrangements have been made to ensure that funding for the wheelchair voucher scheme which has been carried over to the financial year 1998–99 (a) remains ring-fenced and (b) is not diverted to mainstream wheelchair provision which is not ring-fenced. [44661]

Mr. Boateng: No funding made available for the wheelchair voucher scheme in 1997–98 was carried over to 1998–99.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what specific guidelines have been issued by his Department or the NHS Executive on the procedures for users chairing user groups on the wheelchair service. [44668]

Mr. Boateng: No such guidelines have been issued. The procedures adopted by user groups are for the group themselves to determine in the light of the activities which they wish to pursue.

However, the Department's national user involvement project seeks to increase the involvement of people who use community services in decisions made about what services are offered. In 1996 the project published "Community Service Users as Consultants and Trainers", a guide to user participation in community care planning.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what arrangements his Department has made to monitor how funding is spent in the event of an underspend of (a) the indoor/outdoor powered wheelchair funding scheme and (b) the voucher funding scheme. [44662]

Mr. Boateng: Spending on the indoor/outdoor powered wheelchair funding schemes and the voucher funding scheme for manual wheelchairs is monitored centrally through the routine quarterly return process. In 1997–98, following evidence of a potential underspend on wheelchair vouchers, action was taken to ensure that the money was retained in the wheelchair service and used to provide chairs for more patients.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what consultations were held with groups in advance of communication of the Health Service Circular, wheelchair voucher scheme: funding in 1997–98 and 1998–99 (HSC 1998–004); and if he will list the groups consulted. [44660]

Mr. Boateng: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Wentworth (Mr. Healey) on 4 June 1998, Official Report, column 336.

Paediatric Cardiac Unit (Bristol Royal Infirmary)

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what will be the start date of the period to be covered by the inquiry he is considering into events at the paediatric cardiac unit at the Bristol Royal Infirmary. [44578]

Mr. Milburn: We have made clear our commitment to holding an inquiry into the paediatric cardiac surgery services at the United Bristol Healthcare National Health Service Trust prior to 1996. The exact form, timing and scope of the inquiry and the membership of the inquiry team are currently under consideration. A final decision will be announced after the General Medical Council have completed their proceedings later this month.

Care Homes

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the care homes with education currently in operation in London and the South East; and how many have closed in the last five years. [45012]

Mr. Boateng: The information requested as at 31 March 1997 is in the table. Information on the closure of homes is not held centrally.

Paediatric Nose and Throat Operations

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list by health authority or trusts the average waiting time for paediatric nose and throat operations after referral to a consultant. [45013]

Mr. Milburn: The information requested is not available centrally, since waiting times information is collected only by medical specialty.

Food Poisoning

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what statistics are collated by (a) the Government and (b) the European Commission on incidents of food poisoning in each EU member state; and if he will publish them. [45118]

Ms Jowell [holding answer 9 June 1998]: The Public Health Laboratory Service (PHLS) collates statutory food poisoning notifications, data on laboratory confirmed cases of gastrointestinal infection and outbreak data on foodborne illness in humans in England and Wales. This information is published in PHLS's Communicable Disease Report (CDR), copies of which are available in the Library.

The European Union does not routinely collect such information. The Scientific Co-operation Directive has a number of initiatives in hand to identify the sources of communicable disease surveillance data within Member States. The Commission supports the publication "Eurosurveillance" which provides data from surveillance networks in Member States, copies of which are available in the Library. PHLS is part of the "Enter-net" on international surveillance network which involves 15 countries within the EU. The network allows the exchange of information on reported cases of enteric infection due to Salmonella and verocytotoxin producing Escherichia coli between the countries involved. Information on "Enter-net" can be found in CDR.

Consultants (Discretionary Points)

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will instruct trust boards to publicise which consultants have discretionary points. [45274]

Mr. Milburn: Discretionary points are decided and funded locally by the National Health Service employer, and it will be for the individual employer to decide whether to publish this information.

Cancer Services

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what arrangements he has agreed to implement the Calman/Hine recommendations for cancer services in the North Thames Region of the National Health Service. [45297]

Mr. Boateng: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave on 14 May 1998, Official Report, columns 206–07.

Health Quality Service

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what are the terms of the contract between the King's Fund and the NHS to provide Health Quality Services; and to whom the surveyors are contracted; [45411]

(2) if the Health Quality Service surveyors are wholly employed by the National Health Service and seconded to the survey; how many days a week on average they work for the survey; what are their qualifications; and how many of them there are; [45405]

(3) how many health trusts and authorities will be surveyed by the Health Quality Service survey; and if the survey will be extended to private sector hospitals; [45404]

(4) what is the budgeted cost to the NHS of the Health Quality Service surveyors. [45407]

Mr. Milburn: The Health Quality Service is independent of Government. There is no central contract between the King's Fund and the National Health Service to provide Health Quality Services, and the number of NHS and private sector organisations surveyed, the terms under which this work is carried out and the terms under which surveyors are engaged are matters for the Health Quality Service and those organisations which engage its services. No estimate has been made of the cost to the NHS of Health Quality Service surveyors.

Bed and Breakfasts (Food Poisoning)

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many reports his Department has received in each of the past five years of cases of food poisoning originating in unlicensed bed and breakfast establishments in England and Wales. [45374]

Ms Jowell: Information on sporadic cases of food poisoning originating in unlicensed bed and breakfast establishments is not available centrally. Current outbreak data is not detailed enough to identify information on food poisoning incidents from these types of establishments. Information on general outbreaks of food poisoning is published quarterly in the Communicable Disease Report, copies of which are available in the Library.

Medical Treatment (Ex-gratia Payments)

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance he has given to health authorities on the circumstances in which they can make ex-gratia payments to patients whose health has suffered as a result of medical treatment; and if health authorities are entitled to make such payments to women who have suffered permanent injury after having been in receipt of radiotherapy treatment for breast cancer. [45266]

Mr. Boateng: Specific guidance on clinical negligence claims handling has been issued by the National Health Service Executive in Executive Letter (96) 11, copies of which have been placed in the Library.

Health authorities may make ex-gratia payments in accordance with this guidance.

Health Services Accreditation

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many expressions of interest have been received for the disposal of Health Services Accreditation; [45412]

(2) whether National Audit Office criteria for the disposal of a state-owned function apply to Health Services Accreditation; [45413]

(3) whether Health Service Guidelines NHS Trading Agencies: Future Arrangements No HSC(94)54 Annex B by Price Waterhouse on the disposal process applies to Health Services Accreditation. [45414]

Mr. Milburn: Both the National Audit Office criteria for the disposal of a state owned function and the Health Service Guidelines "NHS Trading Agencies: Future Arrangements" Health Service Circular (94)54 are being applied wherever they are applicable to the disposal of Health Service Accreditation.

As the process of disposal is underway, the exact number of expressions of interest is commercially sensitive information.

Runaway Children

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many children in England he estimates ran away from home last year; and if he will make a statement. [45213]

Mr. Boateng: Information is not available centrally in the form requested. However, I refer my hon. Friend to the reply on the same issue given by my hon. Friend the Minister of State, Home Office on 6 April 1998, Official Report, column 27.

General Practitioners

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the balance between supply and demand of GPs in the National Health Service in the next three years. [45478]

Mr. Milburn: We are advised on these matters by the Specialty Workforce Advisory Group (SWAG). SWAG balances a range of factors in considering the numbers of doctors in training to meet future requirements, including the overall supply of junior doctors and healthcare needs across the whole of the National Health Service.

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures he proposes to take to encourage the recruitment of GPs to the NHS. [45479]

Mr. Milburn: Measures have been put in place to encourage the recruitment of general practitioners to the National Health Service.

These include changes to the out-of-hours arrangements for GPs which impact on the quality of their working life, making it easier for them to combine work and family life.

Flexible employment opportunities such as the salaried GP scheme and an improved retainer scheme to encourage GPs to return after career breaks have been introduced. These are especially important given the numbers of women entering general practice and the need to provide alternatives to the independent contractor GP model of employment.

The introduction of Primary Care Act (Personal Medical Services) Pilots and flexibilities to the national GP contract given GPs scope to shape the range of services they provide and increase the attractiveness of general practice as a career choice.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many PFI projects his Department has put out to re-tender during the last year; and what is their combined value. [45469]

Mr. Milburn: No Private Finance Initiative projects with a capital value of more than £10 million have been put out to re-tender since 1 May 1997.

Details on individual schemes with a capital cost of less than £10 million are not held centrally.

Children in Care

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many children were in care in England and Wales on 1 June. [45446]

Mr. Boateng: There were 51,200 children looked after in England at 31 March 1996, which is the latest date for which such statistics are available. Figures for the year ending 31 March 1997 are due to be published in July 1998. Figures for Wales are the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

Child Developmental Checks

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many health authorities carry out 18 to 24 month developmental checks on (a) a selective basis and (b) all children; [45718]

(2) pursuant to his answer of 1 June 1998, Official Report, column 130, if the guidance issued by his Department recommends that 18 to 24 month developmental checks should be carried out on all children. [45717]

Mr. Boateng: The Department's guidance recommends that developmental checks are carried out on all children aged 18–24 months, as part of a core programme of child health surveillance. We do not monitor its implementation by health authority. However, in 1997 94 per cent. of general practitioners were involved in arranging for these checks to be carried out.

Needle Exchanges

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance her Department has issued to NHS trusts concerning the location of needle exchanges and local drug rehabilitation facilities. [45441]

Ms Jowell: Guidance sent to health authorities in 1988 and 1992 about the provision of needle exchange schemes notes that the geographic location of a scheme will influence its ability to attract and retain clients. The guidance says that schemes should be set up in areas which have a high prevalence of injecting drug misuse. When selecting a site, consideration should be given to the proximity of local residences, the preservation of clients' anonymity, and the ease with which clients will be able to use the scheme. However, it is for the local health authority, local authority and providers of services to decide what is appropriate for local circumstances. Copies of Health Circular (88)53 and Executive Letter (92)47 are available in the Library.

The Department has not issued any guidance on the location of drug rehabilitation schemes. The location of these services is also for local decision.

Leeds Health Authority

Mr. Truswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what share Leeds Health Authority has received of the (a) £300 million to address winter pressures, (b) £1.2 billion allocation, (c) £500 million to reduce waiting lists, (d) funding for districts facing major organisational change and (e) other special allocations for 1998–99. [45758]

Mr. Milburn: The information requested is set out in the table:

	(1) Total for England	(2) Allocation to Leeds HA cash
(a) winter pressures[1]	159,000	3,089
(b) HA revenue allocations growth 1998–99[2]	1,028,000	15,900
(c) waiting lists[3]	288,000	4,276
(d) special assistance (funding for HAs facing organisational change)	47,600	6,500
(e) other special allocations for 1998–99[4]	1,971,517	24,917

[1] Of the £300 million made available to the National Health Service for winter pressures, £269 million was for the NHS in England. £159 million was allocated to health authorities, £30 million was generated through efficiency savings and £80 million was used to fund Family Health Services expenditure, including the Drugs Bill.

[2] Of the £1.2 billion allocated to the NHS last July, £1 billion was for the NHS in England.

[3] Of the £500 million made available to the NHS for waiting lists, £417 million was for the NHS in England. £288 million is to be used for direct elective admissions, £32 million will be used on performance indicators and £65 million will be used on "whole system" action to reduce waiting lists. No decisions have yet been made about the remaining £32 million.

Leeds Health Authority will also be able to bid for funds from the £65 million announced in Health Services Circular 1998–2006 for "whole system" action to support reductions in waiting lists.

[4] Special allocations are funds for specific services allocated to health authorities through a weighted capitation formula or by another method specific to that allocation.

For 1998–99 these cover—

General Medical Services cash limited
Out of hours development fund
Joint finance
Drug misuse
HIV prevention
AIDS treatment and care
Old long stay.

Carers

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will issue guidance to commissioners on how best to undertake local needs assessment and planning, including carers needs, to inform local health improvement programmes; [45734]

(2) if he will issue further guidance to health authorities and primary care groups on the partnership strategies that should be adopted in relation to parents and carers; and how their representation is to be secured in the commissioning process; [45733]

(3) if, in response to the report Ignored and Invisible: Carers Experiences of the NHS, he will strengthen guidance to health authorities, trusts and primary health care teams on implementing the Carers (Recognition and Services) Act 1995; [45732]

(4) what plans he has to implement the recommendations contained in the report Ignored and Invisible: Carers Experiences of the NHS. [45735]

Mr. Boateng: My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister announced on 10 June that I will be leading a Government-wide review of measures to help carers as part of a national strategy for carers. Our strategy will bring together a range of existing initiatives and policies from across Government and will also examine how the problems faced by carers could be tackled by new initiatives and policies. It is too early to say what the outcome of our review will be, but the report "Ignored and Invisible?" will be a real help in identifying areas where there is a need for change. We will be setting up an independent group for carers' organisations and others to give advice to Ministers and policy makers and expect to consult on the strategy early in 1999.

Whittington Hospital

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will announce the form of expansion of the Whittington Hospital; what proportion of the expenditure will come from public sources; and if he will make a statement. [45393]

Mr. Milburn: The Whittington Hospital National Health Service Trust is presently working on its strategy for developing services on the site. This will help to determine the extent and nature of the redevelopment needed, and to ensure that the investment provides an appropriate solution for the future.

Health Action Zones

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to declare Camden and Islington a health action zone. [45386]

Mr. Milburn: I have invited 34 areas, including Camden and Islington, to submit an expression of interest in applying for the second wave of Health Action Zones. From these will be selected the candidates to join the 11 Health Action Zones from the first wave. It is too early to say if Camden and Islington will form part of the second wave.

Homicide Inquiries

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answers of 16 February 1998, Official Report, columns 494–95, 13 March 1998, Official Report, column 377, and 5 June 1998, Official Report, column 407, if he will provide a complete list of all inquiries currently under way which have been established under HSG(94)27, giving the full title of each inquiry, the commissioning authority in each case, the name of the chairperson in each case and, where known, the likely reporting date of each inquiry. [45639]

Mr. Boateng: A complete list of inquiries currently under way is shown in the table.

Titles of inquiries are not always available until publication but a recognised format is as follows:

"Report of the Independent Inquiry Team into the care and treatment of X (name)".

There are now 25 inquiries under way.

Homelessness

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many children he estimates are in homeless households; and if he will make a statement. [45209]

Mr. Raynsford: I have been asked to reply.

In the fourth quarter of 1997 about 60 per cent. of the households for whom local authorities accepted responsibility to secure accommodation (under the homelessness provisions of the 1985 and 1996 Housing Acts) included one or more dependent children.

The available data on the numbers of children are as follows:

	Number
Total number of households accepted as homeless	24,810
Of which:
households with dependent children
1 child	6,470
2 children	4,540
3 or more children	3,390
	14,400

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

EU Structural Funds

Ms Atherton: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what the population is of each UK region currently receiving Objective 1 structural funds from the European Union. [45302]

Mrs. Roche: The estimated population figures for 1995 are:

	Population
Highlands and Islands	373,000
Merseyside	1,427,200
Northern Ireland	1,649,000

Note:
The Highlands and Islands Objective 1 area corresponds to the Highlands and Islands Enterprise area.

Acquired Rights Directive

Mr. Boswell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement (a) on the Government's policy towards the Süzen Judgment in connection with the Acquired Rights Directive and (b) on the European Council's recent consideration of proposed changes to the Directive. [45998]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The UK Presidency achieved a notable success at a Council of Ministers meeting in Luxembourg on 4 June in securing Member States' agreement to a revision of this Directive. Amongst other improvements, the revised Directive will include a new broad definition of a transfer of an undertaking. This draws on the European Court's judgments in Süzen and other leading cases, without relying on any of them exclusively, in order to clarify the Directive's scope without in any way diminishing employees' existing rights. As we indicated in our "Fairness at Work" White Paper, the Government intend to amend the UK's implementing legislation, the Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) Regulations 1981 (commonly known as the TUPE Regulations), in order to improve its operation. The revision of the Directive gives us a much sounder basis for doing so than would otherwise have been the case.

Restrictive Practices

Mr. Boswell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will list all registered restrictive practice agreements involving trade associations. [44984]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 9 June 1998]: The Restrictive Trade Practices Act 1976 requires the Director General of Fair Trading to maintain a public register of qualifying agreements. The register is open to the public. For convenience I am asking him to write to the hon. Member to provide the information requested, and place a copy of that information in the Library of the House.

Local Authorities (Pilot Schemes)

Mr. Burstow: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will list the pilot schemes announced since 1 May by her Department that involve local authorities in a lead or partnership capacity; if she will list each of the local authorities involved in each case; and what revenue and capital funding each local authority will receive through the pilot in (i) 1997–98, (ii) 1998–99, (iii) 1999–2000 and (iv) 2000–2001. [45336]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 11 June 1998]: The DTI has announced no pilot schemes since 1 May 1997 that involve local authorities in a lead or partnership capacity.

Utilities Regulation

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will list those organisations which have submitted a formal response to the Green Paper on utilities regulation. [45039]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 11 June 1998]: Over 200 representations have been received in response to the Utility Review Green Paper. A full list of those that have submitted representations will be published when the conclusions of the review are announced.

Investors in People

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement on progress towards attaining Investors in People Awards of (a) employment tribunals, (b) the Insolvency Service, (c) the Radiocommunications Agency and (d) the Patent Office; when she estimates each will achieve accreditation; and if she will make a statement on the role of Investors in People within her Department. [44928]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: The Department, the Employment Tribunals Service, the Insolvency Service, the Radiocommunications Agency and the Patent Office all aim to meet the target set by the Development and Training White Paper (Cm 3321) that by the year 2000 all civil servants will be employed in organisations recognised as Investors in People.

All have made a written commitment to meeting the Investors in People standard. The headquarters Department will be seeking assessment later this year, the Employment Tribunals Service in September 1998, and Radiocommunications Agency in January 1999. The Insolvency Service is currently working towards assessment in December 1998. The Patent Office is currently in the process of assessment.

My right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade and I strongly support the emphasis which Investors in People places on training and developing all staff, and see the journey towards recognition as making an important contribution towards best practice in management in the Department.

Competition Act

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what discussions her Department had with the Office of Fair Trading concerning the publication of "A Guide to the Major Provisions of the Competition Act 1998". [45170]

Mr. Ian McCartney: My officials have been in regular contact with their counterparts in the OFT about the guidelines that are to be published under clause 52 of the Competition Bill, including the draft of the one on the major provisions of the Competition Act 1998.

Indonesia

Ann Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will list the (a) British and (b) Indonesian companies involved in the Cikampek to Padalarang Toll Road project in Indonesia; what expenditure has been (i) allocated and (ii) incurred by her Department to date; what is the state of progress with the project; and if she will make a statement. [44982]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 9 June 1998]: In 1987 the DTI offered Cementation International Ltd. and Cleveland Bridge Engineering Ltd. (then part of Trafalgar House Construction International Ltd. and now part of the Kvaerner Group), Overseas Project Fund assistance of £198,000 towards their pre-contractual costs in pursuing the project. All this financial assistance was spent by the companies in pursuit of the project by July 1989. Trafalgar House International Ltd. formed a joint venture with PT Yala Perkasa International, an Indonesian company, to design and construct the toll road.

I am informed that progress with this project has been delayed for environmental, administrative and financial reasons.

Ann Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will list the foreign direct investments by UK companies in Indonesia which have been cancelled, suspended or reviewed by the Indonesian Government in the last 12 months (a) as a condition of the IMF assistance programme, (b) as a result of links with the family of former President Suharto and (c) for any other reason, in each case specifying the reason and stating the nature and value of the investment and the expenditure incurred to date; and if she will make a statement. [44983]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 9 June 1998]: To cope with the sharp depreciation of the Rupiah, a Presidential Decree was issued on 20 September 1997 which postponed and put under review 156 infrastructure projects, worth about US$37 billion. Among these projects, three involve UK companies, but we do not have firm details of the value of the investment, or expenditure incurred to date. As far as we are aware, no project has been cancelled as a result of links with the family of former President Suharto.

It is not possible to assess accurately the value of investment cancelled for any other reason.

Export Licences

Ann Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade for which countries in respect of which at least one arms export licence application was rejected, no arms export licences have been granted since May 1997. [44334]

Mrs. Roche: The Export Control Organisation's computer databases have been interrogated and the following results were obtained. Between 2 May 1997 and 10 May 1998, six countries were the stated consignee or end-user destination on one or more refused applications for Standard or Open Individual Export Licences that covered goods subject to export control by being listed in Part III of Schedule 1 to the Export of Goods (Control) Order 1994, but were not the stated consignee or end-user destination on any such licence issued in that period. These countries were Armenia, Croatia, Iran, Nigeria, Paraguay and Sudan.

This information should be considered in light of my answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Don Valley (Caroline Flint), 30 October 1997, Official Report, columns 870–71. It does not, of course, include Media OIELs, which are Open Individual Export Licences authorising the export to all destinations of protective clothing, mainly for the protection of aid agency workers and journalists when working in areas of conflict. If Media OIELs were taken into account, no countries would meet the definition.

Multilateral Agreement on Investment

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what recent representations she has received concerning the Multilateral Agreement on Investment; and if she will publish them. [45355]

Mrs. Roche: This Department has received many representations on the Multilateral Agreement on Investment (MAI) from interested parties. These representations were not made to us on the basis that they would be made public.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade which multi-national companies she has consulted on the future of the Multilateral Agreement on Investment; and if she will publish their replies. [45354]

Mrs. Roche: This Department has been in close touch with British business throughout the negotiations on the Multilateral Agreement on Investment (MAI), notably via the CBI and the International Chambers of Commerce (ICC-UK). Our consultation with industry was not carried out on the understanding that their responses would be made public.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement on progress with the Multilateral Agreement on Investment. [45356]

Mrs. Roche: The Government welcome the decision by OECD Ministers at the Ministerial meeting of 27–28 April 1998 to extend the negotiating for the Multilateral Agreement on Investment (MAI), seeking a successful and timely conclusion. The next negotiating session for officials at the OECD will be in October. We intend to use the intervening period for further assessment and consultation with interested parties. We will continue to work for our key aims to be met: we are seeking strong provisions on environmental and labour standards, an agreement attractive to developing countries, and an acceptable balance between the commitments we take on and the commitments offered by others.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what discussions she has held concerning the environmental aspects of the Multilateral Agreement on Investment; and if she will make a statement. [45384]

Mrs. Roche: Ministers and officials from this Department are in constant contact across Whitehall and with NGOs and other interested parties on the Multilateral Agreement on Investment (MAI), including on its environmental aspects. The Government will continue to press for strong language on the environment in the MAI and would not support an Agreement which failed to address these issues.

ACP Countries

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what discussions her Department has held with representatives or individual members of the Group of 77 ACP countries; and if she will make a statement. [45357]

Mrs. Roche: The department has regular discussions with many individual developing countries and with developing country regional groupings on a wide range of trade and investment related issues.

Vertical Agreements

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment she has made of the impact of vertical agreements, with particular reference to suppliers using selective distribution, on competitive practices and consumers. [44408]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 9 June 1998]: Recent work on vertical agreements has been undertaken in the context of the European Commission Green Paper on Vertical Restraints (Distribution Agreements) in EC Competition Policy and of the Competition Bill that is currently before Parliament. In addition the Office of Fair Trading (OFT) and Monopolies and Mergers Commission (MMC) have investigated vertical agreements in a number of specific sectors of the economy.

Wide consultations were held on the European Commission Green Paper during which more than 80 responses were received. The assessment of the Commission's proposal also took into account the views of the OFT and the earlier OFT Research paper on Vertical Restraints and Competition Policy (published in December 1996).

Patents

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what recent representations she has received from the Royal Society on harmonising the dates accorded to patents in different counties; and if she will urge the Council of Ministers to adopt the US system of having research note-books signed daily, and notarised by a lawyer at regular intervals. [45762]

Mr. Ian McCartney: I have received no representations from the Royal Society on the issue of dates accorded under patent law. However, I am aware of discussion on this topic in relation to United States patent law.

The United States stands almost alone in the world in basing the grant of patent rights upon evidence of being first to invent. This leads to auditory overheads on researchers, such as the need to have note-books signed daily and notarised regularly. In Europe and elsewhere the simpler approach of being first to file an application is the determinant for the grant of rights, and this approach is key in reducing auditory and administrative burdens on researchers and business. To move to the US system would add to the burdens of all applicants seeking rights in Europe.

United States patent law has recently become more liberal as far as foreign inventors are concerned. Prior to 1996 all research establishing a date of invention for patent purposes in the United States had to be carried out there. With the advent of the World Trade Organisation (WTO) and especially its Agreement on Trade Related Aspects of Intellectual Property (TRIPS), the United States was obliged to change its law so that research and development carried out in any WTO country is now acceptable for establishing a date of invention.

Small Businesses

Mr. Fraser: To ask the President of the Board of Trade on how many occasions Ministers have met representatives of (a) small businesses and (b) the Federation of Small Businesses. [44704]

Mrs. Beckett: (a) DTI Ministers regularly meet representatives of small businesses at meetings, receptions, conferences, and other engagements they undertake.

(b) DTI Ministers have met representatives of the Federation of Small Businesses, formally, on the following occasions:

President of the Board of Trade: 1

Minister for Small Firms, Trade and Industry: 5 (and 2 telephone calls)

Minister for Competition and Consumer Affairs: 3.

Takeover Bids

Mr. Gale: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when she expects to announce proposals resulting from a review of the workings of the MMC and OFT to improve efficiency in determining the implications of takeover bids. [44471]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths [holding answer 8 June 1998]: In the summer of 1997 the Office of Fair Trading (OFT) and the Monopolies and Mergers Commission (MMC) set up a joint working party to examine the scope for streamlining their procedures for handling merger cases, with the aim of reducing the burden on organisations which provide information to them. As a result, the arrangements for presentations made by the OFT to the MMC during a merger inquiry have been refined to enable the MMC to gain a better understanding of the main issues more swiftly, thereby helping it to focus its lines of inquiry. The working party is now considering whether the form used to prenotify the OFT formally of a merger can be modified in order to simplify and improve the effectiveness of the information-gathering procedures. In addition, the OFT and MMC have established a forum with lawyers from City law firms to consider possibilities for further streamlining of the way in which the OFT and MMC gather information.

Enemy Property

Mr. Letwin: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement on the progress made since her Department's public statement on 3 April, with the review which she is conducting on compensation for people whose assets were seized under the policy adopted during the Second World War towards enemy property. [44710]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 8 June 1998]: On 30 April 1998, Official Report, column 242, I announced the publication on the Internet, of about 25,000 records of those residents of Bulgaria, Germany, Hungary, Japan and Romania whose property was confiscated under the Trading With the Enemy legislation. A further 5,000 records for other countries will be published, also on the Internet, as soon as possible.

My statement on 3 April indicated that the Government would set up a claims procedure and that a suitable independent third party would be asked to advise on the form of the scheme the Government should adopt. I hope to be able to make an announcement about the appointment of such an individual shortly. In the meantime, my officials continue to register potential claimants' interest in the scheme.

Human Rights

Sir John Stanley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to the answer of 24 April 1998, Official Report, column 722, on human rights, if she will state which aspects of the Government's human rights policy are her Department's responsibilities. [44876]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 11 June 1998]: The Department supports the FCO's lead in this area, notably on matters relating to international trade policy, ethical trading, employment rights, and the application of strategic export controls.

Utility Regulators

Mr. Stunell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what measures she will implement to ensure that the utilities regulators co-ordinate their activities to achieve the Government's pledged reduction in carbon dioxide emissions; [44879]

(2) what action she will take to ensure that the new gas and electricity regulators' decisions will take account of (a) Government energy-saving policy and (b) the environmental impacts of regulatory action. [44882]

Mrs. Beckett: The Green Paper "A Fair Deal for Consumers" sets out the Government's proposals for reform of utility regulation, including proposals to give new guidance to the regulators on social and environmental objectives relevant to their tasks, and to merge Offer and Ofgas into a single regulatory office.

The responses to the Green Paper are presently being considered, and I will announce the Government's intentions as regards changes to the regulatory framework in due course.

Mr. Stunell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans her Department has to give a defined role to the fuel regulators in achieving the United Kingdom's carbon dioxide commitments; and if she will make a statement. [44880]

Mrs. Beckett: The Government will shortly be consulting on their approach to tackling climate change and greenhouse gas emissions, including options for delivering the UK's international commitments. The consultations are likely to include possible options for promoting energy efficiency, which may include regulatory measures.

Firearms

Dr. Tonge: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what action her Department is taking following the G8 summit regarding export control of firearms. [43726]

Mrs. Roche: As part of an action plan agreed in the G8 Lyons firearms sub-group and endorsed by the G8 summit, to help combat the illegal manufacture of, and trafficking in firearms, their parts, components and ammunition, G8 members agreed to "establish or maintain an import/export and in-transit licensing or similar authorisation regime for the international transfer of firearms" respectively. The UK will continue to maintain its current licensing regime and, in its dealings with other states on export control matters, where relevant, will encourage them to establish their own regimes. The Department will also work with other relevant Government agencies to combat the threats posed by illegal manufacture and trafficking in firearms and in its dealings with manufacturers, dealers, importers and exporters seek to obtain their support and co-operation in this endeavour.

Anpost Scheme

Mr. Vaz: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what research her Department has commissioned into the operation of the Anpost scheme. [45647]

Mr. Ian McCartney: None, but I understand that Post Office Counters Ltd. and the Department of Social Security undertook an examination of the Anpost system in the context of the PFI "Horizon Project" contract to automate post offices and benefits payments.

Post Offices

Mr. Vaz: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement on the role of her Department in ensuring efficiency in the payment of benefits via post offices. [45648]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The Government are committed to providing a secure, convenient and cost effective means of payment of benefits and the programme to automate all post offices is an important element of this.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps she is taking to ensure the computerisation of Crown post offices. [45646]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The programme being undertaken jointly by Post Office Counters Ltd., the Benefits Agency and ICL Pathway provides for the automation of all post offices.

Electrical Goods

Dr. Whitehead: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer of 6 April 1998, Official Report, column 67, what estimate has been made of the proportion of people who have the opportunity to take their old appliances back free of charge and do so. [45102]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: Within the UK it is estimated that over 50% of new white goods are sold with the opportunity to take back the old appliance free of charge. For some products, estimates indicate that this opportunity may be as high as seven out of every ten appliances sold. To date no information is available on the proportion of people who decide to opt for free take-back, and we are advised that consumer habits may vary greatly for different types of products.

Genetically Modified Food

Mr. Reed: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans she has to introduce additional consumer protection measures in respect of imported genetically modified food. [44978]

Mr. Rooker: I have been asked to reply.

Stringent consumer protection measures are already in place: all genetically modified foods, whether imported or produced in the UK, have to undergo a rigorous safety assessment in accordance with the requirements of the EC Regulation on novel foods and novel food ingredients before they are allowed to be marketed. In addition, this and other EC regulations require all foods containing genetically modified material to be clearly labelled.

TREASURY

Correspondence

Mr. Paice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he expects to complete the responses to all the letters received from hon. Members prior to the Budget. [41722]

Mr. Gordon Brown [holding answer 12 May 1998]: I received about a thousand Budget representations from hon. Members. All have been answered.

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the Financial Secretary expects to reply to the letter from the hon. Member for South Suffolk of 7 April about the Green Book. [45764]

Dawn Primarolo: I did so on 10 June 1998.

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the right hon. Member for Swansea, West will receive a reply to his letter of 8 April about the impact of tax regimes on inward investment. [46074]

Dawn Primarolo: I have replied today.

Mr. Fallon: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he expects to reply to the question from the hon. Member for Sevenoaks for answer on 14 May relating to Sandline (41914). [45808]

Dawn Primarolo: I hope to do so shortly.

Contingent Liabilities

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the projects, departments, agencies and partners of Government whose expenditure is recorded in the public accounts solely on the basis of contingent liabilities. [44722]

Mr. Darling [holding answer 10 June 1998]: Amounts outstanding for individual actual and contingent liabilities as at 31 March 1997 (the latest figures available) were published in Table B15 of the Supplementary Statements to the Consolidated Fund and National Loans Fund Accounts for 1996–97 (House of Commons Paper No. 378 of 1996–97). This statement excludes (a) cases involving £100,000 or less; (b) cases arising in the normal course of departments' business; and (c) a small number of other cases, of which details have been supplied to the National Audit Office, where there are considerations of national security, or commercial confidentiality, or where public knowledge of a guarantee could prompt claims from third parties.

The annual Supplementary Statement is published by the Treasury under section 21(3) of the National Loans Act 1968. The amount to be reported is the amount outstanding at the end of each financial year and details of the amounts outstanding as at 31 March 1998 will be laid before the House in mid to late December 1998. The statement is based on returns submitted by government departments; it would not be cost-effective for details to be collected more frequently.

Contingent liabilities do not appear in the current cash-based appropriation accounts of individual departments. Government bodies which produce accruals-based accounts, such as executive agencies, trading funds and some non-departmental public bodies, follow generally accepted accounting practice, including Statement of Standard Accounting Practice (SSAP) 18 Accounting for Contingencies which requires the disclosure by way of note of material contingent losses. Following the introduction of resource accounting, government departments will also account in this way.

Personal Investment Authority Ombudsman

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions he has had with the Personal Investment Authority Ombudsman Bureau about the charge of £500 made on companies against which complaints are made and investigated. [44921]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 10 June 1998]: The charges levied by the Personal Investment Authority Ombudsman Bureau (PIAOB) are a matter for the Board of the PIAOB.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his policy is on separating capital spending plans from current spending plans for Government departments; and if he will make a statement. [45490]

Mr. Darling: My right hon. Friend the Chancellor's statement of 11 June 1998, Official Report, columns 1195–215, and the Economic and Fiscal Strategy Report published on that day set out clearly the Government's policy on public expenditure planning. Departmental spending plans—based on this treatment—will be announced as part of the Comprehensive Spending Review outcome which will be announced before the summer Recess.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his policy is on setting long-term plans for departmental expenditure; and if he will make a statement. [45489]

Mr. Darling: My right hon. Friend the Chancellor's statement of 11 June 1998, Official Report, columns 1195–215, and the Economic and Fiscal Strategy report published on that day made clear the policy on long term planning of public expenditure. Departmental spending plans will be announced as part of the Comprehensive Spending Review outcome which will be announced before the summer Recess.

Public Sector Borrowing Requirement

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make it his policy to publish a series of ranges for future PSBR outturns in the annual Financial Statement and Budget report reflecting different economic assumptions; and if he will make a statement. [45487]

Mr. Darling: The March 1998 Financial Statement and Budget Report (FSBR) included estimates of the effect of alternative GDP growth assumptions on the public sector net cash requirement. Published forecasts have also illustrated the effect of uncertainty by including cyclically adjusted deficits based on both a central and cautious assumption of the level of output relative to its trend.

A prudent and cautious approach to the public finances, which allows for uncertainties, is essential if the Government are to achieve their fiscal rules and learn the lessons from the last economic cycle.

Euro

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the impact on the London Stock Exchange of the United Kingdom staying out of the euro. [45526]

Mrs. Liddell: The London Stock Exchange is well-prepared for the introduction of the euro next year. It has completed its analysis of responses to its consultation paper "Economic and Monetary Union: proposals for the equity markets" (published 20 February). Its ensuing proposals to ensure that UK equity markets are fully ready for EMU and able to support the euro as a trading currency from 4 January 1999 are set out in the Bank of England publication "Practical Issues arising from the introduction of the euro" published 11 June 1998. The Exchange will provide facilities to list and trade debt in euro from the same date.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he plans to publish the six-monthly reports on preparations for joining EMU; when the first such report is due; and if he will make a statement on the outline national changeover plan. [45303]

Mrs. Liddell: The first six-monthly report on the state of preparations for the euro will be published in early July. It will focus in particular on the preparations in the United Kingdom for the launch of the euro in other Member States on 1 January 1999.

The Standing Committee on preparations for EMU has agreed that the Government should compile an outline national changeover plan setting out the steps that the United Kingdom would need to take if we were to decide to join the euro. We will publish this outline plan around the end of the year. The outline plan will be compiled with the help of representatives from business and public authorities.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the money supply level of the euro relative to the total of the combined currencies of those countries merging for the euro; what forecast he has made of trends in the overall money supply level following the introduction of the euro; if he expects international demand for the euro to be met by an increase in money supply; and if he will make a statement. [45418]

Mrs. Liddell: Monetary policy in the euro area is the responsibility of the European System of Central Banks. The European Central Bank will be constructing statistics for euro area monetary aggregates.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what rôle he will have in respect of the deliberations of the committee responsible for the Euro on its total money supply level; and if he will make a statement. [45419]

Mrs. Liddell: Monetary policy in the euro area is the responsibility of the European System of Central Banks.

Departmental Reviews

Mr. Allan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list, for each of the last four years, the departmental inquiries and reviews instigated by Ministers which have been chaired by individuals outside his Department; and in each case if he will give the date of establishment and the name of the chairman. [44366]

Mrs. Liddell: The table lists the inquiries and reviews, with the date of establishment and the name of the chairman, instigated by Treasury Ministers for each of the last four years, which have been chaired by individuals outside the Chancellor's departments:

Title	Chairman	Date
Fundamental expenditure review of the Treasury	Sir Colin Southgate	6 June 1994
The Board of Banking Supervision inquiry into the circumstances of the collapse of Barings	Sir Alan Hardcastle	27 February 1995
Market testing the Treasury's micro economic forecasting function	KPMG Management Consulting	7 January 1997
Review of the Private Finance Initiative	Mr. Malcolm Bates	8 May 1997
Government task force on tax and benefits	Mr. Martin Taylor	19 May 1997
Reform of the financial regulatory system	Mr. Andrew Large	20 May 1997
Welfare to work advisory taskforce	Sir Peter Davis	5 June 1997

Underground Economy

Mr. Flight: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will calculate the size of the underground economy in the United Kingdom using the same criteria as the European Commission used to determine that of Italy. [44372]

Mrs. Liddell: All EU Member States submit Gross National Product (GNP) data to the Commission as part of the data requirements set out in Council Directive 89/130/EEC. This information is required to be complete in its coverage of economic activity as defined under the European System of Accounts (ESA 1979). A common methodology to cover the so called 'underground economy' was set down in Commission Decision C(93)3521 of 22 February 1994. Work to improve the harmonisation of these estimates continues.

Special Advisers

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many special advisers, political advisers and other political appointees are working in his Department; at what annual cost to the public purse including recruitment costs, salaries, pensions and National Insurance contributions; and what was the position in the last full year of the last Government. [43315]

Mrs. Liddell: For details of the numbers of Special Advisers and the annual cost of employing them, I refer the hon. Member to the answer the Prime Minister gave to the hon. Member for Woodspring (Dr. Fox) on 11 June 1998, Official Report, column 664.

National Insurance contributions are excluded from the figure but are paid under the same rules and at the same rates as for other civil servants. Information on the paybill costs for Special Advisers within individual Departments is not provided in order to protect the privacy of the individuals concerned.

Information on the cost of employing Special Advisers in previous years was given by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster to the hon. Member for Gordon (Mr. Bruce) on 25 November 1997, Official Report, columns 472–473.

Money Laundering

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what arrangements are in place to require those involved with securities and investments to disclose suspicious activity to law enforcers; and if he will make a statement. [45415]

Mrs. Liddell: The legislation dealing with money laundering provides for suspicious transactions to be reported to a constable (usually in practice the Economic Crime Unit of the National Criminal Intelligence Service) and is a universal duty. It applies to those involved with securities and investments in the same way as to any other person and whether in the course of business or otherwise. Failure to make a report may result in the commission of a money laundering offence, for which the maximum penalty is fourteen years' imprisonment and an unlimited fine.

In addition, those dealing with securities and investments are subject to the provisions of the Money Laundering Regulations 1993. These require that firms carrying on such business must have internal reporting procedures which ensure that, where knowledge or suspicion arises that a person is engaged in money laundering, this is disclosed to a constable. This is a positive duty for which failure to comply can lead, on conviction on indictment, to two years' imprisonment and/or a fine.

Financial Services Authority

Mr. Loughton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what is his estimate of the annual cost that the FSA will pass on to the financial services industry by way of (a) fees in respect of compliance and (b) other fees; [45753]

(2) what is his estimate of the cost of the (a) staff, (b) premises and (c) set up costs of the Financial Services Authority. [45752]

Mrs. Liddell: The Government intend that the Financial Services Authority should continue to be responsible for its own costs, with public consultation on its budget. It is intended that the Financial Services Authority should be required to have regard to the need to be efficient and economic and ensure that costs and restrictions on firms are proportionate to the benefits of regulation.

Holiday Insurance

Mr. Efford: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the adequacy of consumer protection in respect of holiday insurance offered by UK firms, with particular reference to the extent of insurance companies' responsibility when they assess an accident to be related to an individual's consumption of alcohol; and what representations he has received on this matter. [45713]

Mrs. Liddell: Insurers' responsibilities in this area are governed by the Association of British Insurers' Code of Practice on the marketing and selling of general insurance and they include assessing whether policyholders' actions or omissions contributed to the claim. It does not appear that the Treasury has received representations about an accident relating to an individual's alcohol consumption.

Economic and Finance Council

Mr. Timms: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the council meeting of the Economic and Finance Ministers of the European Union held on 5 June. [45507]

Mr. Gordon Brown: I chaired the Economics and Finance Council—ECOFIN—of the European Union in Luxembourg on 5 June. The Economic Secretary represented the UK.

The Council began by preparing Economics and Finance Ministers' inputs into the Cardiff European Council.

ECOFIN agreed conclusions on the fundamental importance of Agenda 2000 to the future economic and financial development of the EU, after a wide-ranging discussion of the Commission's 18 March proposals on future financing, and reform of the Community's core spending policies (the Common Agricultural Policy and the Structural and Cohesion Funds). ECOFIN conclusions will be sent to the European Council.

The Broad Economic Guidelines for 1998 were agreed, and conclusions on them will be discussed at the Cardiff European Council before the recommendation is adopted by ECOFIN next month.

The Council held a discussion of the National Employment Action Plans on the basis of some issues highlighted by the Presidency. Agreement was reached on a set of principles to be included in a Presidency report to Cardiff.

ECOFIN welcomed the Commission's paper on Pan-European Risk Capital Markets, and agreed conclusions inviting the European Council to ask the Council and Member States to consider its recommendations.

In addition to Cardiff preparation, the Council also heard a presentation from Commissioner Monti on his proposed Directive on the taxation of savings. The proposal will now be examined in detail at official level.

ECOFIN took note of the Conclusions of the 19 May Telecommunications Council on the report by the Chairman of the Ad-Hoc Group, and invited the commission to bring forward a Communication as soon as possible on the indirect tax treatment of electronic commerce.

External Sales and Exports

Mr. Denzil Davies: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate for the latest available year of the external sales ratio to GDP and the export ratio to GDP of (i) England, (ii) Scotland, (iii) Wales and (iv) Northern Ireland. [45370]

Mrs. Liddell: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Chief Executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from John Kidgell to Mr. Denzil Davies, dated 15 June 1998:

In the absence of the Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your parliamentary question on external sales and export ratios for England, Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland.

No figures are available on the contributions to their respective GDPs of sales either between the countries of England, Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland; or from these individual countries to the rest of the world.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Women's Aid Refuges

Ms Moran: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will make a statement on the future funding of women's aid refuges. [42763]

Ms Ruddock: To enable the Government to obtain an accurate picture of current provision, including funding arrangements, the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions, the Department of Health, the Department of Social Security and the Women's Unit are commissioning a package of research into the accommodation and support services provided to victims of domestic violence.

We are already looking at funding of supported housing with other responsible Departments. This review is charged with finding sustainable, long term arrangements for support services to vulnerable people including deciding the future role of Housing Benefit. We will be looking at refuge funding as part of this work.

Elderly People (Scotland)

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate she has made of the increase in spending on benefits for the elderly in Scotland up to the year 2000. [43815]

Mr. Denham: Information is not available in the format requested. However, it is estimated that Social Security benefit expenditure on the elderly in Scotland has increased by £111 million (3 per cent.) in real terms between 1996–97 and 1997–98 (1997–98 prices). Government spending plans for Great Britain for future years (1999–2000 to 2001–02) will be published after completion of the Comprehensive Spending Review.

Disability Living Allowance

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate she has made of the numbers of people eligible for higher rate disability living allowance whose eligibility in respect of mobility has ceased as a result of the most recent changes. [44029]

Mr. Denham: There have been no recent changes in the conditions of entitlement for Disability Living Allowance. The purpose of the Benefit Integrity Project is to collect up to date information from claimants receiving the higher rate of the mobility component, with either the highest or the middle rate of the care component, to ensure they are receiving their correct entitlement.

As of 31 March, 72,470 Disability Living Allowance (DLA) cases had been examined under the Benefit Integrity Project. This included 14,815 renewal claims following the expiry of a fixed period award. Entitlement to the higher rate of the mobility component ceased in 6,540 cases, including 3,336 renewal claims where the mobility component was not re-awarded.

A copy of the Benefit Integrity Project statistics up to 31 March is in the Library.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when reviews take place of eligibility for disability living allowance; and what procedures are followed in order to ensure that consultations take place with the recipient's GP (a) before the test of eligibility and (b) after the test and before a decision is made. [44145]

Mr. Denham: The administration of Disability Living Allowance is a matter for Mr. Peter Mathison, Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Dr. Vincent Cable, dated 11 June 1998:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking when reviews take place of eligibility for Disability Living Allowance (DLA) and what procedures are followed in order to ensure that consultations take place with the recipient's GP (a) before the test of eligibility and (b) after the test and before a decision is made.

Each claim for DLA is considered very carefully before a decision is made about entitlement to the allowance. Claims are assessed individually and decisions are only made when it is felt that all the necessary evidence is available.

Entitlement to DLA depends on the effects the disability has on the person's life and not on the particular disability or illness itself. It is recognised that the person best able to provide this information is the customer or their representative. It is for independent Adjudication Officers (AOs) to decide if further information is required to enable them to decide on entitlement to DLA and also from where this is obtained.

A customer can request a review if they are dissatisfied with the decision on entitlement to benefit. A review may also be instigated when there is sufficient up to date information to show that there has been a change in a customer's circumstances which may affect eligibility for benefit, or doubt has arisen as to whether the original decision to award benefit was correct.

As you may be aware, the Benefit Integrity Project (BIP) is a programme of reviews by postal enquiry and home visit to seek up to date information about the care and mobility needs of DLA customers receiving the higher rate mobility component with either the middle or highest rate care component.

A customer's General Practitioner will not always be consulted before a person's eligibility for benefit is reviewed. The AO will obtain further information from the most appropriate source, which may be the GP. Alternative sources of information are the customer's carer or an Examining Medical Practitioner (EMP). EMPs have a wide experience of general medicine. They are given specific training in the benefits concerned and in the completion of the detailed forms involved. EMPs gather information for the AOs on the likely care and mobility requirements arising from common disabilities.

Guidance for AOs on the most appropriate sources of further information is provided in the Disability Handbook which is produced in consultation with the Disability Living Allowance Advisory Board and groups representing disabled people. Guidance is also provided to staff by Medical Advisors who work for the Benefits Agency Medical Services.

I hope that this is helpful.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what medical qualifications are required of medical examiners carrying out tests of eligibility for disability living allowance. [44141]

Mr. Denham: The administration of the Benefits Agency Medical Services is a matter for Mr. Peter Mathison, the Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Dr. Vincent Cable, dated 11 June 1998:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about what medical qualifications are required of medical examiners carrying out tests of eligibility for Disability Living Allowance (DLA).

It may be helpful if I explain that claims for benefit are decided by independent adjudicating authorities. Neither Ministers nor officials of the Benefits Agency, including examining doctors, can intervene in or alter their decisions. For their part, the adjudicating authorities are bound by the provisions of legislation. For DLA, the adjudicating authorities are the Adjudication Officer (AO), the Disability Appeal Tribunal (DAT), and the Social Security Commissioner.

Therefore medical examiners employed by Benefits Agency Medical Services (BAMS), or who provide their services on a self employed basis, do not decide eligibility for any social security benefit. Rather, they act as a specialist medical disability analyst who provides information to the AO on the customer's ability to perform particular functions associated with work or on the customer's care and mobility needs.

All BAMS' medical examiners are required to hold a full medical degree and must be fully registered medical practitioners.

BAMS also require their doctors to normally have at least three years post registration experience, including one year in general practice and at least six months experience of psychiatry or rehabilitation/occupational medicine. Alternatively BAMS require five years post registration experience as a principal (or equivalent) in general practice. BAMS doctors also receive specific training in relation to the type of work they carry out for the BA Medical Services.

I hope this reply is helpful.

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans she has to raise awareness of disability living allowance and of entitlement to the benefit amongst the public; and if she will make a statement. [45189]

Mr. Denham: Since the introduction of Disability Living Allowance the number of people receiving the benefit has almost doubled, from just over one million in 1992–93 to almost two million in 1997–98, and the expenditure has risen from £2.2 billion to £5 billion at 1997–98 prices. Nevertheless, we are concerned about the recently published provisional estimates of take-up from the disability follow-up to the Family Resources Survey, and this was discussed in the Social Security Select Committee inquiry whose report was published on 13 May 1998. Discussions have already begun with disability organisations to establish the reasons for the apparent low take-up figures, and the new Disability Benefits Forum will provide for on-going debate. A number of positive steps have been taken by the Benefits Agency to raise awareness and the Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency will write to the hon. Member separately about this.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Simon Burns, dated 11 June 1998:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question, about what plans she has to raise awareness of Disability Living Allowance (DLA) and of entitlement to the benefit amongst the public.

There are two leaflets available, which provide information on the entitlement to benefit. Leaflet DS704 provides general information on DLA and DS706 provides information on DLA for children. Both these leaflets are available from the Disability Benefits Directorate, District Offices, and Intermediary Advisors, for example Welfare Rights Organisations. There are also a core series of BA leaflets which provide more general information on disability benefits. These leaflets are currently under review in order to ensure the material is more accessible to customers, and the first set of products is due to be launched around October 1998.

In addition to the above, the Disability Claim Pack, Charter Standard Statement and all other correspondence or forms issued to customers about DLA can be converted into braille, and the Charter Standard Statement is also available on cassette tape. Information can be provided in large print for those customers with a visual impairment. Customers with hearing or speech difficulties, who have the use of a text phone and require information on DLA can use the Text Phone service which is provided by the Disability Benefits Directorate Customer Care Helpline. Minicom facilities and LOOP systems are also available at the BA's regional Disability Benefit Centre's and the DBU. A video incorporating British Sign language and subtitles, entitled DV3 (Sickness & Disabled), is available, which provides information on DLA and other Sickness Benefits.

The BA is continually seeking to improve the service it offers to its customers in order to ensure that the needs of people with disabilities are met in full.

You may also wish to know that the BA has an Internet site on the World Wide Web. This is available 24 hours a day, seven days a week at WWW.DSS.GOV.UK

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Benefit Integrity Project

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to her answer of 9 June 1998, Official Report, columns 545–46, concerning the BIP, what timescale the review is working to and when she will report its outcome. [45769]

Mr. Denham: The purpose of the Benefit Integrity Project is to collect up to date information from claimants receiving the higher rate of the mobility component, with either the highest or the middle rate of the care component, to ensure they are receiving their correct entitlement.

We have made substantial progress on a number of initiatives. My noble Friend Baroness Hollis of Heigham will be meeting the Disability Benefits consortium on 29 June to discuss progress to date and consider outstanding issues.

Benefit Payments

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many post offices, and in which locations, are using the magnetic strips benefits payments card service; and how many post offices he estimates will be using this service by 31 March 1999. [45562]

Mr. Field: Presently 204 post offices in the North-East and South-West of England are automated and paying Child Benefit by Payment Card as part of a limited trial. On current plans the trial will be extended by approximately 100 post offices in early 1999.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what steps the Benefits Agency is taking with regard to the computerisation of benefit payments. [45692]

Mr. Field: The Benefits Agency, Post Office Counters Ltd. and ICL Pathway are undertaking the automation of post offices and benefit payments. Order books and Girocheques will be phased out and replaced by a magnetic stripe plastic card to provide a modern, secure and convenient method of paying benefits. This will involve the automation of over 19,000 post offices and the conversion of approximately 20 million Social Security benefit recipients who choose to collect payment at the post office. The project is being implemented under the terms of a PFI contract let to ICL Pathway under the previous administration in 1996.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what discussions have taken place with Girobank with regard to the improvement of efficiency of payments of benefits. [45693]

Mr. Field: This Department is routinely in discussion with Girobank plc on matters relating to the contracts held for the provision of girocheques. These discussions cover only the efficiency of processes, and improvements to the security of the girocheque.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what research her Department has evaluated into the operation of the Anpost scheme. [45694]

Mr. Field: This Department and Post Office Counters Ltd. undertook a feasibility study before inviting tenders for the Private Finance Initiative contract, subsequently let in 1996, to automate post offices and benefit payments. This included an examination of the Anpost system in the Republic of Ireland both before and during the qualitative evaluation of the tenders.

Lone Parents

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to her answer of 7 April 1998, Official Report, column 224, concerning the New Deal for Lone Parents, if she will update her answer to cover the periods (a) 1 March to 31 March and (b) 1 April to 30 April. [45192]

Mr. Keith Bradley: Information on the operation of the New Deal for Lone Parents is available up to and including 24 April 1998:

As at 31 March:

- 21,334 initial letters have been issued (in addition to this 3,461 lone parents have initiated contact with the personal adviser).
- 6,085 initial interviews have been arranged, and 5,178 lone parents have attended interviews.
- 4,637 lone parents have agreed to participate in the programme following mutual interviews.
- 1,530 lone parents have found jobs following agreement to participate in the programme.

As at 24 April:

- 22,402 initial letters have been issued (this does not include those who have initiated contact with the personal adviser).
- 7,102 initial interviews have been arranged, and 5,832 lone parents have attended interviews.
- 5,235 lone parents have agreed to participate in the programme following initial interviews.
- 1,678 lone parents have found jobs following agreement to participate in the programme.

Vaccine Damage Payments

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when she expects to make a decision about changes to the Vaccine Damage Payments Scheme. [45763]

Mr. Denham: An announcement was made on 19 May 1998, Official Report, column 358, that the Vaccine Damage Payment Scheme will be considered as part of the overall review of welfare which includes disability benefits, in consultation with the Department of Health. Also, at the same time it was announced that the intention is to increase the current payment of £30,000 to £40,000, as soon as Parliamentary approval can be obtained.

Tuesday 16 June 1998

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Junior Barristers

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what representations he has received concerning the rights of junior barristers to share the silk's bench in court; and if he will make a statement. [45147]

Mr. Hoon: I have received no representations on this subject. Where different types of authorised advocate sit in court is merely a matter of tradition and courtesy, rather than of law. It would be for the judiciary and for the legal profession, rather than for the Government, to consider whether any change is desirable.

WALES

NHS Trusts

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the powers of the National Assembly for Wales in regard to the restructuring of health trusts in Wales. [45156]

Mr. Ron Davies: Subject to the forthcoming consultation, the present restructuring will be completed when the new trusts assume their full responsibilities on 1 April 1999, prior to the first elections to the National Assembly for Wales. The powers under which trusts are being reconfigured are among those that I propose to transfer to the National Assembly. It will, therefore, be open to the Assembly to make further changes at a later date, if necessary.

School Vandalism

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has had with LEAs about vandalism to school buildings. [45952]

Mr. Hain: Following the issue of the Report of the Working Group on School Security to all local education authorities in June 1996, the Welsh Office has consulted LEAs on a wide range of school security issues resulting in the publication of the following guidance:

Directory of Local Authority Practice on School Security

School Security: Dealing with Troublemakers

Improving Security in School.

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what steps he is taking to reduce vandalism in schools. [45951]

Mr. Hain: School security measures are a priority category for funding under the New Deal for Schools capital funding initiative. £654,000 was made available for such measures in 1997–98; we are currently evaluating local authorities' bids for 1998–99.

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his estimate of the cost of vandalism to school buildings in the last year for which figures are available. [45950]

Mr. Hain: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Welsh Development Agency

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what steps he has taken to facilitate the co-ordination of the Mid Wales Development and the Welsh Development Agency; and if he will make a statement. [45891]

Mr. Hain: The Government of Wales Bill makes provision for the amalgamation later this year of the Development Board for Rural Wales with the Welsh Development Agency and the Land Authority for Wales, and the appropriate statutory and administrative arrangements are being made to effect this amalgamation.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what estimate he has made of the consequences for the Welsh Development Agency of the setting up of regional development agencies in England; and if he will make a statement. [45881]

Mr. Hain: The new Regional Development Agencies in England will enable the English regions to deploy expertise and resources to secure improvements in economic and social development, and their establishment is welcomed.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the members of the board of the Welsh Development Agency. [45883]

Mr. Hain: The members of the board of the Welsh Development Agency are:

Mr. David Rowe-Beddoe—Chairman

Mr. Robin Lewis OBE—Deputy Chairman

Professor Garel Rhys OBE

Mrs. Rhiannon Chapman

Mr. George Wright MBE

Mrs. Patricia Woodward

Mr. Graham Hawker

Mr. Trefor Glyn Jones OBE DL

Mr. William Legge-Bourke DL

Councillor T. P. Noel Crowley

Mr. Brian Willott CB—Chief Executive.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Sierra Leone

Mr. John M. Taylor: To ask the Attorney-General when he was first informed of the Sandline operation in Sierra Leone. [45806]

The Attorney-General: I refer the hon. Member to my written answer to the right hon. Member for Wells (Mr. Heathcoat-Amory) on 20 May 1998, Official Report, columns 400–01. That represented my first involvement with the Sandline case.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Road Accident Rates

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what evaluation he has made of the accident rates on the (a) A69 and (b) A66 in each of the last 10 years. [44895]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Accident rates cannot be calculated as traffic data are not readily available. The number of accidents is shown in the following table:

Accidents on the A69 and A66: 1988–1996

Year	A69	A66
1988	204	249
1989	174	255

1994	99	227
1995	80	205
1997	106	175

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what evaluation he has made of the accident rates on the section of the M6 between junction 44 and the Scottish border in each of the last 10 years. [44841]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Accident rates cannot be calculated as traffic data are not readily available. The number of accidents is shown in the following table:

Accidents on the road (A74) between junction 44 on the M6 and the Scottish border

Driver Test Centre, Stafford

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will halt the closure of the Driver Test Centre in Stafford. [44976]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The landlord of the premises where the current test centre is located has the normal contractual freedom whether or not to grant the Agency a replacement lease and has refused to accede to the Agency's request to do so in this case.

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will require the Driving Standards Agency to make provision for an alternative test centre in Stafford before closing the existing test centre. [44977]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Driving Standards Agency is keen to retain a testing presence within Stafford and is searching for suitable accommodation in the town. Since receiving notice from the Ordinance Survey of their intention to end the lease on the premises in Wolverhampton Road, ten properties have been considered but none was suitable. The Agency has been unable to renegotiate a short-term lease for the current centre whilst alternative premises are sought.

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what factors determined the length of notice the Ordnance Survey gave the Driving Standards Agency of its intention to vacate its premises on Wolverhampton Road, Stafford. [44975]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Ordnance Survey first notified the Driving Standards Agency of their decision to vacate the offices of Wolverhampton Road, Stafford, in November 1996, in accordance with Government guidelines that require a minimum of 12 months notice to be given. Ordnance Survey no longer need this office, which they vacated on 12 December 1997, and have arranged to terminate their lease on 23 June 1998.

Driver Test Centres (Closure)

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what guidance his Department has issued to the Driving Standards Agency on the minimum notice period required before closure of a driver test centre. [44974]

Ms Glenda Jackson: No specific guidance has been given to the Driving Standards Agency about periods of notice for test centre closures but, wherever possible, the Agency consults with the driver training industry, local authorities, the local MP and local driving instructors.

Minister for the Environment

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what were the travel arrangements for the Minister for the Environment's visit to the Waste Management Conference in Torbay on 9 June; and what was the cost to public funds. [45431]

Mr. Meacher: I travelled by helicopter; there was no cost to public funds.

Properties (Derbyshire)

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what statistics his Department collates on the number of properties in the county of Derbyshire, excluding the city of Derby, in each of the council tax bands A, B, C, D, E, F, G and H; and what are the latest figures. [45537]

Ms Armstrong: The Department collects the following data, for each Council Tax band, from billing authorities each year:

- Total number of dwellings on the valuation list
- Number of Class A to W exempt dwellings on the valuation list
- Number of demolished dwellings and dwellings outside area of authority
- Number of chargeable dwellings
- Number of chargeable dwellings eligible for disabled relief
- Number of dwellings effectively subject to Council Tax for a band by virtue of disabled relief
- Number of chargeable dwellings adjusted in accordance with the above figures for disabled relief
- Number of dwellings entitled to a 25 per cent. discount
- Number of dwellings entitled to a 50 per cent. discount
- Number of other dwellings (assumed to be entitled to no discounts)
- Total equivalent number of dwellings after discounts, exemptions and disabled relief
- Number of Band D equivalents
- Number of Band D equivalents of contributions in lieu of council tax (in respect of Class O dwellings)
- Taxbase for Revenue Support Grant purposes.

I have today placed in the Library of the House tables showing the above information for district councils in Derbyshire, excluding the city of Derby. The data refer to the number of dwellings on the valuation list at 16 October 1997 and the position on exemptions and discounts as at 3 November 1997, which are the reference dates for the calculation of the taxbase for Revenue Support Grant purposes for 1998–99.

West Coast Main Line

Ms Keeble: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many of the fast lines on the West Coast Mainline will be devoted to Virgin Rail Services following the upgrading agreed by the Rail Regulator. [45321]

Ms Glenda Jackson: None. The upgrade proposal initially submitted to the Regulator reserved the fast lines on the WCML south of Rugby for high speed services. The Regulator's decision was that such rights to exclusivity were inappropriate, and this aspect of the proposal has been withdrawn.

Roads (Winter Maintenance)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will rank each local authority in England in terms of the amount spent on winter road maintenance per mile for (a) trunk and (b) other roads for the latest year for which figures are available. [45327]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Data on local authority winter road maintenance are collected by the Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy (CIPFA). The most recent data on spending on winter maintenance on local authority-owned roads by English local highway authorities are for 1995–96. In that year, 84 authorities provided non-zero returns for their spending on winter maintenance. A further 16 authorities returned zero spending on winter maintenance. The remaining 34 authorities did not separate out spending on winter maintenance from other maintenance spending.

Winter maintenance expenditure depends on local weather conditions and will therefore vary widely. It will also vary from year to year, so that a single year's results are of limited utility. Data for 1996–97 will be available later in the year.

Data on the 84 authorities providing non-zero returns are set out in the table. It is derived from data collected and published by CIPFA as Highways and Transportation Statistics 1997, CIS 14.97, November 1997.

In 1995–96, £21.6 million was allocated for winter maintenance on trunk roads by the Highways Agency to its maintenance agents, not all of whom are local authorities.

M5

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he expects work on the M5 around the Avon Bridge to be completed; and if he will make a statement. [45163]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I have asked the Chief Executive of the Highways Agency, Mr. Lawrie Haynes, to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. Adrian Sanders, dated 16 June 1998:

The Transport Minister, Glenda Jackson has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the roadworks on the M5 at Avonmouth.

The strengthening of the M5 Avonmouth Bridge to comply with new loading standards, including 40 tonne lorries, will take longer than anticipated to complete due to the bridge being in a much worse condition than expected. Some traffic management will have to remain in place whilst the strengthening is completed. All parties to the contract are working in a partnering arrangement with the aim of completing the strengthening work by the end of the year 2000.

However, the actual widening of the M5 Motorway between Junctions 18 and 19 to dual four lanes, and the associated improvements to the junctions, is expected to be completed in August this year. This will allow more than half of the existing contraflow to be removed.

Great Western Trains

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what recent representations he has received about the performance of Great Western trains on the Penzance to Paddington route; and if he will make a statement. [45516]

Ms Glenda Jackson: My Department and the Office of Passenger Rail Franchising have received some 90 representation about the performance of Great Western's train services generally since the beginning of 1998.

Great Western has experienced a number of operational and infrastructure problems in recent months which have resulted in an unacceptable quality of service to passengers. OPRAF monitors performance and has agreed with the company an action plan to address the causes of the problems, involving Railtrack as appropriate. To provide further incentive to improve, a performance regime was introduced on 1 April under which Great Western pays a penalty to the Franchising Director of £250 in the event of a train being 20 minutes late, £500 if 30 minutes late or if it does not operate the full journey, and £1,000 if cancelled altogether. This is the first time that such a performance regime has been applied to an InterCity train operator.

Public Inquiries

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what provision is available to compensate parties whose legal costs become nugatory when a planning public inquiry has to be recommenced with a new inspector due to the long-term illness of the original planning inspector; and if he will make a statement. [45438]

Mr. Raynsford: There is no provision for reimbursing parties for expenses incurred in participating in a planning inquiry which is not completed due to the illness of the Inspector. The Planning Inspectorate normally agrees to meet the cost of any reasonable additional or wasted expenses where the Inspectorate accepts that it has been at fault. However, the Inspectorate is not prepared to entertain claims relating to circumstances beyond its control.

Green Belt (Worcestershire)

Mr. Michael J. Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what was the area of Green Belt in Worcestershire in each of the years 1979 to 1997. [45620]

Mr. Caborn: The current estimate of the size of Worcestershire's Green Belt is 40,400 hectares. It is not possible to estimate the size at earlier dates as, during the period 1979–1997, many small detailed changes took place as part of the preparation and adoption of local plans in the area by the local authorities.

Urban Areas (Green Spaces)

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what action he is taking to safeguard the development of new open space in urban areas following recent guidance relating to housing development on brownfield sites. [45714]

Mr. Raynsford: Our planning policy guidance already recognises the value of urban open space and advises that planning policies should seek to achieve a reasonable balance between the need to make adequate provision for development and the need to protect open land from development. We will be considering whether we need to strengthen existing guidance in the revising Planning Policy Guidance Note 3 on Housing. In doing this, we will take into account research, which we hope to publish shortly, on the effectiveness of Planning Policy Guidance Note 17 on Sport and Recreation. We are also tightening up planning controls in respect of development of local authority owned playing fields where the English Sports Council advises against the proposals.

Electoral Boundaries (Cumbria)

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has received on the Boundary Commission's review of electoral boundaries in Cumbria; and when he will announce his decision on the boundaries. [45690]

Mr. Raynsford: We have received 20 representations on the Local Government Commission's final recommendations on the future electoral arrangements for Cumbria. We are currently considering these representations and intend to announce our preliminary response to the recommendations shortly. At present, it is intended that the new arrangements will be established in time for the 1999 elections.

Channel Tunnel Rail Link

Mr. Ottaway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the guarantees which (a) the Government and (b) LCR have given to Railtrack for the construction of the Channel Tunnel Rail Link. [45624]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Government have not given to Railtrack any direct guarantees in relation to the construction of the Channel Tunnel Rail Link. As my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister explained in his statement to the House on 3 June 1998, Official Report, columns 367–70, the Government have agreed to assist the capacity of Eurostar (UK) Ltd. to meet its commitments, including to Railtrack; this support is forecast to amount to not more than £140 million, none of which would fall due before 2010, and which would be more than offset by the Government's 35 per cent. share in LCR pretax cashflow after 2020.

LCR has agreed to give Railtrack an exclusive option to commit to purchase the second phase of construction provided that option is exercised no later than 1 July 2003.

Eurostar

Mr. Ottaway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how much of Eurostar's management company will be controlled by French and Belgian railways; and what percentage shareholdings they currently have in the Eurostar trilateral partnership. [45627]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The SNCF and SNCB initial shareholding in the Eurostar management company is proposed to be 35 per cent. and 15 per cent. respectively. This will reduce to 21.7 per cent. and 8.7 per cent. respectively if British Airways exercise an option to increase its shareholding. The Eurostar trilateral partnership has no formal shareholding structure. Each company is responsible for operations and physical assets within its own territory.

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the Government's recent decision to write off the cost of Eurostar sleeper trains. [45533]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The rolling stock for this service was ordered from Metro Cammel in 1992 by European Night Services Ltd. (ENS) using a lease purchase facility. ENS is a joint venture company owned by Eurostar (UK) Ltd. along with the national railways of France, Germany and Holland. The liabilities of Eurostar (UK) Ltd. under the lease purchase facility were the subject of a Government Guarantee agreed by the previous Government which was notified to Parliament in 1996. Following the decision by ENS not to run night services, the lease on the partially built rolling stock was terminated. Eurostar (UK) Ltd. were unable to meet their portion of the termination of the termination costs so in order to avoid the collapse of the CTRL project, the Government consented to call on their Guarantee being made. The Government made payments to the lessors totalling £109,477,725.33 inc. VAT on 1 June 1998 but have arranged a provision so that there would be an opportunity of a return to the taxpayer in the event that the rolling stock were sold on by the manufacturer.

Ministerial Travel

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the modes of transport the Minister of the Environment used in his official capacity on 9 June, specifying the amount of time spent and distance travelled in each mode. [45747]

Mr. Meacher: I travelled to and from my engagements on 9 June by whatever means were most convenient to enable me to conduct Government business most efficiently. (This included walking, car, bicycle and helicopter).

Trans-urban Heavy Rail Scheme

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the Government's policy on the role of trans-urban heavy rail schemes in an integrated transport strategy. [45523]

Ms Glenda Jackson: We will shortly publish a White Paper which will deliver our commitment to introduce an integrated transport policy. Meanwhile, last November we approved the Franchising Director's interim planning criteria, which provide a framework for developing and implementing worthwhile rail investment.

Accidents (Colchester)

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what evaluation he has made of the accident rates in Colchester High Street in each of the last 10 years. [45547]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Records of personal injury accidents are kept by Essex County Council and their agents Colchester Borough Council as highway authorities for local roads in Colchester. Evaluation of these accidents is for these authorities.

However, I am able to tell the hon. Member that the accidents in Colchester High Street since 1984 were as follows:

Colchester High Street—Accident Summary

Traffic calming and other measures in the High Street were commenced in February 1994. The annual accident rate since then has reduced by 46 per cent.

Private Tenancies (Licensing Schemes)

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what proposals he has received from the Association of Residential Letting Agents for a national private housing tenancy licensing scheme; and what response he gave to them. [45435]

Mr. Raynsford: I met the Chairman of the Association of Residential Letting Agents on 8 December 1997 to discuss their proposals for compulsory registration of all landlords and their properties in the private rented sector. I confirmed in my letter to him of 3 February that the Government are not persuaded that this would be either feasible or desirable because of the huge burden it would place on local authorities and the risk of discouraging sideline landlords from letting property. However, I reaffirmed our commitment to develop proposals for licensing Houses in Multiple Occupation where the risks to health and safety tend to be the greatest.

Private Hire Vehicles (Disabled People)

Mr. Woolas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has received on the operation of section 35 of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995 with particular reference to problems faced by blind people with guide dogs in obtaining access to private hire taxis. [45550]

Ms Glenda Jackson: None. Section 37 of the Disability Discrimination Act will require drivers of licensed taxis to carry passengers and their guide or hearing dogs and to do so without additional charge. The taxi provisions of the Act do not apply to private hire vehicles.

Section 37 will be brought into force after we have consulted on procedures for medical exemptions later this year.

Biodiversity

Ms Rosie Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the outcome of the conference of the Parties to the Biodiversity Convention Meeting in Bratislava. [46420]

Mr. Meacher: The Fourth Meeting of the Conference of Parties to the Convention on Biological Diversity was held in Bratislava from 4 to 15 May. The United Kingdom led active participation by the European Union, which helped ensure that many of our objectives for this meeting, as agreed at the March Environment Council, were achieved.

A range of further work was agreed on measures to safeguard biodiversity in inland water, forest, agriculture, and coastal and marine ecosystems. Arrangements were agreed for the conclusion of the negotiation of a Biosafety Protocol to the Convention by early next year, and to hold an inter-sessional working group to consider further the implementation of the Convention's provisions on traditional knowledge. The meeting commissioned further work to analyse the first round of national reports from Parties, and the preparation of guidance on the nature and timing of the next round. Attention will also be given inter-sessionally to access to genetic resources and benefit-sharing.

The UK laid particular emphasis on the need to improve the operations of the Convention and the Conference of the Parties, and while some progress was made on this in Bratislava, further consideration will take place at an inter-sessional meeting next year. The UK will continue to press for improvements in the efficiency and effectiveness of the Convention's operations, in order to maximise delivery of the Convention's objectives.

Cyclists (Injuries)

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many cyclists suffered minor injuries on roads in the United Kingdom in each of the last five years. [45798]

Slight cyclist casualties: UK 1993–97

Year	Total
1993	20,495
1995	21,260
1996	21,049
1997	21,274

Rail Services (Matlock to Buxton)

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans have been put to his Department for the re-establishment of passenger rail services from Matlock to Buxton; and if he will make a statement. [45349]

Ms Glenda Jackson [holding answer 15 June 1998]: We are aware of the proposal to re-establish passenger rail services from Matlock to Buxton as part of a wider strategy for the area. Any decision to re-establish services will be a matter for the promoters of the scheme, together with Railtrack, the local authorities and the relevant train operating companies.

Environmental Impact Assessment Directive

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will place in the Library copies of the correspondence his Department has received in the last six months concerning the implementation of the Environmental Impact Assessment Directive as it affects the offshore oil and gas industry. [46009]

Mr. Raynsford: Implementation of the Environmental Impact Assessment Directive (85/337/EEC) as it applies to the offshore oil and gas industry is a matter for my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade. However, my Department has taken the lead in the initial public consultation on the implementation generally of the amended EIA Directive (97/11/EC) which must be done by 14 March 1999, and I refer the hon. Member to the answer my hon. Friend, the Minister for the Regions, Regeneration and Planning, gave on 12 May 1998, Official Report, column 66.

Public Toilets

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what estimate he has made of the number of public toilets per 10,000 population in each local authority in England. [46083]

Mr. Raynsford: None. The Audit Commission, however, publish annually the number of public conveniences provided by each authority. Their latest report "Local Authority Performance Indicators 96–97" is available in the House of Commons Library.

Taxi Vouchers

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the role of taxi vouchers, pursuant to the recently announced Rural Transport initiative. [45640]

Ms Glenda Jackson [holding answer 15 June 1998]: The main aim of the new finance for rural transport, announced in the Budget, is to promote additional services; it is not available for concessionary fares, including taxi vouchers. Concessionary fare schemes remain a matter for individual local authorities, who will doubtless wish to consider whether taxi vouchers could provide useful flexibility in rural areas.

Transport White Paper

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what reasons underlie the delays in publishing the White Paper on Transport; and on what date it will be published. [46216]

Ms Glenda Jackson: My right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister has said that the White Paper will be published soon after the Comprehensive Spending Review. On the day of publication, a statement will be made to the House in the normal way.

Rail Infrastructure

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is his policy in respect of the direct use of public funds for construction of new rail infrastructure. [46144]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Resources are available from a number of budgets within the Department. Schemes are considered on their own merits in terms of the value for money that they provide.

Cars (London)

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what schemes are being evaluated by his Department to reduce private car use in London; and if he will make a statement. [45568]

Ms Glenda Jackson: We have said that we wish to see fewer private cars in cities, with more people walking, cycling and using public transport. Our proposals for achieving these aims will be published in the Integrated Transport White Paper. The responsibility for implementing them in London will rest with the new Greater London Authority.

We have of course already made additional money available to London Transport over two years to improve the Underground. We have issued revised Traffic Management and Parking Guidance with greater emphasis on measures to assist buses, cyclists, and pedestrians in London, and we are working with the boroughs and transport operators on a number of initiatives to open up a wider set of transport choices for all and reduce dependency on the car, over the next two years.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many car parking places have been approved in developments in inner London in the past year; and what data his Department has collated on previous years. [45567]

Mr. Caborn: My Department does not hold this information.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many developments in London (a) he has called in and (b) have been referred to him due to the number of car parking spaces that are included in them. [45569]

Mr. Caborn: In the last twelve months, four planning applications in London have been called in where the Secretary of State has indicated that parking is one of the issues about which he specifically wishes to be informed in reaching his decision. No planning applications have been referred to him solely because of the number of car parking spaces provide.

Sewerage

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the extent to which the draft water industry specifications for plastic sewage pipes are in line with Part H of the Building Regulations covering household drainage. [45207]

Mr. Raynsford: Only one draft water industry specification for plastic sewage pipes is currently under development and this is for thermoplastic structured pipes for the construction of gravity sewers. These pipes are larger than those generally used in household drainage. The guidance in the Approved Document to Part H of the Building Regulations lists pipe materials and the relevant British Standards, but does not specifically address the type of pipe in the water industry specification.

However, the references in Approved Documents are not exclusive and other materials or products may be suitable in the particular circumstance. Given this, pipes and fittings which comply with the draft water industry specification for plastic sewage pipes should be acceptable for use in drainage systems which need to meet the requirements of Part H of the Building Regulations.

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when Part H of the Building Regulations will be reviewed. [45208]

Mr. Raynsford: The need to review the Approved Document to Part H of the Building Regulations was discussed by the Building Regulations Advisory Committee on 19 February 1998. It was decided to consider what would be addressed in the review at the Committee's meeting in October 1998 when the outcome of some supporting research should be available. The review of the Approved Document should commence shortly afterwards.

TREASURY

General Government Expenditure

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the amount in billions of pounds at 1997–98 prices accounted for by General Government Expenditure on Services from 1979–80 to 1997–98, broken down by the current classification of sponsor department. [45425]

Mr. Darling: A series for General Government Expenditure on Services from 1982–83 to 1997–98, broken down by function and presented in 1996–97 prices, is published in Table 3.3 of Public Expenditure: Statistical Analyses 1998–99 (Cm 3901). Equivalent figures for the period 1978–79 to 1981–82 are presented in the following table. The footnotes are identical to those of Table 3.3.

The figures are presented in 1996–97 prices since GDP outturn for 1997–98 is not yet available. An indication of how these figures would look in 1997–98 prices can be obtained by inflating them using the forecast GDP deflator for 1997–98 of $2\frac{3}{4}$ per cent. as published in Table B1 of the Financial Statement and Budget Report, March 1998 (HC 620).

A similar series for this period broken down by present sponsoring departments is not available.

Working Families Tax Credit

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what would be the full year cost of giving two-parent families an additional working families tax credit of £48.80; and if he will publish a table which shows what, if that were done, would be the equivalised net income of a single-earner married couple with two children aged four and six years as a percentage of a single adult's net income if in each case the gross pre-tax income was (i) £150, (ii) £200, (iii) £250, (iv) £300, (v) £350 and (vi) £400 respectively. [44512]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 8 June 1998]: It is estimated that the additional cost of giving two-parent families an additional credit of £48.80 within the WFTC is around £3 billion (1998–99 prices).

The following table shows the net income (after income tax, including WFTC, NICs and child benefit), and equivalised net income, of a single earner married couple with two young children, at different levels of gross income, with an additional £48.80 of basic WFTC.

Single earner married couple (2 children aged 4 and 6)

Gross income	Net income (after taxes and benefits)	Equivalised net income
150	269.88	194.16
200	285.14	205.14
250	300.22	215.98
300	315.29	226.83
350	330.37	237.67
400	345.44	248.52

For comparison, the following table shows the net income of a single person.

Single person, no children

150	127.53	209.07
200	161.44	264.65
250	194.94	319.57
300	228.44	374.48
350	261.94	429.40
400	295.44	484.32

Equivalised net income of a single earner married couple with two children, as a percentage of a single adult's net equivalised income, is as shown:

Gross income	Percentage
200	78
250	68
300	61
350	55

The figures include the effect of Budget measures taking effect in 1999–2000, although at 1998–99 levels of tax and benefits.

The data assume that the earner in the household is working over 30 hours a week for Working Families Tax Credit purposes; that earnings are from employment; and that there are no other sources of income.

The standard McClements scales have been used to determine equivalised income. This is the same process that is used in the DSS's Households Below Average Income publication.

At some levels of earnings, this family may also be entitled to housing benefit and council tax benefit. However, as this will depend upon the composition of the housing costs (between mortgage payments, council tax, and rent) housing benefit and council tax benefit have been left out of these figures.

National Debt

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the degree to which the present debt to national income ratio is consistent with his fiscal rules. [45491]

Mr. Darling [holding answer 15 June 1998]: I refer the hon. Member to the Statement that my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer made in the House on 11 June 1998, Official Report, columns 1195–201.

Contingent Liabilities

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the actual and contingent liabilities of the Consolidated Fund on (a) 31 March and (b) 30 April, excluding cases (i) involving £100,000 or less and (ii) arising in the normal course of a department's business. [45180]

Mr. Darling [holding answer 11 June 1998]: Amounts outstanding for individual actual and contingent liabilities as at 31 March 1997 (the latest figures available) were published in Table B15 of the Supplementary Statements to the Consolidated Fund and National Loans Fund Accounts for 1996–97 (House of Commons Paper No. 378 of 1996–97). This statement excludes (a) cases involving £100,000 or less; (b) cases arising in the normal course of departments' business; and (c) a small number of other cases, of which details have been supplied to the National Audit Office, where there are considerations of national security, or commercial confidentiality, or where public knowledge of a guarantee could prompt claims from third parties.

The figures for actual and contingent liabilities are collected only for one date each year—31 March, which is the end of the financial year. As usual, details of the amounts outstanding as at 31 March 1998 will be published in the Supplementary Statements to the Consolidated Fund and the National Loans Fund Accounts for 1997–98 which will be laid before the House in mid to late December 1998.

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list contingent liabilities accepted by the Government since 1 May 1997. [45179]

Mr. Darling [holding answer 11 June 1998]: Details of the amounts outstanding as at 31 March 1998 will be published in the usual way in the Supplementary Statements to the Consolidated Fund and National Loans Fund Accounts for 1997–98 which will be laid before the House in mid to late December 1998.

Economic and Monetary Union

Mr. Bradshaw: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he last met his European Union counterparts to discuss the political implications of Economic and Monetary Union. [44548]

Mrs. Liddell: The Chancellor of the Exchequer meets his counterparts on a regular basis to discuss a range of matters relating to Economic and Monetary Union. The last meeting of the Council of Economic and Finance Ministers was on 5 June 1998.

Low Pay

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate how many (a) men and (b) women working (i) part-time and (ii) full-time in (1) Tamworth and (2) Staffordshire earn less than (x) £3 per hour, (y) £3.60 per hour and (z) £4 per hour; and, in each case, what is the percentage of the total number employed. [45534]

Mrs. Liddell: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Chief Executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from John Kidgell to Mr. Brian Jenkins, dated June 1998:

In the absence of the Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your parliamentary question on earnings in Tamworth and Staffordshire.

I can give estimates of the percentage of employees in Tamworth and Staffordshire earning less than the hourly rates you mention, but not the number.

The latest information, from the New Earnings Survey 1997, is contained in the attached table.

Debt Recovery

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proposals he has to regulate the activities of those engaged in debt recovery. [44440]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: I have been asked to reply.

The Consumer Credit Act 1974 regulates the activities of those engaged in debt collection by requiring them to hold consumer credit licences. The Director General of Fair Trading, who is responsible for enforcement, has taken vigorous action against holders of consumer credit licences who misbehave, including revoking their licences.

The activities of bailiffs are governed by the County Court Rules, including the County Courts Act 1984. These are the responsibility of the Lord Chancellor's Department.

SCOTLAND

Skye Bridge

Mr. Charles Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the status of Crown Production 16 in respect of the right to collect the Skye bridge tolls on the part of the second concessionaire, Miller Civil Engineering; and if he will make a statement. [43194]

Mr. Dewar [holding answer 10 June 1998]: The hon. Member's description of Miller Civil Engineering Ltd. as the second concessionaire is incorrect in terms of the relevant statutory provisions in the New Roads and Street Works Act 1991 and the contractual arrangements relating to the procurement of the bridge. There is only one concessionaire, namely Skye Bridge Ltd., formerly known as Skye Bridge Tolls Ltd. The then Secretary of State assigned to Skye Bridge Tolls Ltd. his right to charge and collect tolls on Skye Bridge in accordance with section 28 of the New Roads and Street Works Act 1991 and the relevant toll order. Miller Civil Engineering Ltd. are not a concessionaire since they have not been assigned the Secretary of State's rights to charge and collect tolls.

I understand Crown Production 16 to be a document produced in the context of criminal proceedings in Dingwall Sheriff Court. The production is part of the Memorandum of Agreement made among the then Secretary of State for Scotland, Skye Bridge Tolls Ltd., The Miller Group Ltd., Miller Civil Engineering Ltd., Dyckerhoff & Widmann AG and Miller-Dywidag Joint Venture in relation to documents identified in Appendix 1 to that Memorandum. The documents include the Operation and Maintenance Agreement, in terms of which Skye Bridge Tolls Ltd., the concessionaire, entered into arrangements with Miller-Dywidag Joint Venture relating to the operation and maintenance of the bridge by Miller & Dywidag in joint venture including the collection of tolls on behalf of Skye Bridge Tolls Ltd. The Memorandum represents the then Secretary of State's written consent to those arrangements. This is set out in the Answers which I have lodged as an interested party in response to the Petition by Robbie the Pict seeking to interdict Miller Civil Engineering Ltd. from collecting tolls from him in respect of his use of Skye Bridge. That matter is currently before the Court of Session.

Reviews

Mr. Allan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list, for each of the last four years, the departmental inquiries and reviews instigated by Ministers which have been chaired by individuals outside his Department; and in each case if he will give the date of establishment and the name of the chairman. [44363]

Mr. Dewar [holding answer 11 June 1998]: The information is set out in the table:

Prisoners (Television)

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Motherwell and Wishaw (Mr. Roy) of 2 June 1998, Official Report, column 196, what was the basis of his calculation that a prisoner paying £1 per week covered the costs of an in-cell television set. [45721]

Mr. McLeish: The sum of around £1.00 per week was arrived at by dividing the likely cost of installing a television in a prisoner's cell by the period of 3 years over which that cost is to be recovered. The cost of installing a television, including purchase, warranty, electrical health and safety checking, and installation, is estimated to be around £150.00. Over 3 years, this gives a figure of around £1.00 per week.

Scottish Parliament

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will place in the Library the communications from Langdon's, cost consultants, on the costs of a Scottish Parliament. [46027]

Mr. McLeish [holding answer 15 June 1998]: Davis Langdon Everest have been retained by the Scottish Office as cost consultants for the Scottish Parliament Building. Their current advice relates to the estimated construction costs of the different design approaches to the building and is commercially confidential since the construction of the preferred design for the building will in due course be the subject of a competitive tendering exercise. In these circumstances, it would be inappropriate to make details of that advice available in the Library.

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what representations he has received regarding the extent of the powers of the Scottish Parliament to give policy and direction to National Lottery distributors in Scotland; [45842]

(2) what consultation he is undertaking in relation to the scope the Scottish Parliament will have to set policy and direction for National Lottery distributors in Scotland; [45981]

(3) to which National Lottery distributors in Scotland the Scottish Parliament will have powers to give policy and financial direction. [45982]

Mr. Galbraith: The Scottish Office has received one representation on this subject, which was also discussed during the Committee Stage of the National Lottery Bill in the House of Lords. The powers of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland in respect of the Scottish Arts Council and the Scottish Sports Council will transfer to Scottish Ministers on devolution. The Government also recognise that the Scottish Executive will have a strong interest in the activities in Scotland of the National Lottery Charities Board, the National Heritage Memorial Fund and the New Opportunities Fund, and intend to provide mechanisms for the Scottish Executive to exercise appropriate powers of direction over these bodies' activities in Scotland. These proposals were set out in a letter of 4 March from Lord McIntosh of Haringey to Lord Fraser of Carmyllie, of which I am sending a copy to the hon. Member. Detailed implementation of the proposals is under discussion: they will be put in place by subordinate legislation to be made under the Scotland Bill.

Local Government Finance

Ms Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he intends to cap any Scottish local authorities this year. [46453]

Mr. Dewar: No. All Scottish local authorities have set budgets for 1998–99 at or below the expenditure limits implied by the provisional capping principles which I announced on 3 December 1997, Official Report, columns 215–18, as part of the 1998–99 local government finance settlement.

Tuition Fees

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what are the expected administrative costs of introducing tuition fees in Scotland in 1998–99. [45860]

Mr. Wilson: The Student Awards Agency for Scotland will be responsible for assessing applications for assistance towards the cost of tuition from Scottish domiciled students. The work is analogous to the Agency's existing functions and we do not expect the administrative costs to be materially different.

Any costs incurred by the educational institutions in relation to the collection of students' own contributions to tuition costs is a matter for the institutions themselves.

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what the expected savings are to his Department arising from (a) the abolition of maintenance grants and (b) the introduction of tuition fees; and what is the expected additional expenditure from the Scottish Office to finance student loans in each of the financial years 1998–99 to 2003–04. [45841]

Mr. Wilson: In financial year 1998–99, the overall effect of the changes will be broadly neutral in expenditure terms. Estimates for future years will depend on a number of factors and have yet to be finalised, but in the longer term we expect the changes to raise about £140 million in Scotland.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Hereford and Worcester Education Authority

Mr. Michael J. Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the additional funding made available to Hereford and Worcester local education authority in 1997–98 and to Worcestershire local education authority in 1998–99. [43730]

Mr. Byers: The following table shows the funding provided to Hereford and Worcester under the original Grants for Education Support and Training Programme (GEST) for 1997–98, its Education Standard Spending Assessment (SSA) for 1997–98 (after adjusting for the abolition of the nursery voucher scheme), and Supplementary Credit Approvals (SCAs) awarded for 1997–98. It also shows the additional funds subsequently made available under phase one of the New Deal for Schools (NDS1), and under the "Books for Schools" initiative. The table shows the corresponding allocations made so far for 1998–99 to Herefordshire and to Worcestershire, the Standards Fund having replaced GEST.

Hereford and Worcester, 1997–98	£ million
SSA	234.810

Further Education

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many further education colleges currently use franchising arrangements to secure increased student numbers. [44694]

Dr. Howells: It is estimated that, in the 1997–98 teaching year, 292 out of 444 further education colleges are delivering some of their provision through franchising arrangements.

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the current average class size in further education colleges. [44690]

Dr. Howells: Data on this are not collected on a systematic basis by the Department. Information from the Further Education Funding Council Inspectorate suggests that the average number of students on the class register in FE colleges in England in 1996–97 was 14.

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is his estimate of the increase in the number of further education students by the year 2002. [44691]

Dr. Howells: Such an estimate cannot be made until the completion of the Comprehensive Spending Review.

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what has been the national increase over the years 1993–94 to 1997–98 in numbers and percentage terms of further education (a) full-time students, (b) part-time students, (c) full-time lecturers, (d) fractional lecturers and (e) part-time lecturers. [44692]

Dr. Howells: The information is not available in respect of all the years mentioned. Figures for 1993–94 are not comparable. For students the figures (on a "whole year" basis) are available only up to 1996–97.

Increase in students 1994–95 to 1995–96 and 1994–95 to 1996–97

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when he will publish his response to the Education and Employment Committee's Sixth report of session 1997–98 on Further Education (HC 264). [44794]

Dr. Howells: The Government will respond to this report within two months of its publication.

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many colleges have been subject to financial clawback by the Further Education Funding Council as a result of inaccuracies in their individual student record systems during each of the last three years. [45048]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 11 June 1998]: The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Sixth Form Education

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many students currently attend sixth forms in comprehensive schools; and what is his estimate of the annual cost to public funds of educating them in 1998–99. [44801]

Dr. Howells: The current number of students in school sixth forms is not available. In January 1997, the most recent month for which figures are available, the number of sixth form students in comprehensive schools was 254,532. The amount within the Standard Spending Assessment allocated to schools' post-16 provision is £1,137.7m for 1998–99. These figures can give only a broad indication of the actual cost of educating students in comprehensive school sixth forms because (i) the spending allocation covers all post-16 state school provision, not just comprehensive schools; (ii) spending is a matter for local authorities' own discretion; and (iii) schools' budgets are unhypothecated.

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many students currently attend sixth form colleges; and what is his Department's estimate of the cost of educating them in 1998–99. [44802]

Dr. Howells: Provisional figures show that there were 160,300 students studying on 1 November 1997 in sixth form colleges in England. The Further Education Funding Council's overall allocation for 1998–99 to sixth form colleges is £326.1 million.

School Computers (Leicestershire)

Mr. Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how much has been provided to Leicestershire Local Education Authority for computers in the classroom as part of the National Grid for Learning Initiative. [44943]

Dr. Howells: The Department is supporting £997,900 of ICT-related expenditure in Leicestershire in 1998–99 through Standards Fund Grant for the National Grid for Learning. The grant is funded equally by the Department and the relevant local education authority.

Vocational Training Tax Relief

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what representations he has received regarding the administration of the vocational training tax relief scheme and the possible introduction of a composite form for use by training providers. [44912]

Dr. Howells: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has received no representations about the administration of vocational training relief, which is the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer.

Local Authority Youth Services

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to place the youth services provided by local authorities on a statutory footing. [45169]

Dr. Howells: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave her on 11 May 1998, Official Report, column 5.

UK Presidency (Young People)

Mr. Flight: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the initiatives planned or undertaken to promote among the young awareness of the United Kingdom Presidency of the European Union. [45310]

Dr. Howells: The Department of Education and Employment undertook two initiatives to promote the awareness of the United Kingdom Presidency of the European Union among the young. In January, in conjunction with the Scottish, Welsh and Northern Ireland education departments, we issued the "Partners in Europe" information and resource pack, which was sent to all UK schools. We also ran a "Celebrating Europe" competition for schools, FE colleges, vocational training organisations and youth groups, which culminated in an awards ceremony for the 10 major award winners on 11 May 1998.

Jean Monnet Awards

Mr. Flight: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the Jean Monnet awards for 1998 in the United Kingdom. [45304]

Dr. Howells: Jean Monnet European Centres of Excellence have been created at:

University of Bath
Queen's University Belfast

Internet

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what were the optional themes for 1997 Netd@ys projects; how many United Kingdom institutions submitted entries; and what were the final projects submitted by the UK. [45295]

Dr. Howells: The main aims of the 1997 European Union Netd@ys project were to develop awareness-raising around existing electronic networks of schools; to use the Internet to promote the benefits of networking, and to implement up to 10 Internet-related projects in each EU member state. Applications for funding under the project were sent direct to the European Commission for consideration. Twenty-one projects were submitted from the United Kingdom and the following were awarded funding by the European Commission:

UK Netday. A consortium of commercial suppliers promoting the use of the Internet to co-ordinate and encourage nationally the development of IT and network applications in schools.

BBC Project. The use of TV in schools to publicise Netd@ys 97, including an on-line lesson and a quiz on European history.

City of Leeds. Building on networks via the Internet use of video conferencing facilities to link up with contacts in the UK and EU.

Devon Council. A project involving 32 schools extending their transitional partnerships through networking in order to disseminate educational practice and support teachers and trainers.

Kent TEC. Developing a Kent Lifelong Learning Video-Conferencing Network and establishing a network of Multimedia Learning Centres based in schools.

Birmingham ABC project. Extending an inner city network of schools in Birmingham both into the West Midlands region and to school networks in European countries. Live concert over the Internet given by children.

Netdays in Scotland. Encouraging parents and teachers to learn about and understand the Internet, dissemination of package training on the Internet on CD ROM and holding a conference on multimedia projects.

Netdays Europe in Northern Ireland. A series of events encouraging parents and teachers to learn about and understand the Internet.

Window on the Future, Window on the World. A local competition designed for the children from the 46 primary schools in the Isle of Wight.

Netdays @ Beacon Community College, East Sussex. Developing a community intranet with web pages co-operatively produced at the college by local businesses. European links established to exchange views on health related topics.

In addition, the European Commission funded the costs of the former National Council for Educational Technology in co-ordinating the programme on behalf of the UK.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the state of planning for Netd@ys Europe 1998. [45294]

Dr. Howells: This European Commission initiative will take place from 17 to 24 October 1998. The British Educational Communications and Technology Agency (BECTA) has been appointed by my Department as the United Kingdom's national co-ordinator and its role includes the offering of advice and support to UK applicants who submit bids under the project. It is understood that the Commission has so far received 64 project proposals from the UK.

Young Consumer Competition

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the 1997 Young Consumer competition in schools financed by the European Commission. [45271]

Dr. Howells: The 1997 Young Consumer competition was a welcome initiative. It is important that consumer issues are addressed in schools and I hope many pupils were able to participate.

Economic and Monetary Union

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the proposed paper on the EMU and Education proposed by the European Commission for preparation by the UK presidency. [45272]

Dr. Howells: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State is unaware of any such proposal.

Student Loans

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many graduates in each socio-economic group (a) deferred and (b) defaulted on their student loans in each of the last four years for which figures are available. [45748]

Dr. Howells: Information on the socio-economic groups of borrowers of student loans is not collected centrally. Data on numbers of borrowers of student loans who were in deferment or default at the end of each financial year from the beginning of the scheme up to 1996–97 were published in Statistical Press Notice 391/97 on 26 November 1997. A copy of the Press Notice is in the Library.

The following has been extracted from that Press Notice:

United Kingdom

Thousands

Status of borrowers at end of financial year	1993–94	1994–95	1995–96	1996–97
Borrowers with accounts in repayment status	138	263	429	622
Borrowers owing less than two months' repayment	2	3	5	8
Borrowers owing two or more months' repayment	5	11	21	34
Borrowers deferring repayments	61	122	207	312

Myalgic Encephalomyelitis

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what proposals he has to provide additional finance for local education authorities for home tuition for pupils and students suffering from myalgic encephalomyelitis or chronic fatigue syndrome in (a) age groups up to 16, (b) further education and (c) higher education; and if he will make a statement. [45471]

Ms Estelle Morris: All funding for local education authorities is being considered as part of the Comprehensive Spending Review. It will be for authorities to decide within the total resources available to them the level of support to be provided for each of their services.

The Department for Education and Employment will be consulting in the autumn on statutory guidance for local education authorities on educational provision for children who are out of school.

Vocational Qualifications

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment he has made of the financial impact on colleges of the removal of Schedule 2A qualifications for the financial year 1998–99. [45046]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 11 June 1998]: The effect on college budgets is not a factor taken into account when determining qualifications for inclusion under Schedule 2(a). The Further Education Funding Council is not proposing to withdraw allocated funding from colleges which currently offer qualifications no longer on the list, as it considers colleges are likely to substitute alternative qualifications or increase courses in other areas.

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many Schedule 2A qualifications have been removed by the Further Education Funding Council for the year 1998–99. [45047]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 11 June 1998]: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State approves vocational qualifications under Schedule 2(a) to the Further and Higher Education Act 1992. For the teaching year 1998–99, the approved list currently includes 1,767 individually listed titles, 1,442 fewer than in 1997–98, plus all NVQs, GNVQs, NVQ'D' units, GNVQ'GPA' units, Key Skill units and Language units. More titles will be added as satisfactory in-year applications are approved. Reductions in the list for 1998–99 arise from qualifications which have been withdrawn by awarding bodies, decisions by awarding bodies not to re-submit qualifications as well as decisions not to class qualifications in Schedule 2(a).

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many Schedule 2A qualifications were listed in 1997–98. [45045]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 11 June 1998]: 3,209 individually listed titles, plus all NVQs, GNVQs, NVQ'D' units, GNVQ'GPA' units, Key Skill units and Language units.

School Inspections

Mr. Efford: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what representations he has received from (a) teachers, (b) professional bodies, (c) trade unions, (d) school governors and (e) LEAs regarding the Ofsted inspection system. [45707]

Mr. Byers: Many responses to the consultation exercise following publication of the Excellence in schools White Paper in July 1997 included comments on the school inspection system. We frequently receive representations about the inspection system from a range of interested parties.

Education Funding (Lincolnshire)

Gillian Merron: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) how much additional funding for education was (a) allocated and (b) received by Lincolnshire County Council in (i) 1997–98 and (ii) 1998–99; and what future projections his Department has made of the education funding requirements for Lincolnshire County Council; [44961]

(2) what are the intended uses of the additional education funding provided by the Government to Lincolnshire County Council for (a) 1997–98, (b) 1998–99 and (c) future years; and what information his Department has obtained from Lincolnshire County Council with regard to its actual use of additional education funding provided by the Government for each of these years. [44962]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 15 June 1998]: The Government provided for an increase in Lincolnshire's education standard spending assessment for 1998–99 of some £14.7 million or 6.6 per cent. The Government believe that all of the education SSA increase for this year should be used to raise standards in schools. The County Council has increased its support to schools by some £3.4 million. Decisions on central government support for education funding in Lincolnshire in future years will be taken in the autumn. The table sets out details of the year-on-year changes in education SSA, education budgets and schools' budgets.

	1997–98 £ million	1998–99 £ million	£ million increase	Percentage increase
Ed. SSA	221.4	236.2	14.7	6.6
Ed. Budget	234.4	241.9	7.5	3.2
Schools' budgets	211.7	215.1	3.4	1.6

Notes:

1. The year-on-year changes have been calculated so as to take account of the ending of the nursery voucher scheme
2. The education budget figures have been derived from the authority's General Fund Revenue Account return
3. The schools' budgets consists of all the General Schools Budget minus capital, as derived from Section 122, plus all AMG recouped from the authority

Dogsthorpe School, Peterborough

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will conduct an investigation into the discrepancies between two recent inspections of Dogsthorpe School, Peterborough by OFSTED. [45737]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 15 June 1998]: This is a matter for HM Chief Inspector of Schools. I have asked him to write to the hon. Member and to place a copy of his letter in the library.

School Play Time

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will estimate the proportion of schools which have reduced play time since the introduction of the National Curriculum. [45284]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 15 June 1998]: Information about the duration of schools' breaks is not collected centrally.

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to commission research into the impact of a reduction of play time on the welfare of school children. [45285]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 15 June 1998]: We have no such plans at present.

Nursery Places

Mr. Ennis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the current average cost of providing a full-time nursery place in (a) Barnsley and (b) Doncaster. [45822]

Ms Estelle Morris: This information is not available centrally.

University for Industry

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment to what extent the University for Industry will be concerned with the provision of basic skills training to the New Deal target groups. [45505]

Dr. Howells: One of the priorities for the University for Industry when it is launched in the year 2000 will be to ensure that there are sufficient high quality and easily accessible learning opportunities for people who lack basic skills. It will also encourage those lacking these essential skills to take up the opportunities available. However, the University for Industry will not be aimed only at those in the New Deal target groups: it will seek to serve a much wider audience. The Department will be exploring in the coming period how the University for Industry and New Deal might work together to ensure that the two initiatives best complement each other.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how the University for Industry will benefit small and medium-size enterprises; and what steps he plans to take to raise awareness of these benefits. [45506]

Dr. Howells: The small and medium-size business sector will be one of the priority client groups for the University for Industry when it is launched in the year 2000. The University for Industry Pathfinder Prospectus published on 31 March set out how it will seek to help SMEs improve their competitiveness by ensuring that high quality, cost effective education and training opportunities are available to owner managers and employees at the time and place they need them.

A transition board has been established to take forward the development of the University for Industry until permanent structures are set in place later this year. As part of their remit they will be advising Ministers on an appropriate marketing strategy. This will inform the implementation of a national marketing campaign.

Schoolchildren (Health)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what percentage of schoolchildren have failed to attend school classes due to illness in (a) the United Kingdom and (b) Coventry in each of the last three years; [46219]

(2) what was the total number of days schoolchildren missed during each of the last three academic years in (a) the United Kingdom and (b) Coventry; [46220]

(3) what was the average number of days lost per schoolchild as a result of failing to attend class due to illness in each of the last three years. [46221]

Ms Estelle Morris: Rates of authorised and unauthorised absence for maintained primary and secondary schools in Coventry for the last three academic years, together with England averages, are given in the following tables.

Absences due to illness are not identified separately in the authorised absence data collected by the Department.

Authorised absence in maintained primary schools

	Percentage of half days missed	Average number of half day missed per absent pupil
1994–95
Coventry	5.9	20
England Average	5.7	19
1995–96
Coventry	6.4	21
England Average	6.0	20
1996–97
Coventry	5.9	19
England Average	5.6	18

Unauthorised absence in maintained primary schools

	Percentage of half days missed	Average number of half day missed per absent pupil
1994–95
Coventry	0.5	10
England Average	0.5	10
1995–96
Coventry	0.5	11
England Average	0.5	10
1996–97
Coventry	0.4	9
England Average	0.5	10

Authorised absence in maintained secondary schools

	Percentage of half days missed	Average number of half day missed per absent pupil
1994–95
Coventry	7.9	28
England Average	8.2	27
1995–96
Coventry	8.4	28
England Average	8.4	28
1996–97
Coventry	8.9	29
England Average	8.1	26

Unauthorised absence in maintained secondary schools

	Percentage of half days missed	Average number of half day missed per absent pupil
1994–95
Coventry	1.4	34
England Average	1.0	22
1995–96
Coventry	1.3	31
England Average	1.0	21
1996–97
Coventry	1.3	30
England Average	1.0	20

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to improve the health of schoolchildren to reduce the number of school days lost through illness. [46222]

Ms Estelle Morris: The Government wish to play their part in helping to reduce the number of school days lost through illness. The National Healthy Schools Initiative, launched in May, will raise awareness among children, and their teachers, families and communities, of the important opportunities that exist in schools for improving health and raising achievement.

The Initiative includes a National Healthy Schools Award designed to promote a whole-school approach to health, a Healthy Teacher Focus and the development of strategies for encouraging safe travel to school. These, and other measures, will help young people to develop the knowledge, skills and attitudes required to look after and improve their health in a range of contexts.

Corporal Punishment

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many students received corporal punishment in privately funded schools located (a) in the United Kingdom and (b) in the Midlands, in the last year for which figures are available. [45502]

Ms Estelle Morris: This information is not available centrally.

EU Publicity (East Sussex)

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the cost to public funds in the current financial year of Relay Europe Ltd.'s provision of a Mobile Information Centre to visit schools in East Sussex; and if he will make a statement. [45980]

Dr. Howells: The costs of the Mobile Information Centre are met by the European Commission's Representation to the UK. There is accordingly no direct cost to public funds.

Job Vacancies (Tamworth)

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many job vacancies were notified to the Tamworth Job Centre in each month since May 1997. [45535]

Mr. Alan Howarth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its Chief Executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Leigh Lewis to Mr. Brian Jenkins, dated June 1998:

As the Employment Service is an Executive Agency, the Secretary of State has asked me to reply direct to your question regarding the number of job vacancies notified to Tamworth Jobcentre each month since May 1997.

A total of 4,719 vacancies were notified to Tamworth Jobcentre over the twelve months from May 1997—April 1998. The table below gives a breakdown of figures for each month.

Month	Number of vacancies
May 1997	396
June 1997	484
July 1997	527
August 1997	482
September 1997	445
October 1997	381
November 1997	495
December 1997	347
January 1998	141
February 1998	368
March 1998	319
April 1998	334

I hope this is helpful.

Head Lice

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) how many instances of head lice were reported by (a) primary and (b) secondary schools in each of the last five years; [45975]

(2) what records his Department keeps on the number of reported instances of head lice. [45976]

Ms Estelle Morris: The Department does not keep records of the reported incidence of head lice in schools.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what measures he is discussing with schools with the aim of reducing the number of reported incidents of head lice. [45977]

Ms Estelle Morris: The treatment of head lice in children is essentially dealt with at local level, between the Community Child Health Services (CCHS), the school and the parents. It is for parents to check their children's heads and arrange treatment where required, seeking advice as needed from the primary health care team—the general practitioner, health visitor, school nurse or the local pharmacist.

The Department is in regular contact with the Department of Health on a range of health issues relating to pupils' health, including the treatment of head lice. Officials from both Departments provide advice to schools and parents on head lice control, including a leaflet containing guidance on prevention and treatment.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Quangos

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when he intends to publish the Government's response to representations received following the publication of the consultation paper, Opening up Quangos. [45549]

Dr. David Clark: I intend to publish a paper later this month which reports the outcome of the quango consultation exercise and sets out further proposals to make the operation of quangos more open, accountable and effective.

Government Car and Despatch Agency

Mr. Quinn: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what targets he has set the Government Car and Despatch Agency for 1998–99. [46356]

Mr. Kilfoyle: I have set the agency the following targets:

Financial

to break-even on an accruals basis;

to maintain sales turnover at 1997–98 outturn;

to maintain expenditure and receipts within Voted provision;

Efficiency

to improve the gross contribution as a percentage of sales revenue by 2 per cent; to increase the income per round of labour cost to £2.00;

Quality

to review the existing customer satisfaction survey, and establish a benchmark for future performance;

Environmental

to achieve an annual average of 26 miles per gallon for the GCS and IDS fleets.

Civil Servants

Mr. Chope: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many (a) men and (b) women aged over 60 years were employed by the Civil Service on 30 April. [46023]

Dr. David Clark: The latest available information relates to 1 January 1998. On that date, it is estimated that there were a total of 8,800 male and 3,400 female permanent civil servants aged over 60 years.

Mr. Chope: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many employees in the Civil Service have contracts of employment which permit them to retire after their 60th birthday. [46022]

Dr. David Clark: The information is not available centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. Departments and agencies are free to set the normal retirement age for their own staff which allows them to take into account all relevant factors such as the needs of management, present availability of staff and projected staffing requirements.

MINISTER WITHOUT PORTFOLIO

Millennium Dome

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Minister without Portfolio what estimate he has made of the percentage of visitors to the Millennium Dome who will travel by London Underground. [45761]

Mr. Mandelson: The New Millennium Experience Company (NMEC) has estimated that over 50 per cent. of visitors to the Millennium Dome will use London Underground's Jubilee Line Extension for the final leg of their journey.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister without Portfolio which organisations have (a) been asked, (b) agreed and (c) refused to take part in developing the environmental exhibition within the Millennium Dome. [41774]

Mr. Mandelson [holding answer 14 June 1998]: The designers contracted to develop the exhibit ("Living Island"), which has a particular focus on the environment, have met representatives from the Council for the Protection of Rural England (CPRE); Greenpeace; the Natural Resources Foresight Panel DTI; The Environment Agency; Surfers Against Sewage; and media environmental editors and journalists. No organisation contacted by the designers has refused to take part in discussions.

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Minister without Portfolio what plans he has to include exhibits relating specifically to county characteristics in the Millennium Dome. [44843]

Mr. Mandelson: There will be numerous opportunities to explore the rich diversity of the culture of all parts of the United Kingdom through the Dome's exhibits and the associated UK wide national programme of events and activities. For example, as part of Tesco's contribution to the Millennium Experience, school children will be encouraged to describe life in their communities on the internet and this will then be relayed in the Dome. Other sponsors such as BT, BSkyB, Manpower and Marks and Spencer are also supporting national programme events and activities which will find expression in the Dome.

Surfball

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Minister without Portfolio (1) if he will publish his reply to the letter written to him by Richard Heller on 24 May relating to the Millennium Experience; [44451]

(2) if he will publish his replies to the letters of 9 and 24 May 1998 from Mr. Richard Heller relating to Surfball. [46237]

Mr. Mandelson: Officials at the Department for Culture, Media and Sport replied to Mr. Heller's letters of 9 and 24 May on 15 June. If Mr. Heller wishes to publish the Department's reply, he is free to do so.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Royal Parks (Dogs)

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans he has to review the bylaws in the royal parks relating to the control of dogs. [45168]

Mr. Tom Clarke: I have no plans to review the Royal Parks Regulations as they relate to the control of dogs.

Sustainable Tourism

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment he has made of the contribution which private coach operators could make to sustainable tourism. [45455]

Mr. Tom Clarke: The Government have recently undertaken a nationwide consultation exercise on sustainable tourism. Among the responses we have received are a number from bodies representing the interests of coach operators. All responses to the consultation are currently being analysed. They will feed into the development of the new strategy for tourism which my Department will launch later this year and will help update the UK Sustainable Development Strategy which will be published by the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions also later this year.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

EU Funds

Mr. Flight: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will list the projects funded in 1997 in the United Kingdom under European Communities budget lines B5–100 and B5–102. [45325]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: The Commission has given us the following information on projects funded in 1997 in the United Kingdom under the European Communities budget lines B5–100 and B5–102:

Beneficiary	Title of the project	Funding up to:
International Testing	Parallel food testing in the EU	843,141 ecu
Consumers in Europe Group	Preventing accidents of young children	11,686 ecu
Central Scotland Fire Brigade Headquarters	Central Scotland Crucial Crew Project	43,804 ecu
Consumers International	15th World Congress in Chile November 1997	112,148 ecu
Scottish Consumer Council	Being a Consumer Representative	50,691 ecu
Association of Personal Injury Lawyers	Creation of European Personal Injury Lawyers Organisation	55,432 ecu
Royal National Institute for the Blind	Information campaign on EURO for blind people	74,824 ecu

The funding indicated is the ceiling the Commission may contribute for each project. The actual sums paid will depend on the acceptance by the Commission of the final report and financial documents.

Estate Agents

Mr. Letwin: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make it her policy to introduce a scheme for the statutory regulation of the conduct of estate agents. [44711]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths [holding answer 8 June 1998]: Statutory regulation is provided by the Estate Agents Act 1979 which regulates the conduct of estate agents and includes the power to prohibit their trading as estate agents. The Director General of Fair Trading, who is responsible for enforcement, has taken vigorous action against estate agents who misbehave.

Export Licences

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make it her policy that a separate account be kept of all applications for export licences which require consideration under the criteria announced by the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on 28 July 1997. [45509]

Mrs. Roche: In his announcement on 28 July 1997, Official Report, columns 26–29, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs stated that the criteria would be used when considering all future individual applications for licences to export goods entered in Part III of Schedule 1 to the Export of Goods (Control) Order 1994 and existing licence applications on which a decision has not yet been made. He also stated that the criteria will be applied when considering licence applications for the export of dual-use goods when there are grounds for believing that the end user of such goods will be the armed forces or the internal security forces of the recipient country.

As all the decisions taken against the criteria and others taken by this Government since 2 May 1997 reflect our commitment to manage arms transfers responsibly, in particular so as to avoid their use for internal repression and international aggression, I do not believe there would be any purpose in separating data in the manner suggested.

Employees (Overseas Working Conditions)

Ms Kelly: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans she has to extend the provisions of the Employment Protection Act 1978 to British workers working for British companies abroad. [45475]

Mr. Ian McCartney: I have no current plans to extend the territorial scope of employment legislation.

Millennium Dome

Mr. Redwood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what budget has been given to the Design Council to select British designs for display in the Millennium Dome; [45724]

(2) what investigations she has made into allegations that the Zefyr 43, a Millennium product endorsed by the Design Council is not suitable for such recognition; [45722]

(3) how the new British designs, to be displayed in the Millennium Dome are selected; and how the quality of the design is assessed; [45727]

(4) how many new British designs have been approved for display in the Millennium Dome; [45726]

(5) what guidance she has given to the Design Council on selecting British designs for inclusion in the Millennium Dome; and what checks are being made to ensure the quality of the products; [45723]

(6) what testing has been conducted on products bearing the Millennium Mark; and what assessment she has made of the Government's legal liability if products are found to be faulty; [45738]

(7) if she will list the new British designs to be displayed in the Millennium Dome; [45728]

(8) if the yacht 'Zefyr 43', will be on display in the Millennium Dome. [45736]

Mrs. Beckett [holding answer 15 June 1998]: The Millennium Products initiative is designed to identify and promote up to 2,000 examples of world class products and services created in Britain for the new Millennium. They will be forward thinking, challenging, creative, and innovative and will show that we can lead the world through pioneering products and services which celebrate and exemplify our known strengths in innovation, creativity and design. My department is funding the project, which is managed on its behalf under contract by the Design Council. Funding is a total of £3.8 million for the four year period 1997–98 to 2000–01.

Submissions to the Millennium Products project are assessed by the Design Council through evaluation by independent judging panels selected from industry, design and the media. My Department is not involved in the judging process and decisions rest with the Design Council.

The first Millennium Products accolade winners were announced on 2 April. The Walker Wingsail—not the Zefyr 43—was among those announced. It was selected because it is a new marine navigation system comprising a wing sail and associated computer controlled software. Matters of product liability fall to those making the Millennium Products submission. This is set out clearly in the Millennium Products submission form.

It is for my hon. Friend the Minister without Portfolio to decide on the contents of the Millennium Experience at Greenwich. However, I understand that the Design Council has had preliminary discussions with the Millennium Experience Company about the possibility of exhibiting some Millennium Products accolade winners at Greenwich but no decision has yet been reached on which Millennium Products might be exhibited.

Marine Science and Technology Committee

Mr. Ian Stewart: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans the Government have for the future role of the Inter-Agency Committee on Marine Science and Technology. [46422]

Mr. Battle: The Government have recently reviewed the role and effectiveness of the Inter-Agency Committee on Marine Science and Technology (IACMST) and concluded that it is effective in performing its main function of ensuring that co-ordination takes place across Government on marine science and technology issues. IACMST will therefore continue for the next three years, with a further review of its future taking place at that point.

In response to the more detailed findings of the review, IACMST will increase its focus on international marine activities and on science and technology relating to marine vessels and structures, alongside its traditional emphasis on the marine environment and oceanography. IACMST will also produce a guide for business on responsibilities for marine science and technology within departments and agencies; will continue to work closely with the Marine Foresight Panel; and will begin a review of individual members' strategies for marine science and technology.

Copies of a report setting out the review's conclusions in more detail are available in the Library. This report also mentions some of the main activities currently being undertaken by IACMST, including its co-ordination of a wide range of UK events to mark 1998 as the International Year of the Ocean.

Independent Radio

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what powers (a) her Department (b) the Monopolies and Mergers Commission and (c) the Office of Fair Trading would have to intervene in any proposed take-over of one or more of the three companies holding independent national radio licences; and if she will make a statement. [46274]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: It would, in the first instance, be for the Director General of Fair Trading (DGFT) to consider any actual proposal which appeared to give rise to a qualifying merger situation under the Fair Trading Act 1973. In the light of the DGFT's advice, my right hon. Friend, the President of the Board of Trade, would decide whether or not to refer the merger to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission for investigation and report. She has said that her policy will be to refer mergers primarily on competition grounds. Each case is considered on its individual merits.

Unions

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what measures she is taking to safeguard workers' rights to form unions. [45503]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The Government have no plans to change the existing law which allows workers in the United Kingdom to form trade unions. Once formed, trade unions are subject to the requirements of Part I of the Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992 as regards accounting records, annual returns, audit, elections for certain positions, the use of funds for certain political objects, etc.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what measures she is taking to protect workers who are associated with trade union organisations from discrimination by their employers. [45504]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The White Paper "Fairness at Work", published on 21 May, set out proposals to supplement the existing protection against dismissal or action short of dismissal on grounds of trade union membership or non-membership. The Government intend to provide protection against discrimination by omission, and to prohibit the blacklisting of trade unionists.

World Trade Organisation

Barbara Follett: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the outcome of the second Ministerial Conference of the World Trade Organisation in Geneva from 18 to 20 May. [46423]

Mrs. Beckett: I attended the second Ministerial Conference in Geneva from 18 to 20 May, with the Minister for Trade. The Prime Minister attended the Heads of Government event on 19 May, marking 50 years of the GATT, about which he made a statement in this House on 20 May 1998, Official Report, columns 955–70.

The Conference recognised the critical importance of the rules-based multilateral system and WTO member countries paid tribute to the contribution which that system has made to economic growth, employment and stability across the world. They also joined in a rejection of protectionist measures and made a commitment to keeping markets open in the face of difficulties as a result of disturbances in financial markets. In addition, they emphasised that full and faithful implementation of WTO Agreements and Decisions was imperative for the credibility of the multilateral trading system. At the same time, WTO members renewed their commitment to ensuring that the benefits of the multilateral system were extended as widely as possible and pointed to the urgent need to address the marginalisation of least developed countries, to improve market access for them, and in the wake of economic change to assist them to manage social change.

There was also recognition of the importance of enhancing public understanding of the benefits of trade liberalisation, building support for it and improving the transparency of the WTO.

The Conference was significant in looking ahead to the future composition and shape of multilateral trade liberalisation. The text of the Ministerial Declaration points to the need for sufficiently broad-based liberalisation to respond to the interests and concerns of all Members. In preparation for this, WTO members agreed to launch a wide ranging process, beginning in September this year, so as to be ready to take decisions at the third Ministerial Conference on the scope, structure and timeframes of future negotiations. This was central to the UK's and EU's objectives for the Conference. This process will include the range of issues to which the UK and EU attach importance in the context of future comprehensive multilateral negotiations, including agriculture, services, industrial tariffs, technical barriers to trade, investment, competition, trade facilitation and government procurement.

It was agreed that the third Ministerial Conference will be held in the US towards the end of 1999.

In interventions during the course of the Conference, British and other Ministers recognised the need to consider the environmental impact of their policies, including their trade policies, while ensuring that trade rules were not used to impose unfair standards on developing countries or to discriminate against their exports. Separately, Ministers in their interventions also clearly recognised the importance of core labour standards, the avoidance of the exploitation of children and the important role for the ILO in furthering the international advancement of these goals.

In addition, WTO Members agreed to establish a comprehensive work programme to examine all trade-related issues relating to global electronic commerce. Members also agreed to continue their current practice of not imposing customs duties on electronic transmissions.

Copies of both of the Ministerial Declarations from the Conference will be deposited in both Houses.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Departmental Running Costs

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will make a statement about the 1998–99 running costs limit for the Northern Ireland Office and Northern Ireland departments. [46421]

Marjorie Mowlam: The gross running costs limit for 1998–99 for the Northern Ireland Office and the Northern Ireland Departments is £749,283,000. There is also a net running cost limit of zero for the Land Registers of Northern Ireland. A separate running cost limit of £6,041,000 for the Welfare to Work programme is outside the control total. Details of the provision for individual Northern Ireland Departments are set out in the Northern Ireland Estimates published today and are available in the Library.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Organic Farming

Kate Hoey: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what percentage of agricultural produce is grown organically within the United Kingdom. [44868]

Mr. Morley: We do not know what percentage of agricultural produce is grown organically within the United Kingdom. However, land area registered as organic is 0.3 per cent. of the United Kingdom's utilisable agricultural area. We have recently announced measures to boost interest in conversion to organic farming, and decisions on further recommendations will be made in the context of the comprehensive spending review.

Quarantine

Mr. Reed: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many complaints he received about conditions in registered kennels for animals in quarantine in 1997–98. [44941]

Mr. Rooker: The Department received 36 letters of complaint in 1997, and 406 in 1998 (as at 9 June) about conditions in authorised quarantine premises. Of these, 22 and 11 respectively were made by owners of pets undergoing quarantine. The majority of those made this year followed media coverage of conditions in two quarantine premises, which this Department is investigating.

All specific complaints about individual quarantine premises made by owners of animal undergoing quarantine are investigated and appropriate action taken.

Oilseed Rape

Ms Keeble: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many complaints his Department received in each of the last three years from members of the public relating to the crop oilseed rape. [45296]

Mr. Rooker: The number of written complaints received centrally from members of the public in which oilseed rape has been a principal issue is as follows:

	Number
1996	5
1997	75
1998 (to 12 June)	3,054

Abattoirs

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the abattoirs in England and Wales, identifying (a) those undertaking religious slaughter, (b) the number of visits each has received by his inspectors during the last year and (c) those where inspectors alleged intimidation or threats. [45660]

Mr. Rooker: A list of licensed abattoirs in England and Wales is published in the Meat Hygiene Enforcement Report which is placed in the Library of the House each month. Information is not held on those adopting religious methods of slaughter.

A member of the Meat Hygiene Service inspection team is present every day during operating periods. It would be inappropriate to identify abattoirs where there have been cases of alleged intimidation or threats, but I would refer the right hon. Member to the replies I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Workington (Mr. Campbell-Savours) on 4 and 8 June 1998, Official Report, columns 341–43 and 451–52.

Solway and Border Esk Rivers

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what progress he is making in inter departmental discussions on an agreed fishing regime for the Solway and Border Esk rivers. [45688]

Mr. Morley: Discussions on the future management of the Solway and Border Esk rivers are continuing, with the objective of ensuring that Clause 100 of the Scotland Bill makes it possible for decisions on the future management of these rivers to meet the concerns expressed by those we have consulted on this issue. In particular, we wish to ensure that the difficult problems of jurisdiction, which have been a feature of the Solway for many years, can be properly addressed.

Emergency Food Stockpile

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what (a) stores and (b) equipment from the emergency food stockpile remain. [45701]

Mr. Rooker: No stores or equipment from the emergency food stockpile remain.

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many buildings used for the emergency food stockpile remain in Government ownership. [45702]

Mr. Rooker: Fourteen of the freehold sites which were used to store the emergency food stockpile remain in Government ownership and one leasehold site remains with the Government. All are subject to disposal action, although in some cases this is complicated by matters such as local authority planning, rights of way or the need to clear contamination.

Flood Damage (West Midlands)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what new measures he has considered to prevent future flood damage in the West Midlands. [46224]

Mr. Morley: The Environment Agency has commissioned an Independent Review into the Easter floods which will identify the lessons to be learned. The final report of the Review Team is due by the end of September 1998. I shall need to consider the follow up action with the Environment Agency with a view to reducing the risks of damage from flooding.

HEALTH

Ayaz Sheikh

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 9 December 1997, Official Report, column 542, on the case of Ayaz Sheikh, what further action has been taken; and on what date the Chairman of the Leicestershire Health Authority wrote to the hon. Member for Leicester, East setting out action taken with regard to this matter. [44091]

Ms Jowell: I understand that Neil Townsend, Chairman of Leicestershire Health Authority, wrote to my hon. Friend on 3 June setting out the latest position on this case. The letter confirmed that approval had been given by the health authority to fund an out of area referral to enable Ayaz to attend the Early Years Diagnostic Centre in Nottingham. I understand that Ayaz attended the centre for assessment on 19 March 1998.

NHS Direct (Minicom Service)

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the NHS direct pilot scheme is accessible to deaf telephone users via a minicom number. [45010]

Mr. Boateng: The three National Health Service Direct pilot sites currently in operation all have access to a minicom service. The second wave of NHS Direct pilots will be in operation by the end of this financial year. The organisations bidding to run these pilots are asked to take account of the needs of deaf people and explain in their proposal how these will be addressed.

Home Care Services

Ms Perham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give a breakdown by (a) percentage and (b) number, of adult households in England who received home help/home care services in each year between 1994 and 1997 where the oldest member of the household was aged (i) under 65, (ii) 65 to 74, (iii) 75 to 84 and (iv) 85 years and over. [44937]

Mr. Boateng: The information requested is in the table.

Households receiving home help or home care services England: survey week during September/October

Hip Operations

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many hip operations were undertaken on persons over 80 years old in the latest year for which figures are available; and how many were unsuccessful. [45512]

Mr. Boateng: The number of hip replacement and other hip operations carried out in England in 1995/96 is set out in the table. Information on outcomes is not available. This is a matter we are discussing with the professions.

Operations on the hip joint. Estimated number of finished consultant episodes (FCEs) by primary operation and age, National Health Service hospitals, England, 1995–96

Child Protection Registers

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many children at risk from sexual or physical abuse were on child protection registers on 1 June. [45211]

Mr. Boateng: The latest figures for children and young people on child protection registers in England are for 31 March 1997 and show 8,200 at risk of physical injury alone, 5,600 at risk of sexual abuse alone and 800 at risk of both physical injury and sexual abuse.

Methadone Treatment

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people in the United Kingdom undertake methadone treatment for heroin or cocaine addiction. [45662]

Ms Jowell: The available information shows that during the six month period ending 30 September 1996, 19,191 heroin users and 3,593 cocaine users presented to services in Great Britain with problem drug misuse for the first time or for the first time for six months or more. There is some double counting in these figures because some users reported misusing both heroin and cocaine. Reliable information is not currently available on the number of these users receiving methadone treatment. Methadone is not prescribed for the treatment of cocaine misuse.

The figures given were published in the Statistical Bulletin "Drug Misuse Statistics for the six months ending September 1996", copies of which are available in the Library. The next Statistical Bulletin, for the six months ending March 1997, is due to be published on Wednesday 17 June 1998.

Clinical Trials

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his Department's policy on controlled trials of medical treatments. [45829]

Ms Jowell [holding answer 15 June 1998]: The Department recognises that in many instances the best evidence on effectiveness and side effects of treatment can be obtained from clinical trials. This is because clinical trials, especially randomised controlled trials, allow treatments to be compared with minimal bias. For this reason, the Department has set up the research and development programme for the National Health Service which: commissions clinical trials, so as to be able to improve care for patients in the NHS; includes economic analysis alongside clinical trials to determine cost effectiveness; produces systematic reviews so that patients can benefit from all the clinical trials conducted around the world; makes the results of these reviews widely available; and ensures that the NHS fulfils its obligations to meet the treatment costs of clinical trials whose research costs are met through other funders.

It is Departmental policy that all clinical trials (like other forms of clinical research) receive prior ethical committee approval from the local research ethics committee.

The NHS has taken steps to ensure the methodological quality of clinical trials through, in the first instance, the appointment of a National Clinical Trials Advisor, Professor R. Lilford, who has collaborated with the Medical Research Council in producing a set of guidelines for good clinical practice in relation to clinical trials which were based on the principles laid down by the International Committee on Harmonisation.

The NHS is taking a number of steps to ensure that the results of clinical trials carry through into practice.

Viagra

Mrs. Browning: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 11 June 1998, Official Report, column 686, if he proposes to make Viagra available by NHS prescription, if marketing authorisation is given in respect of the drug. [46250]

Ms Jowell: As with most drugs, sildenafil (Viagra), if licensed, will be available on National Health Service prescription to meet identified clinical need. We will be considering whether guidance to clinicians or any other action is required. Issues of this kind will in due course be considered under the auspices of the National Institute for Clinical Excellence.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his estimate of the cost to the National Health Service of asylum seekers whose application has not been resolved in the last year for which figures are available. [45542]

Mr. Boateng: The information requested is not held centrally.

National Health Service hospital treatment, received by an asylum seeker whose application is pending, is the responsibility of the health authority for the district in which they are residing.

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his estimate of the cost to local authorities of asylum seekers whose application has not been resolved in the last year for which figures are available. [45541]

Mr. Boateng: Almost £40 million was paid to local authorities for supporting adult asylum seekers; around £28.4 million for asylum seekers with children and £1.6 million for unaccompanied children. The full cost to local authorities of supporting asylum seekers whose applications have not been resolved is not known as the grants paid by central government to local authorities do not fully re-imburse those costs.

DEFENCE

Nerve Agent Pre-treatment Sets

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the life-expiry date of Pyridostigmine Bromide was in (a) 1990 and (b) 1995. [40141]

Dr. Reid: In 1982 and 1983, the Ministry of Defence took delivery of an initial stock of unlicensed Nerve Agent Pretreatment Set (NAPS) tablets containing pyridostigmine bromide (PB) which had been manufactured by Roche Products Ltd. in those years. These tablets had a nominal shelf-life of 5 years, which was later extended to 6 and then 7 years following testing at the Chemical Defence Establishment (CDE) (now known as the Chemical and Biological Defence Sector of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency) at Porton Down in 1987 and 1988. In July 1988 a contract was let to Duphar BV (now known as Solvay Duphar BV) to replace MOD's holding of NAPS. This second order, also unlicensed, was delivered to MOD in February 1989 and distributed to units by August 1989. These tablets had a nominal life expectancy of 4 to 5 years, expiring in 1992–93.

Thus, at the beginning of 1990, MOD's stock of NAPS contained tablets manufactured by Roche Products Ltd., some of which had, nominally, life-expired in 1989 and some of which were due to expire early that year, and tablets manufactured by Duphar BV with a nominal expiry date of 1992–93. We believe that the NAPS tablets used during the Gulf conflict were drawn principally, possibly exclusively, from stocks of the Duphar tablets which were due to expire in 1992–93. However, in October 1990 samples of the Roche tablets, all of which were, at that time, life-expired, were analysed by CDE to determine their suitability for use during Operation GRANBY in the event that additional stocks were required; their PB content was found to be within an acceptable range for use.

Additional stocks of NAPS tablets were delivered from Duphar BV in 1991. A licence application for NAPS was made in 1992 and, based on the available storage data information, a life expiry date of 4 years was granted when the licence application was approved in 1993. This stock therefore had an expiry date of 1995. It is possible that MOD's holding of NAPS in 1995 also included some of the Roche and earlier Duphar batches whose shelf-lives had already expired.

Further stocks of NAPS tablets were delivered in the Spring of 1996 to replace MOD's holding. These have an expiry date of early 2000. Life-expired stocks of NAPS are currently being disposed of at CBD Porton Down.

CR Gas

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment of the health effects of CR gas has been made by the senior medical officers of his Department since 1991; how many published and internal papers have been written by his Department's medical officers on this subject since 1991; and what are the current security classifications of these reports. [45311]

Dr. Reid: No such assessment has been made by my Department since 1991. No published or internal papers on the subject have, therefore, been written by my Department's medical officers since 1991.

UN Peacekeeping Operations

Mr. Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many United Kingdom troops were engaged in United Nations peace keeping duties on 1 January in each of the last five years; and in what locations they were engaged and by the authority of which United Nations resolutions. [45463]

Dr. Reid: I refer the hon. Member to the letter I sent to the hon. Member for Portsmouth, South (Mr. Hancock) on 17 November 1997, a copy of which has been placed in the Library of the House. The only change, as of 1 January 1998, to the figures quoted in my letter for UK Service personnel serving on current UN peacekeeping operations is the addition of five in UNFICYP (Cyprus), making a total of 409. Since 1 January, however, the numbers of UK personnel deployed in UNFICYP has reduced from 409 to 312 to allow the integration of a Dutch contingent of 102 personnel. And in UNOMIG, following a UN freeze on the rotation of personnel due to the deterioration in the security situation in Georgia, the number of UK personnel deployed has reduced from seven to one.

The additional information requested on the relevant United Nations Security Council resolutions (UNSCRs) for peacekeeping operations on which United Kingdom troops were deployed in the last five years is as follows:

UNFICYP (Cyprus)—UNSCR 186;

UNIKOM (Iraq)—UNSCR 689;

UNOMIG (Georgia)—UNSCR 858;

UNPROFOR (Croatia/Bosnia)—UNSCR 743;

UNCRO (Croatia)—UNSCR 981;

UNAVEM III (Angola)—UNSCR 976;

MINURSO (Western Sahara)—UNSCR 690.

Territorial Army

Mr. Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 7 May 1998, Official Report, column 436, on the Territorial Army, when he expects to write to the hon. Member for Banbury. [45462]

Dr. Reid: I wrote to the hon. Member on 15 June and a copy of my letter has been placed in the Library of the House.

King's Own Border Regiment

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the establishment strength of the First Battalion King's Own Border Regiment; and what is the current number of soldiers in the regiment. [45811]

Dr. Reid: The First Battalion Kings Own Border Regiment has an establishment strength of 770. The current number of soldiers serving in the Regiment is 750.

Eritrea

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the role of the Royal Marines and Royal Air Force in Eritrea. [46095]

Mr. George Robertson: At 0730 on the morning of Saturday 6 June, following a request from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, an RAF C-130 Hercules aircraft left RAF Lyneham, Wiltshire for Eritrea with a party of 18 Royal Marines on board to conduct an evacuation of UK citizens stranded by the fighting there. After refuelling in Crete, the aircraft arrived in Asmara late in the evening and spent an hour on the ground during which time the Royal Marines, carrying light weapons, helped to marshal evacuees and provide protection. The aircraft picked up the remaining 40 or so UK citizens who wished to leave, together with the Honorary Consul as well as around 60 other foreign nationals.

Executive Agencies (Performance Targets)

Mr. Fitzpatrick: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what key targets have been set for the Chief Executive of the Naval Recruiting and Training Agency for 1998–99. [46285]

Dr. Reid: The Chief Executive of the Naval Recruiting and Training Agency has been set the following key targets for 1998–99:

1. To deliver personnel to the trained strength (or to other training organisations) within 10 per cent. variance from the tasked requirement.
2. To obtain a Customer Satisfaction Rating of at least 91 per cent.
3. To maintain success rates of 95 per cent. in Career Training and 97 per cent. in examined Pre-joining training.
4. To increase the strength of the RNR to at least 3,100 by 31 March 1999.
5. To retain tasked capacity while operating NRTA within its 1998–99 cash allocation of £233 million, a reduction of £7 million (3 per cent.) from 1997–98 figures.
6. To break even over the year in respect of the partnering arrangement with Flagship Training Ltd.
7. To review the NRTA's Corporate IS Strategy and produce a supporting Action Plan for its implementation, by 31 March 1999.
8. To include satisfactory accounts in the Agency Annual Report for Financial Year 1997–98, in preparation for passing a full external NAO Audit on the 1998–99 accounts included in the following year's Annual Report.

Mr. Fitzpatrick: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what key targets have been set for the Chief Executive of the RAF Personnel Management Agency for 1998–99. [46287]

Dr. Reid: Key Targets have been set for the Chief Executive of the RAF Personnel Management Agency for the Financial Year as follows:

Key Target 1

a. To ensure that the percentage of Peacetime Established Posts filled, as a ratio of the manning level, is 91.70% or greater.

b. To man War, Tension, Crisis and MOD Authorised Unestablished tasks at 95% or greater.

Key Target 2

To ensure that 80% or more of personnel given a posting that qualifies for a domestic move receive the required notice.

Key Target 3

To increase the number of operationally employable reservists to 2,900 by 31 March 1999.

Key Target 4

To ensure that the percentage variation between the actual trained strength and the authorised trained strength, taken as an average over the Financial Year, is no greater than +/- 1%.

Key Target 5

To deliver the £353,500, or 3% savings that accrue from the efficiencies planned for the Financial Year 1998–99.

Mr. Fitzpatrick: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what key targets have been set for the Chief Executive of the Training Group Defence Agency for 1998–99. [46288]

Dr. Reid: Key Targets have been set for the Chief Executive of the Training Group Defence Agency for the Financial Year 1998–99 as follows:

Key Target—Quality of Product

Achievement of customer satisfaction with the quality of graduate trainees as reflected in Customer Advisory Committee reports to the Air-Officer Commanding in Chief.

Target for 1998–99: Development of quality monitoring system by 31 March 1999.

Key Target 2—Efficiency

To deliver the savings that accrue from the efficiencies planned for FY98—99.

Target for 1998–99: £10.4M (3%)

Key Target 3a—Quantity of Output (Flying Training)

The percentage of trained aircrew delivered against RAF requirements.

Target for 1998–99: 96.0%.

Key Target 3b—Quantity of Output (Ground Training)

The percentage of trained personnel delivered against RAF requirements.

Target for 1998–99: 97.0%.

Key Target 4—Development of Output Costings and Unit Cost Measures

To provide full output costings and associated unit cost measures for the Agency by FY00–01.

Target for 1998–99: Output costing model.

Mr. Fitzpatrick: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what key targets have been set for the Chief Executive of the Army Base Repair Organisation for 1998–99. [46286]

Dr. Reid: The Chief Executive of the Army Base Repair Organisation has been set the following Key Targets:

1. To deliver a responsive service which matches the needs of the customer in peace and for operations to the agreed timeliness, quantity and quality criteria, to the maximum extent possible with available resources.
2. To remain within ABRO's allocated cash budget.
3. To reduce the ratio of labour costs to hours of production by 2 per cent. from those of the averaged last three years.
4. To delivery objective measures of customer satisfaction.
5. To deliver an implementation plan embracing the endorsed recommendations from the Agency and ES Next Steps Reviews.

SOCIAL SECURITY

War Widows

Mr. Wills: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many claims for war widows' pensions based (a) wholly and (b) in part on exposure to nuclear tests were (i) accepted and (ii) rejected in the periods (1) January 1988 to December 1993 and (2) January 1994 to May 1998; [45217]

(2) how many of the widows who were awarded war widows' pensions in the period from January 1988 to December 1993, based (a) wholly or (b) in part on their husbands' exposure to nuclear tests, have continued to receive the pension; [45190]

(3) how many claims for war widows' pension were made by widows of nuclear test veterans, based wholly or in part on exposure to nuclear tests in the periods (a) January 1988 to December 1993 and (b) January 1994 to May 1998. [45283]

Mr. Denham: One of our key aims is that delivery of service should be simpler and more efficient. The administration of the War Pensions Agency is a matter for its Chief Executive, Mr. Gordon Hextall. I have asked him to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from G. Hextall to Mr. Michael Wills, dated 15 June 1998:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions about claims and awards of War Widows Pension related to exposure to nuclear tests, between the dates January 1988 to December 1993 and January 1994 to May 1998.

Under the War Pension Scheme a War Pension may be awarded to ex-servicemen or their widows in respect of death or disablement which is due to service in the Armed Forces. Consequently, claims may be made by the widows of men who participated in the UK nuclear weapons test programme in respect of a wide variety of conditions which may have lead to or hastened death. The War Pensions Agency collates data on all cases where it is claimed that the late husband was exposed to excess radiation as a result of participation in the tests, even where the claim for pension is for a condition a widow has not regarded as related to such exposure.

The Secretary of State's normal policy is that where there is reliable evidence of exposure to excess ionising radiation and a recognised link between a claimed condition and such exposure, an award of War Pension may be made.

As a result of concern amongst some test participants about the effects their participation has had on their health, the Ministry of Defence commissioned an independent study by the National Radiological Protection Board (NRPB). The study compared the mortality and cancer incidence in over 20,000 test participants with that of a similar-sized control group of ex-servicemen who had not participated in the test programme.

The NRPB Report, published in 1988, concluded that participation in the UK tests has not had a detectable affect on the participants' expectation of life, nor on their risk of developing cancer in general. It did, however, raise a reasonable doubt that leukaemia (other than chronic lymphatic leukaemia) and multiple myeloma might be due to participation. Whilst the NRPB Report did not causally relate leukaemia specifically to participation in the nuclear weapons tests, its evidence was nevertheless accepted as raising a reasonable doubt that these two conditions may have resulted from such participation. The relevant War Pension Legislation provides that an award may be made if, on the basis of reliable evidence, there is a reasonable doubt that a condition is due to service; the benefit of any reasonable doubt is given to the claimant. Awards of War Pension were therefore made on that basis.

In the table, the "total awarded" figure represents the total number of awards of War Widows' Pensions made to the widows of men who participated in the tests. Awards therefore include both those made as a result of the Secretary of State's normal policy following the evidence from the NRPB, and those made as the result of a condition arising from service unrelated to participation in the tests. The awards made as a result of the NRPB reports are recorded in the next column headed "Radiation Award".

Awards made as a result of NRPB reports

	January 1988 to December 1993	January 1994 to May 1998
Claims received	104	55
Total awarded	24	6
Radiation award	12	0
Rejected	80	41

8 claims are still under consideration.

The 12 Radiation Awards for 1988–1993 are included in the Total Awarded column.

Of the 24 awards made between January 1988 and December 1993, our records show that 18 widows are still in receipt of a War Widows Pension.

I hope you find my reply helpful.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Terry Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what targets have been established by her Department for the time to be taken by the Child Support Agency to deal with claims for compensation. [45765]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mrs. Faith Boardman. She will write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Mrs. Faith Boardman to Mr. Terry Davis, dated 15 June 1998:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about Child Support Agency compensation payments, normally referred to as special payments.

A special payment is considered where a clear and unambiguous error by the Agency has resulted in an actual financial loss to the customer which is not recoverable through other means. No set target has been given to the Agency for the length of time taken to award such payments. Each case is carefully considered on its individual merits and depending on the complexity of the case, the length of time required to reach a decision can vary considerably.

The Agency has a discrete unit to deal with claims for special payments. This ensures that each case receives individual attention and helps achieve fairness and an appropriate standard of consistency in an essentially discretionary scheme. All cases are now treated with priority and are normally dealt with in order of the date of receipt.

The number of claims is small compared with our overall caseload of over 770,000 live and assessed cases. But it has risen as a result of the increases in the Agency's current workloads and of our recent actions to clear the backlog of maintenance applications which had accumulated in the Agency during its first 2–3 years. In 1997/98 the Agency cleared 595,000 maintenance applications compared with 357,000 in 1996/97 and reduced the number of maintenance applications over 52 weeks old from 225,000 to 110,000.

We recognise that the length of time taken to deal with special payments in some instances has been protracted; we have recently reorganised our resources in this area and streamlined procedures with the aim of resolving special payments more speedily. As a result, the majority of individual claims which had been outstanding have been processed since December 1997 and the time for dealing with new claims has reduced significantly. Since December 1997 a total of 585 new cases have been cleared and 1719 new cases are at various stages of action. We also recognise that by improving our underlying service and efficiency we can avoid the need for such claims. We are on course to clear the rest of the backlog of maintenance applications over 52 weeks old by the end of 1998/99.

We acknowledge that in the past our basic levels of customer service have been unacceptable and we are sorry that our failings may on occasion have caused inconvenience, frustration, distress and financial hardship. During 1997/98 we developed the Customer Service Strategy, our customer service improvement plan for the next four years. The Strategy will improve performance standards; information and openness; consultation and choice; courtesy and helpfulness and provide value for money. We have begun action on some of our customer service initiatives but it will take three to four years to deliver everything. However, we expect customers to see some real improvements by the end of 1998/99.

I hope this is helpful.

ADAPT Project

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when she intends to respond to proposals made by the three private sector consortiums involved in the ADAPT project; and if she will place a copy of the proposals in the Library. [46031]

Mr. Keith Bradley: This is a matter for Peter Mathison, the Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. David Rendel, dated 15 June 1998:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking when she intends to respond to proposals made by the three private sector consortiums involved in the ADAPT project; and if a copy of the proposals will be placed in the Library.

To date, the Project has received one formal proposal from one of the private sector consortia. This has been given due consideration and a response has been given to the relevant consortia.

The Benefits Agency is working collaboratively with all three of the private sector consortia to jointly develop appropriate ideas which will meet Government's objectives and fit with the Benefits Agency's business.

The proposal which was submitted contained information of a commercially confidential nature and, as such, it is not appropriate to place copies of the document in the Library.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

National Insurance

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when the Contributions Agency expects to start processing NI returns for the current tax year using the new NIRS2 computer system. [46030]

Mr. Denham: The processing of National Insurance returns using the NIRS2 system is a matter for George Bertram, the Chief Executive of the Contributions Agency. He will write to the hon. Member with further details.

Letter from David Slater to Mr. David Rendel, dated 15 June 1998:

George Bertram is the Chief Executive of the Contributions Agency and has the responsibility for answering questions about operational matters relating to the Agency under which the processing of National Insurance returns on NIRS2 falls. In the absence of Mr. Bertram, I have been asked to answer your question about processing National Insurance returns using NIRS2 on his behalf.

The new National Insurance Recording System (NIRS2) release which supports the processing of National Insurance (NI) returns is undergoing formal acceptance testing. On current plans, the processing of NI returns for the 1997–98 tax year will commence during July 1998, subject of course to satisfactory completion of the acceptance testing.

The Contributions Agency will expect to process NI returns for the "current" tax year (1998–1999) with effect from April 1999.

Benefit Fraud Inspectorate

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimated savings have resulted from the work of the Benefit Fraud Inspectorate. [46223]

Mr. Field: The role of the Benefit Fraud Inspectorate (BFI) is to inspect and report on the counter-fraud performance of local authorities and DSS agencies. It will raise standards by publishing reports with recommendations and by identifying and encouraging good practice across organisational boundaries. It is too soon to quantify the savings local authorities and DSS agencies will make by implementing the recommendations in the BFI's first report.

Parental Leave

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if employees who apply for unpaid parental leave from work and whose incomes are low, will be able, under her proposals for extending parental leave, to receive state benefits. [46145]

Mr. Denham: The Government are keen to support a strong family-friendly culture in the workplace. Family-friendly employment policies are good for parents, good for children, good for business and good for the economy. We are working with employers, voluntary organisations and trade unions to promote family-friendly policies and encourage best practice. We are also introducing for the first time a framework of rights for employees—these rights will include time off for mothers and fathers at the time of birth, as well as time off for parents when their children are taken ill. The interaction between parental leave and benefit entitlement is being considered as part of our wider review of family-friendly working arrangements.

Pensions Education Working Group

Mr. Healey: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when she will publish the report of the Pensions Education Working Group. [46454]

Mr. Denham: Last September, as part of the Governments Pension Review, we commissioned the Pensions Education Working Group Report to look at ways of improving education and awareness of pension issues. Today we are pleased to be publishing their report 'Getting to know about Pensions', copies of which have been placed in the Library.

The Pension Provision Group report, published on 4 June 1998, identified that many people will face an avoidable drop in income in retirement because they do not make adequate provision for themselves over and above the basic State pension. One of the key issues underlying this problem is the lack of financial awareness and good information on pensions.

Today's report provides a clear and concise analysis of the need for improved education and is an important contribution to addressing the challenge, identified in the Pension Provision Group report, to bring about a significant improvement in people's understanding about pensions and the need to make sufficient provision.

The report makes a series of recommendations for action. The Government's response is being considered as part of the pensions review, but action has already been taken to improve the quality of information provided by the Department of Social Security.

We are grateful to members of the Pensions Education Working Group for the time, commitment and expertise they have provided. We are pleased that the Group has agreed to continue to carry forward its work in a number of areas.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Fire Safety

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many reports his Department has received in each of the past five years of cases of death or injuries caused by fire in unlicensed bed-and-breakfast establishments. [45373]

Mr. George Howarth: The information requested is not available centrally.

CS Gas

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will list the manufacturers of CS spray devices which have been evaluated for use by police forces by the police scientific development branch since 1994; for what reasons the police scientific development branch recommended the purchase of CS sprays produced by SAE Alsetex; and how many police forces are currently purchasing stocks of CS sprays from SAE Alsetex; [45309]

(2) if he will list the police forces which (a) have and (b) have not issued CS sprays to officers; [45306]

(3) what research has been conducted by the police scientific development branch since 1995 into the safety and effectiveness of reducing the strength of CS in CS sprays currently issued to police officers; when this research was carried out; what are the current security classifications of reports resulting from this research; and if he will place copies of the results of this research in the Library; [45307]

(4) what plans he has to reduce the strength of CS in CS sprays currently issued to police officers to below five per cent.; and what assessment he has made of the safety of the current strength; [45308]

(5) what research has been commissioned by his Department from the DERA since July 1997 into alternative solvents for CS sprays and for what reasons; when this research was commissioned; what are the current security classifications of the reports resulting from this research; and if he will place copies of this research in the Library. [45305]

Mr. Michael: Individual chief officers are responsible for deciding which type of equipment to issue. All forces in England and Wales, apart from Northamptonshire, Nottinghamshire and Sussex, have now issued CS sprays to their officers. A specification issued by the Association of Chief Police Officers (ACPO) on the purchase of CS sprays, reflecting advice from the Home Office Police Scientific Development Branch, recommends a five per cent. concentration of CS. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has no plans to suggest that this guidance is changed. Operational use of this concentration by the French police for many years has been found to be effective in delivering the required amount of incapacitant in a short time. Lower concentrations of CS would require the delivery of a larger quantity of liquid over a longer period to produce an operationally effective dose. It is the total quantity of CS which may be delivered which is relevant to consideration of safety. The specification issued by the ACPO provides that the total content of CS in a can should not exceed 5g to comply with a recommendation by the 1971 inquiry (the Himsworth inquiry) into the medical and toxicological aspects of CS, relating to the use of CS in enclosed spaces. A copy of the report of that inquiry is in the Library.

At the end of 1997, the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency carried out a literature review on behalf of the Home Office to identify possible alternative solvents. None was identified. Work in this area by the Home Office Police Scientific Development Branch is continuing.

The Branch does not recommend any particular manufacturer of CS spray. CS sprays produced by SAE Alsetex have been chosen by some police forces because they performed best in a competitive national tendering process managed by the Metropolitan Police on behalf of ACPO. Details of how many forces have purchased equipment from SAE Alsetex are not held centrally.

Prisoners

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) men and (b) women were in prison in England and Wales for serious sex offences on 1 June. [45447]

Ms Quin: The available information for all sexual offences is for 30 April and is given in the table.

Population in prisons in England and Wales under sentence for sexual offences on 30 April 1998[1]

[1] Provisional figures

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) men and (b) women were being held as category A prisoners in prisons in England and Wales on 1 June. [45445]

Ms Quin: On 1 June 1998, 839 men and 4 women were classified as Category A prisoners.

Police Officers

Mr. Efford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what research has been (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated by his Department in respect of racial awareness training for police officers. [45643]

Mr. Michael: There have been various evaluation studies of training courses and seminars run by the Home Office and the matter has been addressed in the course of reports on issues which have a bearing on racial awareness training.

In 1984, a report was published of the evaluation of an experimental series of four short courses in racism awareness training sponsored by the Home Office. In 1991, Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary (supported by Her Majesty's Inspectorate (Schools) and an independent assessor) inspected the Home Office Specialist Support Unit (SSU), which provides expert community and race relations training to the police. In 1993, the Home Office Police Research Group evaluated the six-week course in racial awareness offered by the Specialist Support Unit. In 1995, the Home Office Research and Planning Unit carried out a study of the annual Holly Royde seminar which is intended to help the police to address their local policing priorities and practice with a greater awareness of the multi-racial context in which they operate. These studies have highlighted the need to build racism awareness training into regular training programmes.

Details of other research into areas which have a bearing on racial awareness training are as follows:

Police Research Group report on reducing repeat racial victimisation—November 1995 (ISBN 1–85893–453–2).

Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary's thematic report on police community and race relations—October 1997 (ISBN 1–85893–9658).

Police Research Group report on policing racially motivated incidents—November 1979 (ISBN 1–85893–988–7).

Much of this research concluded that more work needed to be done on building a better relationship between the police and the community. This included recommendations that police officers receive training in community and race relations generally and, more specifically, in developing a greater sensitivity to the impact of racial attacks on the community and in responding to ethnic minority groups.

Mr. Efford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to introduce more rigorous background checks for future applicants to join the police force. [45709]

Mr. Michael: All new recruits to the police service are subject to a vetting procedure. It is for individual forces to determine what other background checks are made in respect of those officers who have been selected for appointment to the police service. I have seen no evidence to suggest that these procedures are not satisfactory.

Mr. Efford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement regarding racial awareness training procedures for the police indicating what training is compulsory. [45711]

Mr. Michael: At national level, all police officers receive training in community and race relations (CRR) as part of their probationer training. CRR forms part of the Strategic Command Course (which, since 1990, has been mandatory for all officers being appointed to the Association of Chief Police Officer ranks) and is also included in the Police Sergeants' Programme and the Inspectors' Management Development Course (which newly promoted Sergeants and Inspectors respectively are expected to attend) and the Trainers' Development Programme. The Staff College at Bramshill also runs a dedicated course on policing racial incidents.

Minimum Effective Training Levels in equal opportunities and community and race relations in the form of behavioural statements for officers up to and including inspector rank, have been devised and work is in hand to incorporate them into the national curriculum.

Further CRR training within forces is a matter for individual chief officers and the extent of such training and whether or not it is compulsory varies from force to force. Some forces run specific courses covering diversity issues, others integrate community and race relations issues within existing courses. Some forces make use of expert consultancy organisations in providing this training.

The Home Office funds a Specialist Support Unit which provides independent expert community and race relations training and advice to the police service. In the past, efforts have focused on training force trainers who cascade the training to officers in their forces. We will be implementing a new strategy for the provision of this specialist support from 1999 which will focus on:

completing the integration of community and race relations throughout the national training curriculum; and support and training to individual forces to place community and race relations firmly within operational policing activities.

The Home Office also runs the Holly Royde seminar annually for police managers which focuses on the relationship between the police and the public—particularly minority ethnic communities—and the implications for operational policing in multi-racial Britain.

Police Training Procedures

Mr. Efford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the last independent review of police training procedures was conducted; and what plans he has to instigate another review. [45644]

Mr. Michael: Ministers are currently giving active consideration to the best way of improving the quality and comprehensiveness of police training. There has been no fully independent review specifically of police training in recent years. The report by Lord Scarman on the Brixton disorders in 1981 made a number of important recommendations relating to police training and there have also been a number of internal or partly independent reviews since then. A series of reviews led to the creation of National Police Training (NPT) in 1993. A strategic review of NPT began in 1997 and is expected to be completed later this year. A review of probationer training was carried out between 1994–95. Her Majesty's Inspector of Constabulary is carrying out a thematic inspection of police training, which is expected to be completed early in 1999.

West Mercia Constabulary

Mr. Michael J. Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many police constables were employed by West Mercia Constabulary in each of the years 1979 to 1997; [45673]

(2) what was the police officer strength of West Mercia Constabulary in each of the years 1979 to 1997. [45674]

Mr. Michael: The information available is set out in the table. It is not possible to provide details of the number of constables prior to 1990.

West Mercia Constabulary

Year[1]	Total constable strength	Total officer strength
1979	n/a	1,777

[1] Figures provided are as at 30 September for each year

Asylum Seekers

Sir Norman Fowler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many appeals are currently outstanding against an initial decision to refuse political asylum; and if he will make a statement. [45520]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: As at 30 April 1998 (the most recent date for which information is available) there were 23,815 asylum appeals outstanding with the Immigration Appellate Authority. The total number has been falling steadily from a peak of 26,180 in August 1997.

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for what reason interviews with asylum seekers at Heathrow are conducted in designated secure areas. [45634]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Immigration Service control accommodation is provided by the port operator. As the business of the Immigration Service at Heathrow is to process arriving passengers and conduct interviews under Schedule 2 of the Immigration Act 1971, the accommodation provided is most appropriately sited close to the immigration arrivals control. A designated secure area provides confidentiality and enables the Service to fulfil duty of care obligations to both interviewees and officials.

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what instructions were issued by his Department to the Immigration Service at Heathrow regarding the revised arrangements for access to immigration and asylum interviews which came into operation on 1 March. [45636]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: At Heathrow, representatives are now required to provide details of employees in advance of their attendance at ports. This is to facilitate airside clearance for representatives and their interpreters.

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidance he has issued on how asylum seekers should be informed of a decision which affects their entitlement to benefits. [45632]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Asylum caseworkers have been instructed to notify an asylum seeker who is known to be in receipt of benefits of the refusal of the application at the same time as the Benefits Agency is notified of the refusal, if consideration is to be given to enforcing removal from the United Kingdom.

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for what reason asylum seekers whose cases are unresolved but who have permission to work are excluded from acting as interpreters in asylum interviews at Heathrow. [45635]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: It is not appropriate to allow asylum seekers, including those who have permission to work, to act as interpreters in asylum interviews. This is both to safeguard the security of the port and those in our care, whilst at the same time ensuring the integrity of an asylum application.

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his estimate of the cost to his Department of asylum seekers whose application has not been resolved in the last year for which figures are available. [45543]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: The information requested is not available, but the total cost to the Home Office in 1997–98 of dealing with asylum seekers is estimated to be about £80 million. The estimate includes dealing with asylum seekers at ports of entry, deciding asylum claims, handling subsequent appeals work, removing failed asylum seekers and detaining some asylum seekers. It is not possible to give precise figures as not all the costs associated with asylum seekers can be identified separately within total immigration spending.

In addition, the Home Office paid grant of about £7 million to non-governmental organisations in assistance to asylum seekers and refugees.

Firearms Compensation

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the current delay in processing applications for compensation under Category C of the Firearms Compensation Scheme; and what was the delay (a) one month ago and (b) two months ago. [45548]

Mr. Michael: The Firearms Compensation Section (FCS) is currently working on Option C claims lodged with the police on 13 July 1997. I regret that information is not available on the comparable processing dates in previous months. Having cleared the claims under Options A and B of the compensation scheme, the FCS is now devoting its resources to processing the remaining claims under Option C. Around 900 payments totalling over £3.1 million have been made under Option C, including interim payments to firearms dealers, and offers of payment have been made in a further 450 cases. These will be processed as soon as the necessary Declarations have been returned by the claimant. I outlined the timetable for completion of Option C payments in the reply I gave to the hon. Member for North Thanet (Mr. Gale) on 8 June 1998, Official Report, columns 438–39.

Deaf Prisoners

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will take steps to (a) identify, (b) promote and (c) disseminate good practice in the way in which prison officers deal with deaf prisoners throughout the Prison Service. [45476]

Ms Quin: The Prison Service does recognise the needs of deaf prisoners. Most recently, the Service's Instruction 79/1996 alerted governors, in keeping with the first provisions of the Disability Discrimination Act (DDA) 1995, of the need to comply with these provisions which are concerned with attitudes towards disabled people and an awareness of their needs, and prohibiting discrimination against them in relation to access to goods, facilities and services. Further guidance will be published later this year on the management of prisoners with physical and sensory disabilities, setting out practice to be implemented across all establishments in England and Wales. In implementing the provisions of the DDA, the Prison Service will consult with external organisations representing people with hearing, sight and other disabilities.

Prisons (Beef)

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the availability of (a) imported and (b) British beef in prisons. [45518]

Ms Quin: Both British and imported beef is available to all prison establishments through centrally negotiated contracts. It is purchased by establishments to a quality specification set by the Meat and Livestock Commission.

DNA Results (Exchanges)

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Hendon (Mr. Dismore) of 5 June 1998, Official Report, columns 378–80, if he will place in the Library the report on the exchange of DNA analysis results. [45715]

Mr. Michael: This document has already been deposited in the Library.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list (a) the PFI projects currently under way and (b) those under consideration for the police service in England and Wales. [45695]

Mr. Michael: The information requested is as follows.

Private Finance Initiative (PFI): Police Authority Projects in England and Wales

(a) Projects currently underway:

Derbyshire—Ilkeston Police Station (contract awarded February 1998)

Northumbria—Mounted Section Facility (contract awarded May 1998)

Wiltshire—Air Support (contract awarded December 1997)

(b) Projects under consideration:

England

Cheshire—Force HQ/Training Centre

Cleveland/Durham—Firearms Training

Cumbria—Workington Divisional Police Station

Derbyshire—Derby Divisional HQ

Dorset—Divisional HQ and Police Station (Dorchester)

Greater Manchester—Forcewide Property Review

Hertfordshire—Communications System

Norfolk—Force HQ

Nottinghamshire—Area Traffic Wing

Thames Valley—Area HQ and Sector Station (Abingdon)

Metropolitan Police—i) 3 Divisional Police Stations (Bromley, Lewisham and Sutton); ii)Firearms Training

Wales

Dyfed-Powys—i) Ammanford Police Station; ii) Lampeter Police Station

Gwent—Ystrad Mynach Police Station

North Wales—Divisional HQ and Police Station (Rhyl).

Emergency Control Centres

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the benefits of (a) amalgamating and (b) integrating (i) locally and (ii) nationally police, fire and ambulance emergency control centres. [45696]

Mr. Michael: We are currently engaged in a consultation exercise with the police, fire and ambulance services on the possibility of sharing control rooms. The exercise is looking at the potential efficiency savings and other operational benefits of the shared use of control rooms by the three emergency services, as well as considering any down-side.

Chief Police Officers

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list each of the chief police officers in England and Wales indicating the names and their assistants and how long each has been in post. [45680]

Mr. Michael: The table shows the information requested.

Motorists (Drug Tests)

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on progress in the development of the portable drug testing device suitable for testing motorists suspected of driving under the influence of drugs. [45672]

Mr. Michael: Work by the Police Scientific Development Branch on the possibility of developing a portable drug testing device is continuing. The police service has recently completed trials of two devices for screening motorists for drugs on the roadside. The results of the trials are being evaluated by the Forensic Science Service and the Transport Research Laboratory.

Community Policing

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what research he has evaluated into the effectiveness of community policing in other countries. [45703]

Mr. Michael: Research literature on various aspects of effective policing was recently reviewed by the Home Office Research and Statistics Directorate as part of the Comprehensive Spending Review.

The Home Office Police Research Group is in close contact with the National Institute of Justice (NIJ) which is evaluating community policing in the United States. The NIJ is currently hosting a fact finding visit by Police Research Group researchers, who will review the United States Department of Justice Office of Community Oriented Policing Services, which is responsible for promoting and funding community policing strategies across the United States.

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what requests he has received from foreign (a) Governments and (b) police forces for information on the United Kingdom's community policing. [45699]

Mr. Michael: My Department regularly exchanges information with foreign Governments and police forces about policing issues and often receives visitors from them. We have sent copies of the reports of the Home Office Police Research Group, which include those on community policing strategies, to 44 countries.

On 9 and 10 June, we hosted a European Union seminar, "Partnerships in Reducing Crime", covering community safety, policing methods for tackling anti-social behaviour, and partnerships to reduce juvenile crime. The key findings of the seminar will be reported to the European Union Police Co-operation Working Group with recommendations for follow-up action. Representatives from Canada and the USA took part in the seminar, as well as representatives from across Europe.

Bosnian Asylum Seekers (Cumbria)

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he had made of the number of Bosnian asylum seekers presently resident in Cumbria. [45700]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: I regret that information on the number of Bosnian asylum applicants currently resident in Cumbria could be obtained only by examination of individual case records and is, therefore, available only at disproportionate cost.

999 Calls

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many 999 calls were received by (a) the Fire Service and (b) the Police Service in the last year for which figures are available. [45697]

Mr. George Howarth: In 1996–97, the number of 999 calls received by police forces in England and Wales totalled 7,297,219.

Figures for 999 calls received by fire brigades in England and Wales are not collected. This is because brigades may receive multiple 999 calls for a single incident. Brigades therefore record the number of incidents actually attended. In 1996, brigades attended a total of 1,060,727 incidents. This figure includes fires, false alarms and special service incidents.

West Midlands Police

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received in respect of granting bravery awards in the West Midlands Constabulary. [45683]

Mr. Michael: Nominations for gallantry awards for police officers are usually made by chief constables to the Home Office. However, I have received representations from the Chairman of the Metropolitan Police Federation, Black Police Officers Association and a member of the public concerning the actions of two Metropolitan Police officers who were involved in an undercover drugs operation assisting the West Midlands Police.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many times the Chief Constable of West Midlands has made recommendations for bravery awards in the last year for which figures are available. [45682]

Mr. Michael: The Chief Constable for West Midlands did not submit any recommendations for bravery awards to the Home Office in 1997; nor has he done so to date this year.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers have taken the (a) West Midlands Police Force and (b) Staffordshire Police Force to industrial tribunals on race-related matters in each of the last three years. [45675]

Mr. Michael: None.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many officers in West Midlands were (a) killed on duty and (b) given bravery awards in (i) 1997, (ii) 1996 and (iii) 1995. [45684]

Mr. Michael: One police officer from West Midlands was killed on duty in 1995 and one was killed while on a tour of duty in Bosnia in 1996. No officers from the West Midlands Police Force were killed on duty during 1997.

No police officers from West Midlands received a bravery award during 1995, 1996 or 1997.

Police (Deaths and Bravery Awards)

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers were (a) killed on duty and (b) received bravery awards in 1997. [45685]

Mr. Michael: Three police officers were killed while on duty in England and Wales during 1997. Eleven police officers in England and Wales received either the Queen's Gallantry Medal (QGM) or the Queen's Commendation for Bravery (QCB) in 1997.

Prisons (Drugs)

Mr. Faber: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) to what degree during (i) the residential, (ii) the therapeutic community-based and (iii) the 12 step prison drug treatment programmes evaluated by PDM Consulting Ltd. prisoners were protected from unsupervised contact with others while in treatment; [45560]

(2) what proportion of prisoners who tested positive for drugs whilst on (i) the residential, (ii) the therapeutic community-based and (iii) the 12 step prison drug treatment programmes evaluated by PDM Consulting Ltd. were removed from the programmes; [45559]

(3) what was the cost (a) per place and (b) per completion of (i) the residential, (ii) the therapeutic community-based and (iii) the 12 step prison drug treatment services evaluated by PDM Consulting Ltd.; [45556]

(4) how often as part of (i) the residential, (ii) the therapeutic community-based and (iii) the 12 step prison drug treatment programmes evaluated by PDM Consulting Ltd., prisoners on the programmes were tested for drugs; [45561]

(5) when the full version of the evaluation by PDM Consulting Ltd. of prison drug treatment services will be published; and if he will make a statement; [45557]

(6) what proportion of prisoners on (i) the residential, (ii) the therapeutic community-based and (iii) the 12 step prison drug treatment programmes evaluated by PDM Consulting Ltd. successfully completed the programmes; and what were the reasons for the failure of those who failed to complete them. [45558]

Mr. George Howarth [holding answer 15 June 1998]: PDM Consulting Ltd. were contracted to monitor and evaluate the first fourteen pilot drug treatment projects. Over the last three years, they have produced a sequence of reports, most of which were intended for internal use only. They contain, for example, sensitive financial information about treatment services at individual establishments provided by external agencies which it would be inappropriate to publish for commercial reasons.

Copies have, however, been provided to the governors of the prison establishments involved and, where appropriate, to the relevant outside agency.

The executive report, which included a summary of recommendations, was published with the new Prison Service drugs strategy on 12 May.

Aggregated performance management data provided by PDM Consulting Ltd. covering 12 months operation of the different treatment programmes are given in table A. Care is needed in interpreting the figures because of variations in the prisoner population, therapeutic content, programme objectives and the length of time they have been established within a custodial setting. They do not all relate to the same 12-month period.

Inmates on these programmes are subject to voluntary drug testing arrangements, the frequency of such testing varies across programme type and between individual prisons. Information about the actual frequency of testing on each programme is not held centrally. In addition, all inmates are subject to mandatory drug testing. There is significantly more voluntary drug testing than mandatory drug testing on these programmes.

Additional costs arising from the pilot programmes are shown in table B. Care is needed in comparing the additional costs of these programmes since the costs incurred vary according to the utilisation of Prison Service staff.

The numbers of those completing and leaving the pilot drug treatment programmes are detailed in table C.

None of the inmates participating in residential, therapeutic community or 12-Step programmes can be fully isolated from other prisoners. Where programmes are delivered in discrete accommodation, it is possible to minimise contact with other inmates, but it is often not practical to make separate arrangements for programme participants during domestic visits, kit change, canteen, association and chapel. A measure of contact is not necessarily undesirable as it will help inmates prepare for the pressures they will face on completion of their treatment.

Pilot drug treatment projects
Table A: Proportion of prisoners testing positive

Percentage positive	Residential	Therapeutic community	12 Step
Voluntary drug test	22	11	5
Mandatory drug test	20	15	6

Operational Police Policy Unit

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the officials from the Home Office Operational Police Policy Unit who have attended meetings of the Association of Chief Police Officers Sub Group on the Administration of Firearms Licensing Review Group and the dates of each such meeting in each of the last three years. [46105]

Mr. Michael: Information is available only in respect of meetings of the Association of Chief Police Officers Sub-Committee on the Administration of Firearms and Explosives Licensing held in the last two years. Home Office officials are not members of this Sub-Committee but have accepted invitations to attend the following meetings:

Metropolitan Police District

Mr. Ian Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to change the boundaries of the Metropolitan Police District to make them coterminous with the boundaries of the London boroughs. [46307]

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received on changing the boundaries of the Metropolitan Police area. [45663]

Mr. Straw: The Government are committed to improve the efficiency and effectiveness of the criminal justice system. Aligning the operational boundaries of the different agencies is an important element in this. The Crime and Disorder Bill's proposed changes to the youth justice system and creation of local crime reduction partnerships give added emphasis to the importance of boundary alignment. The recently announced changes to the Crown Prosecution Service (CPS) will make police and CPS operational boundaries coterminous.

I have in recent months received strong representations that the boundaries of the Metropolitan Police District, which stretch into Essex, Hertfordshire and Surrey, make more difficult effective joint working between the different criminal justice agencies.

The present boundaries are an historical anachronism dating back to early in the 19th century, before the advent of modern local government.

The Government have therefore decided that the Greater London Authority Bill, which will come before this House later this year, will provide for a change to the boundaries of the Metropolitan Police District to make them coterminous with those of the 32 London boroughs. As a result, those parts of Essex, Hertfordshire and Surrey which are currently policed by the Metropolitan Police Service will be policed by the respective county police forces.

This change will mean that local councils and criminal justice agencies in the county districts of the Metropolitan Police District will not have to work with two different police forces, which leads to inefficiency and duplication. The change will help to promote effective joint working between agencies as they implement the provisions in the Crime and Disorder Bill.

These boundary changes will also support democratic accountability and enable the Metropolitan Police to focus on policing London, a major task in itself. A majority of elected members on the new Metropolitan Police Authority will provide the vital democratic link between Londoners and the Metropolitan Police. Residents in those parts of Essex, Hertfordshire and Surrey currently policed by the Metropolitan Police will not have a vote in the elections for the Mayor and Assembly members. It is therefore right that those areas be policed by county forces whose Police Authorities already provide local democratic accountability in their areas.

I expect this change to take place in April 2000. Implementing it will require close co-operation between the relevant police forces, police authorities and local councils, and other interested parties. I have written to them today to inform them of my decision and to seek their views on how it should be implemented.

Animal Procedures Committee

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the publications since 1 January 1989 accredited to Dr. David Clark, which were notified to him before Dr Clark's appointment to the Animal Procedures Committee. [46256]

Mr. George Howarth: Dr. Clark was appointed on the advice of a panel set up to reflect the Nolan principles. I understand that his CV was considered by that panel, but it did not include a list of publications.

Lists of some publications accredited to Dr. Clark may have been submitted in support of licence applications or reporting the outcome of programmes of research. Records of such material are not kept centrally but I understand that his publications since January 1989 have focused on the need for, and application of, alternative methods.

Dr. Clark, and all the other recently appointed members, have already made useful contributions to the work of the Animal Procedures Committee. In Dr. Clark's case, his expertise on regulatory testing and his experience as a member of the Scientific Advisory Committee to the European Centre for the Validation of Alternative Methods are extremely valuable.

Probation Services

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the total case load undertaken by probation services; what was the average case load per probation officer; what was the real- terms change in the level of his Department's funding for probation services in each of the last five years for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [46260]

Ms Quin: The information requested is given in the table:

Year	Persons commencing supervision	Average caseload
1992	133,294	20.7
1993	142,152	21.3
1994	152,843	23.1
1995	154,546	25.0
1996	157,600	27.7

Year	Resources (£ million)
1992–93	313.0
1993–94	330.8
1994–95	343.3
1996–97	349.5

The overall supervision figures are taken from table 3.1 of the "Probation Statistics England and Wales 1996" and the average caseload figures are taken from table 8.13 of the same publication. The resources figures, which are expressed in real terms at 1996–97 prices using the Gross Domestic Product inflator, are taken from table 13.1 of the "Home Office Annual Report 1998". Both publications are in the Library.

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received expressing concern over the adequacy of resources available for probation services to fulfil their statutory obligations; and if he will make a statement. [46258]

Ms Quin: We have received representations about probation service resources from hon. Members and from the Central Probation Council, the Association of Chief Officers of Probation, the National Association of Probation Officers, area probation services and a number of individuals.

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many probation officers have been made redundant over the last 12 months; how many redundancies are currently planned; how many new probation staff are required to implement the proposals in the Crime and Disorder Bill [Lords]; and if he will make a statement. [46261]

Ms Quin: Information on redundancies is not collected centrally. The Financial Memorandum to the Crime and Disorder Bill [Lords] indicates that some 600 additional probation service staff will in due course be needed once the full effect of the relevant provisions has come through. This remains our best estimate although experience of operation of the relevant provisions will provide information bearing on it.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Arms Exports (European Code of Conduct)

12. Ms Southworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action his Department has taken to secure a European code of conduct on arms exports. [44525]

13. Ms Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps his Department has taken to establish a European code of conduct on arms exports. [44526]

23. Ms Rosie Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on progress towards a European Code of Conduct on arms exports. [44536]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: On 8 June, the General Affairs Council, under the UK Presidency, formally adopted the EU Code of Conduct on Arms Exports. The Code sets high common standards to govern arms exports from all EU Member States. A copy of the text has been placed in the Library of the House.

EU Reform

14. Mr. Derek Twigg: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made in increasing the openness and transparency of decision making in the European Union during the United Kingdom presidency. [44527]

Mr. Doug Henderson: Good progress has been made during our Presidency to make EU decision-making more open and transparent, for example by agreement to establish a public register of Council documents. This progress will reinforce the provisions on openness that we helped secure in the Amsterdam Treaty.

37. Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made during the UK presidency of the European Union towards addressing the democratic deficit in Europe. [44553]

Mr. Doug Henderson: Good progress has been made during the UK Presidency of the EU to extend democratic accountability in Europe. In particular we have worked to enhance parliamentary oversight at both the EU and national level, and to extend openness and transparency.

Iran

15. Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to visit Iran. [44528]

Mr. Fatchett: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has no immediate plans to visit Iran.

Algeria

16. Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he has taken to ensure that applications from Algeria for United Kingdom visitors' visas are not unfairly rejected on the ground of political instability in that country. [44529]

Mr. Fatchett: The Immigration Rules set out the requirements which must be met in considering visit visa applications overseas. These concentrate mainly on the circumstances and intentions of the applicant and include an assessment of the intention to leave the UK at the end of the visit. When relevant, the political and security situation in a given country would be taken into account in assessing applications, but would not in itself constitute grounds for refusal.

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will request the United Nations to appoint a special rapporteur to co-ordinate an investigation into human rights abuses in Algeria. [45978]

Mr. Fatchett: As EU Presidency, we maintained close contact with the United Nations throughout this year's UN Commission on Human Rights. At that conference and in our regular contacts with Algeria, we reminded the Algerian Government that we would welcome their full co-operation with the requirements of UN human rights mechanisms. There remains international concern about continued allegations of human rights abuses; we believe that access by UN experts to Algeria would be in the country's own best interests for the sake of greater domestic and international transparency.

Caribbean

18. Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has held relating to the relationship between the European Union and Caribbean countries. [44531]

Mr. Doug Henderson: We are in frequent contact with Caribbean colleagues at both ministerial and senior official level. My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary discussed the relationship between the European Union and the Caribbean with representatives from the region at the UK/Caribbean Forum in Nassau, Bahamas, in February. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for International Development also discussed the future of the Lomé Convention at the ACP-EC Council of Ministers in Barbados in May.

War Criminals (Bosnia)

20. Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the arrest of indicted war crime suspects in Bosnia. [44533]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The international community's robust approach on the war crimes issue has resulted in the arrest of half of those currently indicted for war crimes. Eight of these indictees have been detained in Bosnia by SFOR, and seven of these detentions have taken place in the British-commanded sector and involved British forces, either directly or in support.

However, the primary responsibility for bringing the remaining 31 war crimes indictees to justice lies with the Parties to Dayton themselves. We shall continue to press them to fulfil this, and all other, Dayton obligations.

EU Enlargement

21. Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the enlargement of the European Union. [44534]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The EU's preparations for enlargement are on schedule. I anticipate that Cardiff will welcome the fact that the UK Presidency has fully implemented the remit of the Luxembourg European Council. We have launched the European Conference, opened the Accession Process and started accession negotiations with the six countries considered to be ready.

29. Mr. Efford: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement about progress on Agenda 2000 in relation to the enlargement of the European Union. [44542]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The Cardiff European Council agreed to adopt the Agenda 2000 proposals by June 1999. This would ensure agreement to the future financing of the EU and the reform of the Common Agricultural Policy and Structural and Cohesion Funds ahead of enlargement.

Turkey

22. Sir Geoffrey Johnson Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on relations with Turkey. [44535]

Mr. Doug Henderson: I attach great importance to our relations with Turkey, and value our dialogue on a wide range of issues.

As Presidency of the European Union, we are working with our European partners and the European Commission to develop further relations between the Union and Turkey.

Sri Lanka

24. Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps Her Majesty's Government are taking to assist in the re-establishing of peace and democratic Government in Sri Lanka. [44537]

Mr. Fatchett: Sri Lanka has a democratically elected government. We believe a lasting solution to the ethnic conflict in Sri Lanka can be reached only through a political settlement. We have said publicly that we stand ready to help in the resolution of the conflict if both sides ask us to play a role.

Afghanistan

25. Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received about the position of women in Afghanistan. [44538]

Mr. Fatchett: We receive frequent correspondence expressing concern about the status of women and girls in Afghanistan. We share that concern. At the start of our EU Presidency we drew up and agreed a new Common Position on Afghanistan. This urges the Afghan factions to end discrimination and promote equal rights.

Nigeria

26. Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the Nigerian Government about presidential elections. [44539]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: General Abacha died early on 8 June. He has been replaced by General Abdulsalam Abubakar, formerly Chief of Defence Staff.

Late on 15 June General Abubakar announced the release of 9 political prisoners, including General Obasanjo. We welcome this courageous and compassionate decision. It is an important first step in the process of national reconstruction, reconciliation and development. We look forward to an early indication of General Abubakar's plans to effect a rapid and inclusive transition to civilian rule, including the resolution of the case of Chief Abiola and the remaining detainees. We remain ready to help and support that process.

Iraq

27. Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next intends to discuss Iraq with Secretary of State Albright. [44540]

Mr. Fatchett: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has regular discussions on Iraq with Secretary of State Albright.

Missile Technology Control Regime

28. Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the advantages of revising the missile technology control regime. [44541]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The Missile Technology Control Regime is a potent non-proliferation instrument. Its Guidelines are sound. Members keep under constant review the detailed provisions of the regime, notably the lists of sensitive equipment, as they relate to technological developments, including the emergence of more sophisticated cruise missile technology and its suitability for chemical and biological weapon delivery. Regime members regularly meet to exchange information and discuss ways of tackling missile proliferation in regions and countries of concern.

The Regime has evolved considerably and will evolve further in future to address missile proliferation issues.

Middle East Peace Process

30. Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on progress with the middle east peace process. [44543]

33. Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the current situation regarding the middle east peace process. [44546]

Mr. Fatchett: I refer my hon. Friends to the answer I gave in the House earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for Hendon (Mr. Dismore), Official Report, column 131–32.

Ottawa Treaty

31. Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he expects the United Kingdom to ratify the Ottawa treaty. [44544]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: We intend to ratify the Ottawa Convention as soon as the Parliamentary schedule allows for the legislation necessary to enable us to meet all our commitments under the Convention.

Ethical Foreign Policy

32. Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received from defence-related companies about his ethical foreign policy. [44545]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The FCO has had contacts with many defence-related companies, as well as with the Defence Manufacturers Association, about the application of the UK's arms export criteria.

Nuclear Tests (South Asia)

34. Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the European Union and UN Security Council responses to the nuclear test programmes in India and Pakistan. [44547]

Mr. Fatchett: The European Union and United Nations Security Council have made clear their condemnation of the nuclear tests in India and Pakistan, principally in Declarations by the European Union at meetings of the General Affairs Council on 25 May and 8 June, and by the United Nations Security Council in Presidential Statements on 14 and 29 May and a Security Council Resolution on 6 June.

We and international partners have left India and Pakistan in no doubt of our concern at the tests. We have made it clear that they must now take early steps to adhere unconditionally to the relevant non-proliferation regimes, including the Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty. We have also urged both countries to resume their bilateral dialogue to address the root causes of tension between them, and to agree confidence-building measures to restore stability to the region.

GCHQ

35. Mr. Hopkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with ministerial colleagues and others concerning pension rights and other benefits for workers dismissed at Government communications headquarters under previous Governments. [44549]

Mr. Fatchett: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has personally discussed this with members of the CCSU on a number of occasions. The dismissed workers received compensation in accordance with the terms of the Civil Service Compensation Scheme and the recommendations of the Civil Service Appeals Board.

Kosovo

36. Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the situation in Kosovo. [44552]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave in the House earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for Leigh (Mr. Cunliffe), Official Report, column 117–18.

Fur Coats

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to ensure that fur coats offered for sale in the United Kingdom, made from the skins of animals trapped using the steel-jawed leg-hold traps, bear a label carrying that information; and if he will make a statement. [43960]

Mrs. Roche: I have been asked to reply.

Having taken into account the operational difficulties and our legal obligations in the WTO, the Government have reluctantly decided not to pursue a labelling scheme for furs taken by steel-jawed leghold traps.

Euro (Publicity Material)

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the cost of producing the European Parliament's publicity material relating to Captain Euro; what was the role of Her Majesty's Government in devising this campaign; and what proportion of its costs was borne by the United Kingdom. [45142]

Mr. Doug Henderson: Neither the European Parliament nor the Government have had any role in financing the Captain Euro publicity campaign, which I understand is a private venture.

Gibraltar

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he is taking to include Gibraltar in the present progress towards air liberalisation within the EU. [45817]

Mr. Doug Henderson [holding answer 15 June 1998]: The application of EC air liberalisation measures to Gibraltar is suspended until such time as the 1987 UK/Spanish Joint Declaration on Gibraltar Airport is implemented. We have said that we will look at any proposals for the development of the airport which are acceptable to all parties.

Sierra Leone

Mr. Crausby: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the new United Nations Security Council resolution adopted on 5 June lifting the arms embargo on Sierra Leone and imposing one on non-Governmental forces in Sierra Leone. [46357]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The new Resolution supersedes part of the UN Security Council Resolution 1132. It ensures that the arms embargo to Sierra Leone applies to non-governmental forces and makes explicit exception for the Military Observer Group of the Economic Community of West African States (ECOMOG) and the United Nations.

Following the adoption of the UN Security Council on 5 June of the new Resolution, Orders in Council are now being prepared giving full effect in our law to the arms embargo imposed by the new Resolution.

Kashmir

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he has taken to help to secure the implementation of United Nations resolutions on self-determination in Kashmir. [45979]

Mr. Fatchett: We have taken every opportunity to urge on India and Pakistan the need to find a just and lasting settlement in Kashmir. In doing so, we believe that the two sides can and should build on both the UN Resolutions and the 1972 Simla agreement. We also believe that any solution, if it is to last, must be acceptable to the population of Kashmir whatever their race or religion.

Mexico

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what meetings have taken place between embassy staff in Mexico City and human rights groups; and if he will list the organisations with which contact has been made. [45566]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: During the last 12 months, members of the Embassy have had direct contact with the following 33 human rights NGOs:

Academia Mexicana de Derechos Humanos

Accion de los Cristianos para la Abolicion de la Tortura (ACAT)

Agrupacion de Derechos Humanos Xochitepetl—Veracruz

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what official visits to the Chiapas region of Mexico have been made by officials from the UK embassy in Mexico City in the last year; and if he will make a statement. [45565]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The following members of the Embassy have made official visits to Chiapas in the last year:

Deputy Head of Mission: 6–9 October 1997

First Secretary (Political/Economic): 24–29 January 1998

Vice-Consul: 29 March-1 April 1998

First Secretary (Political/Economic): 17–18 April 1998

Defence Attaché: 15–18 June 1998.

Former Soviet Union

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what measures the Government have initiated to promote human rights in the former Soviet Union. [45501]

Mr. Doug Henderson: Through the Know-How Fund and other budgets, HMG implement projects designed to support human rights activities, including visits to the UK by key human rights figures and training of judges and law enforcement officers. We also raise specific human rights cases and general problems with the countries concerned, bilaterally or jointly with EU partners.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what measures the Government have taken to help to stabilise democracy within the former Soviet Union. [45500]

Mr. Doug Henderson: HMG spent £50 million in 1996–97 (the last year for which full figures are available) on bilateral assistance for the countries of Eastern Europe and Central Asia. This supported a number of projects in the field of good governance, including election monitoring in Ukraine and Armenia and the development of non-governmental organisations in several countries.

Cardiff Summit Table

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 8 June 1998, Official Report, columns 461–62, on the table purchased for the European Council in Cardiff, on what basis Mr. Jones Parry informed the Foreign Affairs Committee that Her Majesty's Government had accepted the lowest price and had then negotiated a reduction in that price. [46054]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The tendering process for this type of contract is complex. As stated in my answer on 8 June 1998, Official Report, columns 461–62, we received three bids for the event production contract for the European Council in Cardiff. In order to keep costs to a minimum, and to be able to make a better comparison between the bids, we asked all three companies to re-work some elements of their bids. This re-working resulted in a reduction of some £375,000 in the tender of the company eventually selected which, both before and after the re-working, met the necessary standards most cheaply. Dr. Jones Parry explained this procedure in greater detail to the Foreign Affairs Committee on 2 June.

Wednesday 17 June 1998

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Belmont Stables, Mill Hill

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he expects the public inquiry into the planning issues arising from Belmont Stables, Mill Hill, will recommence. [45439]

Mr. Caborn: The principal parties and representatives of third parties were notified by a letter, dated 1 May 1998 that the inquiry into the appeals by Belmont Riding Centre Ltd, would resume on 4 August 1998 with Mr. Palmer, the original Inspector, if he were fit or, alternatively, if he were not, recommenced by a new Inspector. The letter also stated that the principal parties would be given 1 month's notice as to which alternative is adopted.

The principal parties and representatives of third parties were told in letters dated 10 June 1998 that Mr. Palmer would not be returning from sick leave before 4 August. At present, therefore, an Inspector would be available to recommence the inquiry on that date. However, the parties have indicated that they may not wish to do so and other alternatives are being actively and urgently investigated.

Millennium Dome

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what estimates his Department has made of the number of passengers the London Underground's Jubilee Line extension will carry per week when the Millennium Dome is open to the public. [45760]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I understand from London Transport that an approximate estimate of Jubilee Line Extension passenger journeys per week, during the busiest period for the Millennium Dome, would be 1.6 million. (If visitors to the Dome are excluded, the estimate falls to 1.1 million passenger journeys per week).

Traffic Commissioner

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will place copies in the Library of the Traffic Commissioner's business plans. [45816]

Ms Glenda Jackson [holding answer 15 June 1998]: Traffic Commissioners are required to submit annual reports to the Secretary of State on discharge of their Goods and Public Service Vehicle licensing functions and other responsibilities. Copies of these reports are placed in the Library. The Business Plan of the Traffic Area Network has not hitherto been published but I am placing a copy of the 1998–99 Plan in the Library.

Mobile Homes

Mr. Nicholls: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if the working group on the operation of present legislation for mobile homes has been set up; what the terms of reference and programme of work are to be; when the working group is expected to report; and if he will make a statement. [46143]

Mr. Raynsford: The Park Homes Working Party held its first meeting on 14 May. Its aim and terms of reference are as follows:

Aim: To promote the effective and equitable operation of existing statutory controls on permanent residential park homes and to consider what changes, if any, in these might be desirable to achieve a fair and workable balance between the needs and interests of park home residents and park owners/operators.

Terms of Reference: To review the statutory framework of park homes legislation and, in particular, the Caravan Sites and Control of Development Act 1960, Caravan Sites Act 1968 and Mobile Homes Act 1983, and consider:

(a) what is the best current practice in the application and enforcement of these controls by local authorities, and how it might best be disseminated;

(b) whether there is further scope to achieve the effective operation of existing controls through initiatives generated by the park homes industry; and

(c) whether there are significant weaknesses in the content of the existing controls which might be remedied, without disproportionate increases in public expenditure and in costs to operators and residents, through changes to secondary and, if appropriate and when Parliamentary time allows, primary legislation.

The Working Party is aiming to present recommendations to Ministers by Spring 1999.

Rented Accommodation

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to introduce regulation of the deposit scheme for people who rent property in the private sector. [46081]

Mr. Raynsford: We are concerned about the problem of tenants' rental deposits being withheld unreasonably by landlords at the end of tenancies. We are currently looking at legislation operating overseas to see whether there is an appropriate model for dealing with those problems. But we will need to be satisfied that any new requirements would not deter reputable small landlords, or potential landlords, and that they would achieve a fair balance between the interests of tenants and landlords.

Second Homes

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 10 June 1998, Official Report, columns 575–76, if he will provide a regional breakdown of the households which own or rent a second home, indicating where the second homes are located. [46092]

Mr. Raynsford: The table shows estimates based on data from the Survey of English Housing for the three years ending March 1997.

Location of second homes in England

thousands

Region	Homes
North and North West	30
Yorkshire and Humberside	12
East Midlands	15
London	26
South East and East Anglia	60
South West	41
West Midlands	15
England	201

Notes:

1. The table shows second homes in England owned or rented by households with their main residence also in England. It excludes second homes which are the main residence of another household, and those which the owners are intending to sell

2. Like all estimates from sample surveys, these figures are subject to sampling variability. Data for three years, and for some regions, have been combined to preserve a reasonable sample size

3. Data shown are based on the former Standard Statistical Regions rather than the present Government Office Regions, as this was the only regional definition available at the start of the survey period

Education Expenditure

Dr. George Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will publish a table showing for each education authority the amount allocated per pupil for each of the education SSA sub-blocks in 1998–99 attributable to the relevant population sparsity factor. [45828]

Mr. Raynsford: A table showing these figures has been placed in the House of Commons Library.

Birmingham Northern Relief Road

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what estimates his Department has made of the (a) advantages and (b) savings to business and commerce which would result from the construction of the proposed Birmingham Northern Relief Road. [46065]

Ms Glenda Jackson [holding answer 16 June 1998]: The Department's case for proceeding with the Birmingham Northern Relief Road was fully set out in evidence given to the 1994–95 public inquiry. Its construction would provide a high quality alternative route to the heavily congested section of the M6 through the West Midlands for commercial and other traffic. It would better facilitate the movement of through traffic from Scotland and the North West through the West Midlands to the South East, the Channel Tunnel and ports.

In strongly supporting the proposed scheme at the public inquiry, representative road haulage and business organisations pointed out the damage which the present levels of congestion on the M6 were causing in terms of delays and to competitiveness.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will publish the cost benefit analysis of the construction of the proposed Birmingham Northern Relief Road. [46064]

Ms Glenda Jackson [holding answer 16 June 1998]: A formal cost benefit analysis of the scheme was not carried out because it is to be privately financed. However, before deciding to award the concession to Midland Expressway Ltd., the previous Government took into account a comparative analysis of the economic benefits of the scheme with a publicly financed tolled road and a publicly financed untolled road. This showed the scheme having a benefit: cost ratio of more than 2:1. This information was contained in Department of Transport evidence on toll policy and its application to the Birmingham Northern Relief Road put to the 1994–95 public inquiry. I am arranging for a copy to be placed in the Library.

Merchant Navy

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has received from (a) the Merchant Navy Association and (b) others about the establishment of a Merchant Navy Day on 3 September. [45536]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Since the election, there have been five written representations from the Merchant Navy Association, and twelve from members of the Association writing in a personal capacity.

Nuclear Deterrence

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 15 June 1998, Official Report, column 32, on how many occasions he has not answered written questions from hon. Members on the grounds that he considered a matter to be closed. [46363]

Mr. Prescott: This is the latest in a series of related questions from the hon. Member. I have nothing to add to my answers of 18 May 1998, Official Report, column 218, 8 June 1998, Official Report, column 413 and 15 June 1998, Official Report, columns 32 and 40.

Rural Bus Services

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he will introduce proposals for the payment to English local authorities of the new grant for rural bus services; and if he will be issuing guidance to the authorities concerned on use of the grant. [46645]

Dr. Strang: I announced a provisional distribution of this grant on 28 April, subject to approval by Parliament in due course. Following consultation with interested parties, I have now laid before the House a Special Grant Report under Section 88B of the Local Government Finance Act 1988. This incorporates my detailed proposals for the payment of the grant and the conditions which will apply to its use. My Department is also circulating guidance to local authorities; a copy has been placed in the Library.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Personal Injury Cases

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what proportion of the legal aid bill in 1996–97 and 1997–98 for personal injury cases was for cases won by the plaintiffs and resulted in the expenditure on legal aid being recovered from the defendants at the conclusion of the proceedings. [45166]

Mr. Hoon: This information is not readily available in the format requested and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. The proportion of the gross legal aid costs recovered in all personal injury cases closed (including medical negligence matters) during 1996/97 can be broken down as follows:

All personal injury litigation (including medical negligence)—cases closed 1996–97

Gross payments	274.1	n/a
Costs received	206.7	75
Damages retained	4.1	1
Contributions retained	2	1
Net costs	61.8	23

No equivalent information is currently available for 1997–98.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what proportion of the legal aid bill in 1996–97 and 1997–98 for personal injury cases was liable to VAT and resulted in a revenue to the Treasury. [45167]

Mr. Hoon: The information requested is not available since the Legal Aid Board is not required to account separately for VAT.

TREASURY

Economic and Monetary Union

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer in what circumstances he was asked to leave the room during the Meeting of the Euro XI to discuss the single currency at Senningen Castle, Luxembourg on 4 June; and what factors led to the Austrian finance minister taking the chair. [46254]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 16 June 1998]: As President of ECOFIN, the Chancellor of the Exchequer was invited to attend the informal meeting on 4 June. The Chancellor took part in a constructive discussion of issues for consideration at the September meeting of Euro-XI which will involve all Member States. At an appropriate point, when issues falling within the specific responsibility of Member States joining the single currency were to be discussed, the Chancellor left the meeting.

All meetings of Euro-XI will be chaired by the Presidency or, if the Presidency is held by a non-participating Member State, by the next Presidency in office. That is why Mr. Edlinger chaired the 4 June meeting.

These arrangements are entirely in line with Luxembourg European Council conclusions and were agreed by all Member States in advance.

Registered Businesses

Mr. Loughton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many registered businesses in the United Kingdom he estimates have a value of £250,000 or less. [43612]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 1 June 1998]: On December 31 1997, there were approximately 1.11 million VAT-registered businesses in the UK with a turnover of less than £250,000.

Lending Policies

Mr. Reed: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how the United Kingdom representatives at the (a) World Bank, (b) IMF and (c) African Development Bank will ensure that the multilateral institutions pursue lending policies which take a realistic account of the ability of the debtor Government to repay. [43471]

Mrs. Liddell: The UK Government have played a leading role in encouraging the IMF, World Bank and the Multilateral Development Banks, including the African Development Bank, to pursue policies designed to promote sustainable economic growth and reductions in poverty. In particular, it attaches importance to ensuring that lending decisions are based on a careful assessment of a country's ability to absorb new lending and repay existing loans, to ensure that their debt burden is not increased.

Pensions Mis-selling

Mr. Timms: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of progress made by pension firms in providing redress to the victims of mis-sold personal pensions. [46554]

Mrs. Liddell: The table shows the progress made in the period to end May 1998 by the 41 firms whose figures I have been publishing. Some 78 per cent. of all the cases these firms must review have now been completed.

Many firms are now making good progress with their priority reviews. I expect the laggards to do their utmost to better the targets set for them by the regulators. I hope all firms will demonstrate the same commitment they have shown of late when they begin phase 2 of the review.

I am still disappointed by the poor progress being made by many IFAs. On 10 June, PIA fined Financial Options Ltd. and Investment Options Ltd. a total of £400,000 for various failings, mostly related to the review of personal pensions. I expect IFAs to deal with their priority cases as a matter of the utmost urgency and hope the industry will continue to pursue the ABI's lifeboat initiative to help IFAs finance their reviews and process cases. Mis-selling damages the reputation of the entire industry. It is in everyone's interests to work together to complete the review.

I am aware of criticisms by a number of IFAs of the FSA and PIA proposals for phase 2 of the review. Some even deny that there is a problem while others try to pass the buck. Their poor attitude tarnishes those IFAs with integrity who are making a concerted effort to complete their case reviews.

The FSA asked trade bodies and product providers to consider how they could help to ensure that, where appropriate, investors who had bought a personal pension through an IFA could receive speedy redress.

Alcohol and Tobacco Imports

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if personal imports of alcohol and tobacco from France are taken into account in calculating the RPI. [46459]

Dawn Primarolo: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Chief Executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from John Kidgell to Mr. Austin Mitchell, dated 17 June 1998:

In the absence of the Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your parliamentary question on calculating the RPI.

Personal imports of alcohol and tobacco from France are not reflected in the RPI either in the expenditure weights used to represent spending patterns or in the prices collected to form the index.

Wages (Worcestershire)

Mr. Michael J. Foster: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many (a) men and (b) women, working (i) full-time and (ii) part-time, in (1) Worcester and (2) Worcestershire earn less than (x) £3 per hour and (y) £3.60 per hour. [46112]

Mrs. Liddell: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Chief Executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from M. P. G Pepper to Mr. Michael J. Foster dated 17 June 1998:

In the absence of the Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your parliamentary question on earnings.

Latest estimates of the percentage of employees in Worcester, and Worcester and Hereford earning less than the hourly rates you mention, may be obtained from the April 1997 New Earnings Survey which is based upon a one percent. sample of employees in the PAYE system. As such, the estimates which relate to low earnings and part-time employment should be treated with a degree of caution.

Results are presented for the Worcester parliamentary constituency, and for the county of Hereford and Worcester. Worcestershire is no longer a statistically defined geographical area.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Special Advisers

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many special advisers, political advisers and other political appointees are working in his Department; at what annual cost to the public purse including recruitment costs, salaries, pensions and National Insurance contributions; and what was the position in the last full year of the last Government. [43325]

Dr. Howells: For details of the numbers of Special Advisers and the annual cost of employing them, I refer the hon. Member to the answer the Prime Minister gave to the hon. Member for Woodspring (Dr. Fox) on 11 June 1998, Official Report, column 664.

National Insurance contributions are excluded from the figure but are paid under the same rules and at the same rates as for other civil servants. Information on the paybill costs for Special Advisers within individual Departments is not provided in order to protect the privacy of the individuals concerned.

Information on the cost of employing Special Advisers in previous years was given by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster to the hon. Member for Gordon (Mr. Bruce) on 25 November 1997, Official Report, columns 472–73.

European Voluntary Service

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the sub-contracting of the pastoral supervision role of the European Voluntary Service to third parties; and if he will list the agencies his Department has approved for this purpose. [45316]

Dr. Howells: The Youth Exchange Centre is the national agency for the European Voluntary Service programme in the UK. Projects wishing to host young volunteers undergo rigorous scrutiny before being accepted into the programme. Provision for pastoral supervision is an important component of that scrutiny.

Mr. Cash: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the merging of Youth for Europe and the European Voluntary Service after 1999. [46132]

Dr. Howells: Youth for Europe and the European Voluntary Service will conclude at the end of 1999. The European Commission has recently published proposals to establish a Youth Community Action Programme (2000–2004) incorporating both these programmes. The draft Decision will be considered by Member States with a view to enabling Council to reach a common position on the proposals in due course.

Buddhism (Educational Material)

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what representations he has received concerning the Friends of the Western Buddhist Order and their educational material; and if he will assess the authenticity of the material on their website and its coverage of Buddhist traditions with a view to advising local authorities on the suitability of the material for schools. [45434]

Ms Estelle Morris: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has received a letter from Lord Avebury concerning allegations on another website. The Department is investigating the allegations concerning religious education and will consider whether further action is necessary.

New Deal (Ethnic Monitoring)

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what arrangements are in place for the ongoing ethnic monitoring of the progress of those placed on one of the New Deal options; and if he will make a statement. [45437]

Mr. Andrew Smith: We have arrangements in place to provide comprehensive management information on the participation of ethnic minorities in New Deal. Our evaluation strategy will also enable us to determine the final destinations of all New Deal clients including those from ethnic minorities.

School/College Transport (Essex)

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will provide additional financial support to Essex County Council to fund the retention from September of the current free home to school/college transport for pupils and students from the age of 16. [45473]

Mr. Byers: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for North Essex (Mr. Jenkin) on 8 May 1998, Official Report, column 524.

Teaching (New Entrants)

Mr. Michael J. Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many new entrants into the teaching profession there were for the years 1979 to 1997. [45551]

Ms Estelle Morris: The numbers of new entrants to full-time teaching, in the maintained nursery, primary and secondary sector[1], for the years 1979 to 1996, are shown in the table. New entrants to part-time teaching are shown for the years 1993 to 1996. Information for previous years is not readily available.

New Deal for Schools

Mr. Cotter: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what criteria he used for the recently-awarded funding under the New Deal for Schools Capital Programme Phase 2 for the North Somerset council area; [45992]

(2) what criteria are used for awarding funding under the New Deal for Schools Capital Programme Phase 2. [45993]

Mr. Byers: Applications for funding received from all Local Education Authorities (and the Funding Agency for Schools) under Phase 2 of the New Deal for Schools initiative were considered against the priorities and criteria set out in the guidance issued by this Department on 5 November 1997. A copy of the full guidance has been placed in the Library.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Criminal Cases Review Commission

Mr. Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assets were transferred to the Criminal Cases Review Commission on 1 April. [46642]

Mr. Michael: The Criminal Cases Review Commission has been notified that certain Crown assets have been transferred to it, effective from 1 April 1998. The transfer will be free of charge. The assets comprise:

Assets	Estimated value (£)
Furniture and miscellaneous items of office equipment	87,000
Information Technology and communications equipment	496,000
Total	583,000

Sierra Leone (Asylum Seekers)

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on asylum seekers from Sierra Leone. [46715]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: My right hon. Friend announced in his reply to my hon. Friend the Member for South Derbyshire (Mr. Todd) on 1 July 1997, Official Report, column 78, that he had made a declaration under the Social Security (Persons from Abroad) Miscellaneous Amendments Regulations 1996 that Sierra Leone had undergone such an upheaval that we would not seek to enforce the return of refused asylum seekers to that country for the time being.

Since that time, the situation in the country has been carefully monitored, together with the Foreign and Commonwealth Office. More information has become available since the liberation of Freetown by ECOMOG troops in February this year.

The democratically elected President returned to the country in March and announced his new broad-based government. Although there is fighting in the east, the rest of the country appears secure.

The information received about conditions in Sierra Leone enables me to make an informed assessment of the merits of asylum applications made prior to the upheaval and subsequently, in accordance with our international obligations. If an applicant is able to demonstrate that his fear of persecution is well-founded, then asylum will be granted. In other cases, if there are clear compelling humanitarian reasons not to require a person to return, exceptional leave to enter or remain will be granted. If asylum or exceptional treatment is not merited, the normal course will be to expect applicants to return to Sierra Leone. We will continue to monitor developments in the region.

Closed Circuit Television

Mr. Faber: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will announce the results of local bids for CCTV under round four of the CCTV challenge competition. [46096]

Mr. Michael: I have placed in the Library earlier today the results of round 4 of the Closed Circuit Television Challenge competition. I am pleased to be able to inform the hon. Member that a partnership in his constituency led by Warminster Town Council has been offered an award of £74,525.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what financial assistance his Department is providing in the current financial year to London local authorities that wish to install CCTV cameras within their areas. [45519]

Mr. Michael: I have placed in the Library the results of round 4 of the Close Circuit Television Challenge competition. The awards offered to crime reduction partnerships in London boroughs under the latest competition, together with the balance of awards made to schemes under earlier rounds which have yet to be paid, are listed in the table. All awards have to be taken up in the current financial year.

Local Authorities (Pilot Schemes)

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the pilot schemes announced since 1 May by his Department that involve local authorities in a lead or partnership capacity; if he will list each of the local authorities involved in each case; and what revenue and capital funding each local authority will receive through the pilot in (i) 1997–98, (ii) 1998–99, (iii) 1999–2000 and (iv) 2000–2001. [45335]

Mr. Straw [holding answer 11 June 1998]: As I announced in the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Portsmouth, North (Mr. Rapson) on 3 June 1998, Official Report, column 219, we have identified nine local authority areas in which, in principle, we would like to pilot the new youth justice measures contained in the Crime and Disorder Bill [Lords].

Four areas—the London Boroughs of Hammersmith and Fulham, Kensington and Chelsea and the City of Westminster (jointly); Hampshire, Southampton, Portsmouth and the Isle of Wight (jointly); Wolverhampton; and Sheffield—have been identified to pilot the final warning scheme; the reparation order, action plan order, child safety order and parenting order; and youth offending teams.

Five areas—the London Borough of Lewisham; Luton and Bedfordshire (jointly); Devon; St. Helens; and Sunderland—have been identified to pilot the child safety order and parenting order, together with youth offending teams.

In addition, Blackburn and Northamptonshire are to pilot the final warning scheme and youth offending teams in the context of pilots of procedural changes recommended by the Review of Delay in the Criminal Justice System, to which my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Portsmouth, North also referred.

We aim to establish the pilot projects from October 1998. The pilots will operate for a period of 18 months. We envisage that, in addition to funding for the evaluation of the pilots, some Home Office funding will be available to help the pilot areas put in place the programmes and forms of intervention needed to undertake work under the final warning scheme and the new court orders. Funding will also be available to support any seminars based on experience in the pilot areas run during the pilots for benefit of other areas. We will discuss with the selected pilot areas how available funds can be used most effectively within their area.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many letters have been issued to asylum seekers since November 1996 informing them of a refusal of their claim at the same time that the Benefits Agency have been informed of the decision; and how many asylum seekers have not been issued with such a letter. [45642]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Between 4 November 1996 and 29 May 1998, 3,023 such letters were issued to applicants or their representatives. Letters could not be sent in a further 516 cases as an address was not readily available.

Police Officers

Mr. Efford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers in each police force are (a) female and (b) from ethnic minorities. [45645]

Mr. Michael: The information requested is set out in the table. The figures are provisional and are subject to validation.

Mr. Efford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to increase recruitment to the police force from those sections of society currently under-represented. [45710]

Mr. Michael: The responsibility for making appointments to the police service in England and Wales lies with the chief officer of each police force. It is also their responsibility, with the assistance of their police authorities, to ensure that their forces represent the communities they serve. This includes those people from under-represented groups, such as those from ethnic minority communities.

Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary have issued two thematic inspection reports: "Developing Diversity in the Police Service" and "Winning the Race", copies of which are in the Library. Both reports offer advice on the recruitment of people from under-represented sections of society. The latter report includes "a guide to assist forces in the area of ethnic minority recruitment", which should provide a helpful checklist of action for forces to take. My right hon. Friend has made it clear that he expects each police force in England and Wales to consider the conclusions of the latter report and to act on its findings during the course of 1998. Later this year, chief constables will be asked to report on action taken.

Police (Medical Retirement)

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many medical retirements of police officers there were for each police force area in each of the last 10 years. [45655]

Mr. Michael: Provisional figures for medical retirements from forces in England and Wales in 1997–98 are set out in the table. Similar data for the years from 1990 to 1996–97 are included in the report by Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary "Lost Time: The Management of Sickness Absence and Medical Retirement in the Police Service", published in December 1997. A copy of the report is in the Library. Such information is not available for the period before 1990.

[1] Force visited

Police (Ethnic Employees)

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) black and (b) Asian people are employed in (i) West Midlands Police force and (ii) Leicestershire Police force; and at what grade. [45686]

Mr. Michael: It may be helpful if I provide tables showing the numbers employed and the percentage in that category of employment for (i) black people, (ii) Asian people and (iii) ethnic minorities.

(i) Black staff—as at 31 March 1998 (provisional figures)

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures he has taken to investigate claims of race discrimination in West Midlands police force. [45676]

Mr. Michael: No allegations of racial discrimination in West Midlands Police have been made to me. It would be a matter for the Chief Constable of West Midlands Police to investigate any such claims made to him or the police authority, in consultation with the police authority as necessary. In general, I would expect such allegations to be put direct to the individual police force.

Police (Compensation)

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much was paid out by the English police forces in compensation cases in the last year for which figures are available. [46015]

Mr. Michael: Payment of compensation by police forces, which is provided for in section 88 of the Police Act 1996, is a matter for individual police forces, and information about amounts paid out by individual forces is not held centrally.

Police (CS Gas)

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will issue rules to police forces on the use of CS gas. [46014]

Mr. Michael: Any use of force is governed by section 3 of the Criminal Law Act 1967, which provides that a person may use such force as is reasonable in the circumstances in the prevention of crime, or effecting or assisting in the lawful arrest of offenders or suspected offenders. It must be remembered that the use of CS spray can prevent serious physical injury not only to police officers but also to bystanders and to the person who is being restrained. It is a form of force, but one whose effects are normally very short-term and transitory. Each individual police officer is responsible for his actions, and it is ultimately for the courts to judge whether the force used in any particular circumstances was reasonable. The Home Office has issued general guidelines to chief police officers on the use of CS grenades for dealing with serious public disorder. The routine carriage by officers of CS spray for self-defence is an operational matter and not something on which it would be appropriate for the Home Office to issue guidelines. Operational guidelines, copies of which have been placed in the Library, have been issued by the Association of Chief Police Officers.

Sunday Trading

Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will amend the Sunday Trading Act 1994 to prevent shops with a relevant floor area of more than 280 square metres from trading on Easter Sunday by conducting their transactions in the open air. [46190]

Mr. George Howarth: We have no plans to do so. The Sunday Trading Act 1994 prohibits large shops from opening on Easter Sunday for the serving of retail customers. Interpretation of the law is a matter for the courts. I understand that a recent judgment by the High Court has upheld the conviction of a large store for trading from the external areas of its premises on Easter Sunday.

Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what meetings he has had, or plans to have, with owners of large retail outlets with a relevant floor area of more than 280 square metres who open on Easter Sunday. [46214]

Mr. George Howarth: None.

Fazakerley Prison

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on how many occasions it has been necessary for neighbouring prisons to provide support to Fazakerley Prison; and in what circumstances. [46073]

Ms Quin: There have been no occasions on which neighbouring prisons have provided support to Altcourse Prison, Fazakerley.

SCOTLAND

Solway Firth and Border Esk Rivers

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects to announce a decision on the fishing rights for the Solway Firth and Border Esk rivers. [45687]

Mr. Macdonald: My right hon. Friends the Secretary of State for Scotland and the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food have carried out a consultation on the management arrangements which should apply to the Border Esk. The responses, together with concerns that have been expressed about the future exercise of fishing rights in the Solway Firth, are being taken into account in the consideration of the provision at clause 100 of the Scotland Bill.

Fisheries Research Services

Miss Begg: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement about the key performance targets he has set for the Fisheries Research Services in 1998–99. [46644]

Mr. Macdonald: My right hon. Friend has set the following targets for Fisheries Research Services:

Delivery of Service

To achieve 85 per cent. of the performance targets set in the schedules to the Service Level Agreement.

To achieve 80 per cent. of the milestones agreed for Research and Development projects.

To maintain, pro rata, FRS's publication output.

Quality of Service

To review the work of the Fish Cultivation Team at the Marine Laboratory through a visiting group and to report by December 1997.

To submit by 1999/2000 the quality manuals and documentation which are required for the accreditation by the United Kingdom Accreditation Service, of the monitoring programmes for algal toxins, microbiological contamination of shellfish, List II viral diseases of fish, and sampling of fish for residues of veterinary medicines.

Efficiency targets

To carry out the agreed programme for the Scottish Office within the agreed costs.

To recover full economic costs from external customers.

To restrict administrative costs to 18 per cent. of the total running costs.

To restrict unit costs of fish farms inspection programmes to £320 per farm visit.

To increase research vessels utilisation to 540 days, operating at a daily cost of £5,200 (Scotia) and £2,100 (Clupea).

These various tasks should provide a sound basis for evaluating performance by establishing a time series for certain indicators and by requiring external scrutiny by external accreditors and scientific peers.

Scottish Parliament

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will place in the Library on a monthly basis a report on those archaeological discoveries his advisers assess to be (a) significant and (b) less significant in the course of excavations relating to work on the building to house the Scottish Parliament, together with relevant diagrams conveying information relating to each stratum uncovered of the Holyrood site. [44647]

Mr. Dewar: It would not be possible to provide meaningful information of the kind requested on a regular basis, because of the complexity of the project. However, I am arranging to have a copy of the desk assessment of the site placed in the Library and will be happy to place further reports there as significant stages of the archaeological work are completed.

Radioactivity (Merse Sites)

Mr. Alasdair Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will place in the Library a copy of the 1994–95 HMIPI study into radioactive doses received by people living or working on selected merse sites. [45863]

Mr. Macdonald: The information referred to was published at Annexe E, in the final report of Her Majesty's Industrial Pollution Inspectorate for Scotland, for the period 1 April 1992 to 31 March 1996. I have arranged to have copies of the report placed in the Library.

Radiation Monitoring Stations

Mr. Alasdair Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the radiation monitoring stations on the West Coast of Scotland between the English border on the Solway and Cape Wrath; and what factors underlie the siting of these stations. [45862]

Mr. Macdonald: The information can best be obtained from the report "Radioactivity in Food and the Environment, 1996". Copies of that report are held in the Library of the House.

The factors underlying the selection of monitoring locations are given in the report at chapter 3 and sub-chapters 7.3 and 9.7.

Leukaemia

Mr. Alasdair Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many leukaemias were (a) recorded and (b) expected in the 0 to 24 age group in the postcode sectors (i) DG5.4, (ii) DG7.1 and (iii) DG6.4 in the periods (a) 1980 to 1984, (b) 1985 to 1989, (c) 1990 to 1994, and (d) 1995 to present. [45864]

Mr. Galbraith: No cases of leukaemia were observed in the 0–24 age group in postcode sector DG5.4 and DG6.4 during the periods 1980–84, 1985–89, 1990–94 or 1995–96 (the most recent year for which information is available). There were two cases of leukaemia registered in residents of postcode sector DG7.1; one in the period 1980–84 and one in the period 1985–84.

The numbers of cases observed and the expected number of cases of leukaemia, based on background rates in Scotland as a whole, for each of the postcode sectors are shown in the tables:

(i) Observed and expected numbers of cases of leukaemia in age group 0–24 years in DG5.4

Time period	Observed number of cases	Expected number of cases
1980–84	0	0.22
1985–89	0	0.24
1990–94	0	0.26
1995–96	0	0.08

(ii) Observed and expected numbers of cases of leukaemia in age group 0–24 years in DG7.1

Time period	Observed number of cases	Expected number of cases
1980–84	1	0.24
1985–89	1	0.26
1990–94	0	0.28
1995–96	0	0.18

(iii) Observed and expected numbers of cases of leukaemia in age group 0–24 years in DG6.4

Time period	Observed number of cases	Expected number of cases
1980–84	0	0.24
1985–89	0	0.25
1990–94	0	0.27
1995–96	0	0.18

Hip Operations

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland in respect of how many cases of hip joint replacement operations conducted in Scotland since 1980, patients have been readmitted to hospital for further hip replacement surgery within (a) five years and (b) 10 years of the original operation. [45775]

Mr. Galbraith: Information on the number of discharges following total hip replacement operations in the years 1980 to 1990, and the number of patients readmitted within 5 years and 10 years following their original operation is provided in the tables.

The number of readmissions do not directly relate to revision or failure of the original total hip replacement operations. Patients may be readmitted for operations on their other hip without any fault or problem with their earlier operation, if better or newer types of hip joint become available which would improve their quality of life.

Table 1: Discharges following a total hip replacement operation and the number of readmissions within 5 years of the original operation

Year of operation	Number of discharges	Discharges[1]	Readmitted within 5 years	Readmission[2] rate (%)
1981	2,417	2,032	395	19.4
1982	2,144	1,746	379	21.7
1983	2,728	2,248	464	20.6
1984	2,814	2,305	460	20.0
1985	3,055	2,526	525	20.8
1986	3,218	2,636	501	19.0
1987	3,481	2,887	564	19.5
1988	3,772	3,149	674	21.4
1989	3,513	2,931	597	20.4
1990	3,686	3,076	651	21.2

[1] If a patient has died within the 5 year period then the procedure prior to death has been excluded. No account can be taken of the migration of patients

[2] Readmission rate—number of readmissions within 5 years expressed as a percentage of the number of operations for total hip replacement (excluding patients who had died). This is NOT the total hip replacement revision or failure rate as for example the first operation could be the left hip and the second operation the right hip

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Sudan

Mr. Michael J. Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on the latest situation in Sudan. [46643]

Clare Short: The World Food Programme have reassessed the humanitarian needs in southern Sudan. They now estimate the numbers in need of assistance at approximately 1.226 million. This includes those in the Bahr-el-Ghazal region and is a significant increase on previous assessments.

In response to this, my Department is committing a further £15 million of assistance to the relief operation in Sudan. £10 million will be provided immediately for food and logistics to support the World Food Programme's enhanced food distribution in southern Sudan. The remaining £5 million will be available to support the relief work of UN agencies and non-governmental organisations participating in Operation Lifeline Sudan and to support selected operations outside Operation Lifeline Sudan where new needs are emerging. This will bring our total assistance since February to £25.23 million and since 1991 to £160 million.

As I have made clear since the beginning of the current emergency, we alongside other governments will provide the funding needed for the Sudanese emergency. The problem remains one of access rather than resources. The EU General Affairs Council on 25 May again called for a ceasefire for humanitarian purposes, which remains the most urgent requirement in order to provide help to the people in need.

WALES

Special Advisers

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many special advisers, political advisers and other political appointees are working in his Department; at what annual cost to the public purse including recruitment costs, salaries, pensions and National Insurance contributions; and what was the position in the last full year of the last Government. [43314]

Mr. Ron Davies: For details of the numbers of Special Advisers and the annual cost of employing them, I refer the hon. Member to the answer the Prime Minister gave the hon. Member for Woodspring (Dr. Fox) on 11 June 1998, Official Report, column 664.

National Insurance contributions are excluded from the figure but are paid under the same rules and at the same rates as for other civil servants. Information on the paybill costs for Special Advisers within individual Departments is not provided in order to protect the privacy of the individuals concerned.

Information on the costs of employing Special Advisers in previous years was given by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster to the hon. Member for Gordon (Mr. Bruce) on 25 November 1997, Official Report, columns 472–73.

Class Sizes

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on class sizes in Wales. [45887]

Mr. Hain: At January 1997, the average size of registered classes in primary schools was 25.9 pupils, the same as in 1996. Results from the January 1998 Schools Census are not yet available. No information is collected centrally about class sizes in secondary schools, however in 1997 the pupil-teacher ratio in secondary schools was 16.2, compared with 16.0 in 1996.

Welsh Development Agency

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the adequacy of funding for the North Wales Region of the WDA; and if he will make a statement. [45892]

Mr. Hain: The allocation of its resources is primarily an operational matter for the Welsh Development Agency to determine in the light of its overall budget, commitments and priorities. I will, therefore, ask the Agency's Chief Executive to write to my hon. Friend with information on its funding for the North Wales area; and will arrange for a copy of his reply to be placed in the Library of the House.

Assisted Places

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what sums were allocated to assisted places in Wales in (a) 1990 and (b) 1997; and if he will make a statement. [45888]

Mr. Hain: The sums spent on assisted places in Wales in financial years (a) 1990–91 and (b) 1997–98 were £1,756,283 and £4,105,238 respectively.

DEFENCE

Nerve Agent Pretreatment

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the impurities produced when Pyridostigmine Bromide is (a) exposed to intense sunlight, (b) subjected to large temperature variations and (c) stored for long periods under these conditions. [40142]

Dr. Reid: Between 1987 and 1992, the Chemical and Biological Defence Sector of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency conducted studies to assess the storage stability of the Ministry of Defence's Nerve Agent Pretreatment Set (NAPS) tablets, which contain pyridostigmine bromide (PB) as the active ingredient. The tablets were exposed to a range of temperatures between 5 and 41°C and storage times of up to 5 years.

The only significant detectable degradation product of PB identified during these studies was 3-hydroxy-1-methyl pyridinium bromide, which is also the major metabolite produced when PB is taken orally. The other known degradation products of PB, which were not detected in any long term stability studies due to their transitory nature, are 3-hydroxy pyridine and pyridyl-3-dimethyl carbamate. Neither of these, nor 3-hydroxy-1-methyl pyridinium bromide, are known to be harmful to humans.

My Department is not aware of any research having been conducted to investigate the way in which PB reacts when exposed to intense sunlight. However, the specification for NAPS tablets for use by UK forces requires that they are wrapped in lacquered aluminium foil which is light impermeable, and they would not therefore normally be exposed to sunlight until this wrapping had been broken open to allow the first tablet to be extracted for immediate consumption. As each packet of NAPS contains 21 tablets, one to be taken every 8 hours, a packet would normally be consumed within a week.

Equipment Exhibition

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the Royal Navy and British Army Equipment Exhibition. [45544]

Mr. Spellar: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Hackney, South and Shoreditch (Mr. Sedgemore) on 8 June 1998, Official Report, column 423.

Project Horizon Frigate

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) when he estimates the first contract to build a Project Horizon frigate will be placed; [45846]

(2) what is his estimate of the overall cost of Project Horizon; [45845]

(3) how many Project Horizon frigates the United Kingdom will purchase; [45843]

(4) what is his estimate of the (a) delivery date and (b) in-service date of the first Project Horizon frigate. [45844]

Mr. Spellar: The contract for completion of the design and build of the three first of class Horizon frigates, i.e. one for each nation, UK, France and Italy, is expected to be placed next year. The total project cost is commercially confidential. It is currently expected that we will order 12 ships, but any decisions will, of course, be subject to the outcome of the Strategic Defence Review. The current projected in service date of 2004 is subject to discussions and negotiations with industry.

Defence Exports

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 21 April 1998, Official Report, column 556, what is the value of defence exports against which his forecast that £56 million of commercial exploitation levies would be raised from defence export sales in the next financial year was made; and what is the levy income as a percentage of the export sales figure. [44433]

Mr. Spellar: The target figure for new defence export orders in 1998–99 is £5 billion. The forecast of £56 million is a broad estimate of the commercial exploitation levies that are likely to be raised against those exports which may attract such levies in financial year 1998–99. There is, however, no direct correlation between this estimate and the overall export target for two main reasons. First, there is a delay between the agreement of export contracts and the receipt of commercial exploitation levies. Secondly, such levies are payable only on contracts covering the supply of equipment the development costs of which were funded wholly or partly by the Ministry of Defence. Contracts for the supply or equipment developed by the commercial sector, or for support, training and construction series, do not attract commercial exploitation levies. The rate of levy charged will vary for each item depending on the extent to which its development was funded by the MOD.

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the cost to public funds for the last two years incurred by branches of his Department other than DESO in the promotion of British defence exports. [46110]

Mr. Spellar: This information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Riot Control Agents

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 12 March 1998, Official Report, column 324, on riot control agents, for what reasons his Department is currently reviewing the quantity of CS which it holds; when the review started; who is carrying it out; and when it is expected to be completed. [45312]

Mr. Spellar: Stockholdings of riot control agents are regularly reviewed as a normal part of the equipment management and procurement process. In addition, MOD began in March to review our future requirements. This review will assist us to decide on the planned disposal of certain stocks and the modernisation, as necessary, of others. The review is being carried out by MOD operational requirements staff. The aim is to complete it by the end of August.

Service Men's Wives

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the payment to Army service men's wives of allotment was introduced; how many wives currently receive payment; and by what means the allotment has been paid throughout the period of its operation. [45631]

Dr. Reid: This information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Shows and Trade Fairs

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the cost to his Department of the attendance of (a) Ministers and (b) officials at defence and aerospace shows and trade fairs in each of the two years up to June 1998; what other costs were incurred in respect of such shows and trade fairs in each of those years; and which bodies have funded these costs. [46075]

Mr. Spellar: This information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Nuclear Tests

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence who has responsibility for carrying out seismic assessments of suspicious events under the contract for a National Data Centre; and who has been carrying out assessments of nuclear tests in India and Pakistan under the same contract. [45525]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 15 June 1998]: The Atomic Weapons Establishment, AWE, at Blacknest have been carrying out assessments of the recent nuclear tests by India and Pakistan. This work is being carried out under an MOD contract for support to nuclear test ban verification. Establishment of the National Data Centre, resulting from the requirements of the Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty, is a new task being carried out by the British Geological Survey under sub-contract to AWE.

Helicopters

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Westland Lynx were (a) allocated to frontline Army units, (b) fully serviceable, (c) undergoing major maintenance and (d) held as in use reserve on 1 June. [44127]

Dr. Reid: I will write to the hon. and learned Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Armoured Vehicles

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) Challenger/Challenger II, (b) Sabre, (c) Striker, (d) Scimitar, (e) AFV432, (f) Warrior, (g) Spartan and (h) Saxon armoured vehicles were (i) in service with frontline Army units and (ii) fully serviceable on 1 June. [44128]

Dr. Reid: I will write to the hon. and learned Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Anthrax Vaccination

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what advice he has given to Her Majesty's forces personnel about their rights in the event that, having given written consent for vaccination against anthrax, they subsequently suffer illness directly related to the vaccine. [34515]

Mr. George Robertson: British Service personnel who were involved in the Gulf conflict have the same entitlement to claim compensation for negligence from the Ministry of Defence as any civilian employee has to claim against his or her employer. The fact that a Service person has consented to receive anthrax vaccination in no way affects that right; in view of this, no advice has been given to UK Service personnel about their rights were they to suffer illness directly related to the current programme of immunisation against anthrax.

All UK Service personnel serving in the Gulf region have been provided with comprehensive information concerning anthrax and the UK licensed anthrax vaccine. A package of documentation has been prepared which includes a description of the symptoms of the disease and an explanation that a vaccine exists to protect against it. This also explains that many doses of the vaccine are administered in the UK each year to a wide variety of people who may be exposed to the disease as a consequence of their occupations; and that such people include those who work in the tannery, leather and wool industries as well as those persons who may have direct contact with infected animals, such as veterinary surgeons. The documentation also explains the process of vaccination and its protective qualities, and make clear that in the past 21 years only minor side effects from the use of this vaccine have been reported in a small number of people.

In addition, all Service personnel who are being offered anthrax immunisation are given an oral briefing on the vaccine by medical officers. Records have been kept of the individuals who received the oral briefing and the package of documentation, and of their subsequent decision whether to be vaccinated.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Arts Council of England

Ms Atherton: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will name the members he proposes to appoint to the Arts Council of England. [46692]

Mr. Chris Smith: I announced this morning the new membership of the Arts Council of England. I have appointed Derrick Anderson, Deborah Bull, Antony Gormley, Anish Kapoor, Joanna MacGregor and Hilary Strong to the Council. In addition, I have re-appointed David Brierley, Christopher Frayling, Andrew Motion and Prue Skene.

National Lottery Funding (Leigh)

Mr. Cunliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will list, for each of the last three years, the number of awards and the total financial grant made, in each category of good cause, to organisations in Leigh constituency from proceeds of the National Lottery. [45515]

Mr. Banks: To date, the constituency of Leigh has received 15 lottery awards totalling £1.24 million. A breakdown by good cause is shown in the table. Information on the National Lottery awards is now available on the Department's website www.lottery.culture.gov.uk.

Mr. Cunliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what funding his Department has granted to Sportsmatch projects in Leigh; and if he will list these projects. [45965]

Mr. Banks: Sportsmatch has made the following awards in Leigh: £1,000 and £3,000 to Wigan MBC for the preparation of the Wigan team for the Manchester Youth Games, in 1994 and 1998 respectively; £10,000 to Leigh RMI AFC for the appointment of a youth development officer in 1996; and £4,000 for Leigh Centurions Rugby League Club towards its community and schools development programme in 1996.

Listed Sporting Events

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will publish the estimated viewing figures for television audiences for sporting events on (a) terrestrial and (b) satellite television which were taken into account by the advisory group on de-listing which reported to him in March. [46052]

Mr. Chris Smith: For the events included in the consultation exercise carried out last year, the Advisory Group on Listed Events took the following figures into account in making its recommendations to me (the figures are in millions, and averaged where necessary):

	1992	1993	1994	1995	1996	1997
(a) Terrestrial
Olympic Games	8.05	—	—	—	2.72	—

Audience ratings figures, although important, are not necessarily an accurate guide to the national importance of sports events. Guided by the criteria for listing that I announced last November, the Advisory Group took a number of other factors into account for each event that it considered:

the significance of the event to those who do not usually follow the sport concerned; the position of the event on the national calendar;

whether the event is pre-eminent in its sport;

whether it involves a national team or participants;

whether the event has a history of being broadcast live on free-to-air services;

the practicality of live coverage of the event on general channels;

the availability of secondary coverage;

the effects of listing the event on the sport concerned and on the broadcasting market.

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions he has had with the European Commission over the listing of sporting events for terrestrial television. [46050]

Mr. Chris Smith: If it is to be recognised by other Member States, a national list of events protected for transmission on free-to-air television in a European Union Member State must be in accordance with Article 3A of the European Commission's 'Television Without Frontiers' Directive (number 89/552/EEC as amended by Directive 97/36/EC). I shall inform the Commission of any changes to the list when I announce my decisions. Meanwhile, my Department has discussed informally with the Commission how the revised regulatory framework proposed by Lord Gordon's Advisory Group might be applied in accordance with Article 3A.

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when he expects to make a final decision on the listing of sporting events for terrestrial television. [46051]

Mr. Chris Smith: I shall announce my decision shortly.

National Endowment for Science, Technology and Arts

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what sporting activities the National Endowment for Science, Technology and Arts will fund; and if individual sportsmen and sportswomen will be sponsored. [45564]

Mr. Banks [holding answer 15 June 1998]: NESTA's responsibilities are to be in the fields of science, technology and the arts. Neither the promotion of sporting activities nor the provision of support for individual sports men and women fall within NESTA's remit. However, in helping people turn good ideas into products and services, it would be open to NESTA to support the development of technological or scientific products or services for sports men and women. Decisions on how NESTA will go about meeting its statutory objects will be a matter for its Trustees.

Libraries

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much public money was used to support the lending of (a) recorded music and (b) videos by public libraries in the last year for which figures are available. [45832]

Mr. Fisher: In 1996–97, public library authorities in England spent £6.3 million on sound recordings, and £3.8 million on video recordings. Information is not held centrally about the operating costs of music or video lending services, or about the specific level expenditure on music material other than recordings.

Elgin Marbles

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport, pursuant to his oral answer of 1 June 1998, Official Report, columns 3–4 on the Elgin Marbles, what assessment he has made of evidence that the Elgin Marbles were damaged whilst in the care of the British Museum. [45369]

Mr. Chris Smith: It is not for me to make an assessment. However, I understand that the British Museum intends to host a gathering of experts from both the Museum and outside sometime next year. This will involve scholars from other countries, including the Hellenic Republic, to examine the evidence about the damage which it is claimed has been made to the sculptures. I very much welcome this initiative from the Museum.

Mediaeval Church Buildings

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will instruct English Heritage to restore grants for the repair of mediaeval church buildings. [45830]

Mr. Banks: The Government continue to support historic church buildings through English Heritage. The joint scheme for places of worship which English Heritage has established with the Heritage Lottery Fund (HLF) is providing offers of £20 million in 1998–99 (£10 million from each body). English Heritage and the HLF have, however, stopped accepting new applications in this financial year because the scheme is massively oversubscribed. They will re-open the scheme later under revised guidelines.

Departmental Objectives and Performance

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans he has to implement the recommendations of the Culture, Media and Sport Committee's Fifth report on the objectives and performance of the Department for Culture, Media and Sport. [45893]

Mr. Chris Smith [holding answer 15 June 1998]: We shall consider the Report carefully and respond to the Committee in due course.

UK Sports Institute

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many contracts for the UK Sports Institute have been (a) put out to tender and (b) signed. [44727]

Mr. Banks [holding answer 10 June 1998]: No contracts have as yet been put out to tender or signed for the development of the United Kingdom Sports Institute Headquarters. We anticipate the first contract being signed within the next two months.

Millennium Celebrations

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what initiatives his Department has taken to promote millennium celebrations in southern England; and if he will make a statement. [45440]

Mr. Chris Smith: In Bristol on 27 February, I launched a series of eight Regional Millennium Conferences, which culminated on 16 April in London. The conferences were designed to explain the Government's vision for the Millennium celebrations; publicise the Millennium Commission's various programmes, including the £100m nationwide Millennium Festival; give details of the New Millennium Experience Company's national programme of activities; provide guidance for events organisers on how to apply for funding under the various schemes; and promote co-ordination and the sharing of good practice. 82 organisations attended the South Western conference and 213 the South Eastern, a good coverage which effectively spread useful information about the Millennium to local authorities and other organisations throughout the South of England.

The Millennium Commission (of which I am Chairman) has to date offered grant totalling nearly £210 million to capital projects in the South East and South West regions, ranging from international-scale projects like the Millennium Seed Bank in Sussex and the Eden Project in Cornwall, to small Village Halls from Ashurst to Avon.

Football

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what representations he has received on the decision of the Nationwide Football League and Football Association to arrange for the Division Three play-off between Colchester United and Torquay United to take place on Friday 22 May; and if he will make a statement. [45546]

Mr. Banks: My Department has received one letter on this subject, which is a matter for the Football League. I understand that the Football League's decision to stage the Division Three play-off Final on 22 May was taken following careful consideration of other venue and date options, and full consultation with all interested parties including the Football Association.

Radio Stations

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if his Department has given guidance to the Radio Authority about the suitability of (a) topless darts, (b) bouncing dwarfs and (c) news-presenting rabbits on national radio stations; and if he will make a statement. [46278]

Mr. Fisher [holding answer 16 June 1998]: The Government have not given guidance to the Radio Authority on topless darts, bouncing dwarves, rabbits as news presenters or indeed any other animals in key roles. It is entirely for the Radio Authority to interpret the provisions of the Broadcasting Acts 1990 and 1996 and to determine their licensing procedures accordingly.

Independent radio licensees are required by the Authority to ensure that their programme content meets a 'promise of performance', which forms part of their licence and which continues in force if ownership or control of the licence changes.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport by what statutory or other criteria the Radio Authority would assess the suitability to hold an independent national radio licence of any company taking over the current holder of such a licence; and if he will make a statement. [46275]

Mr. Fisher [holding answer 16 June 1998]: The Radio Authority applies the restrictions on the control of national analogue radio licences set out in the Broadcasting Acts 1990 and 1996. As such, the Authority must refuse to issue such a licence to individuals who, or companies which, are specifically excluded under that legislation. As well as restrictions on individuals from, or companies registered, outside the European Economic Area, licences may not be controlled by advertising agencies or by bodies whose primary purposes are political or religious. The authority must also refuse licences to applicants whose holdings in other sectors of the media exceed the limits set out in the Acts, or in cases where the Authority is not satisfied that the applicant is a fit and proper person to hold such a licence.

Media Ownership

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what powers (a) his Department and (b) the Radio Authority have to intervene in the take-over of one or more of the three companies holding independent national radio licences; and if he will make a statement. [46273]

Mr. Fisher [holding answer 16 June 1998]: The Radio Authority is solely responsible for licencing independent radio services in the UK. The Authority enforces the strict limits on the holding of national analogue radio licences by companies active in other sectors of the media, and the other restrictions on the holding of licences set by the Broadcasting Acts 1990 and 1996. It may refuse to issue a national radio licence and has powers to rescind licences already issued.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) what assessment he has made of the implications for plurality and diversity of ownership within the media industries of the proposed take-over by News International companies of Talk Radio UK Ltd; and if he will make a statement; [46272]

(2) what plans he has to prevent further expansion in the United Kingdom broadcasting sector by News International and associated companies; and what assessment he has made of the extent to which such expansion is in the public interest; [46276]

(3) what steps he is taking to promote plurality and diversity of ownership within the United Kingdom media industries. [46271]

Mr. Fisher [holding answer 16 June 1998]: The media ownership controls included in the Broadcasting Acts 1990 and 1996 are designed to protect plurality and diversity in the broadcasting industry. I have no plans to introduce further legislation. One of the effects of the Broadcasting Acts is that, since its newspaper titles have over 20 per cent. of national circulation, News International cannot control a national analogue radio licence nor have a holding of more than 20 per cent. in a company which controls such a licence.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Car Manufacturers

Mr. Brake: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will provide details of Government grants provided to car manufacturers to establish or expand car or component factories in the UK in each of the last five years. [46091]

Mr. Battle: Under the Regional Selective Assistance (RSA) scheme, grant offers totalling £210 million were made between 1 April 1993 and 31 March 1998 in support of 187 investment projects by motor vehicle manufacturers and component suppliers. Offers in each financial year were as follows:

£ million

	Motor vehicle manufacturers (SIC 3410)	Motor vehicle parts and accessories suppliers (SIC 3430)
1993–94	5.85	13.70
1994–95	11.57	11.26
1995–96	.54	15.84
1996–97	60.34	17.80
1997–98	65.97	7.45

Science Research

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans he has to increase private funding for science research. [46218]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 16 June 1998]: The Government are looking at ways in which the private sector's contribution to science research can be increased. My Department has recently published, in conjunction with H.M. Treasury, a consultative document, "Innovating for the Future: Investing in R&D" seeking views on this matter. This area is also being addressed in the Comprehensive Spending Review.

It is also important to ensure that the private sector takes advantage of the output of the UK's highly rated Science Base and the recently announced "University Challenge" fund will assist in this process.

Foresight Programme

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what action she is taking to raise the profile of the Foresight programme. [45874]

Mr. Battle: There is substantial activity across a broad front. Shortly after the general election the President of the Board of Trade called for an audit of Foresight activities across Government. The audit provided a baseline against which future agendas could be set and progress monitored.

In response to the audit, a group of Ministers with responsibility for Foresight in Government Departments was set up to provide top-level co-ordination of Foresight across Whitehall. The President of the Board of Trade requested regular progress reports. The first of these was published on 16 June.

The progress report shows that Government departments and public sector organisations have substantially increased their involvement in Foresight over the last six months, to its highest level ever.

The Foresight Steering Group has been restructured to broaden the range of interests represented in Foresight.

The success of projects such as the Foresight Vehicle—which develops technologies for cleaner, greener, and safer cars of the future—and the Clear Zones initiative for innovative urban transport systems, highlights the contribution that Foresight is making to sustained competitive advantage and enhanced quality of life.

The Foresight LINK Awards attracted 91 bids from consortia wishing to pursue projects addressing Foresight priorities. This builds on the earlier Foresight Challenge competition.

Research Councils and Departments are supporting nineteen LINK programmes that reflect Foresight priorities, worth a total of £170 million.

The first of the new SMART Foresight Awards, recognising visionary work in smaller firms, will be made on 17 June.

Proposals for consultation on the next round of Foresight were published in March. Over 35,000 copies have already been distributed. Many of the early responses come from organisations which are new to Foresight.

The next round of Foresight will include a number of cross-cutting themes which reflect the Government's high-level priorities. These include sustainable development, future cities, crime control, and the aging population. Early work to develop plans for particular themes is involving a number of departments.

Eastern Electricity

Mrs. Gordon: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement on Eastern Electricity's Eco Power Pricing Scheme. [46232]

Mr. Battle: Specific schemes are for the companies concerned. Competition in electricity supply will provide suppliers with the opportunity to offer innovative tariffs and services throughout the country, including promoting green energy schemes. I welcome the fact that companies are beginning to take up this challenge—in particular those which support renewable energy projects.

Internal Market Council

Mr. Maclean: To ask the President of the Board of Trade which minister represented the United Kingdom at the Internal Market Council in Brussels on 18 May; and what was Her Majesty's Government's policy on the chocolate draft directive. [45669]

Mrs. Roche: Lord Simon chaired the Council. William Stow, Deputy Director General, Trade Policy and Europe, in the Department of Trade and Industry, represented the UK.

In our Presidency, the Government continue to seek an agreed solution on chocolate which fully respects all established manufacturing traditions within the Member States. Whilst some progress has been made, agreement has been blocked by five Member States who object to the addition of non-cocoa vegetable fats to chocolate. Since the May Council there have been signs that some of these countries may be reconsidering their position, and our efforts to negotiate an acceptable common position are continuing.

Metrication Policy

Mr. Nicholls: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if her reappraisal of metrication policy is complete; and when she expects to publish the results. [46142]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: I expect the re-appraisal of metrication, including the obligation to use metric units of measurement for specified purposes, to be completed later this summer. The publication of results will follow completion of the re-appraisal.

Wind Power

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what plans she has to encourage off-shore wind power generation; [45984]

(2) what involvement her Department has in the exploratory work of Border Wind off the coast at Blyth in Northumberland; [45985]

(3) if she will assess the Norwegian Water Resources and Energy Administration's report on the failures of the Danish wind power programme. [45986]

Mr. Battle: I am currently reviewing policy for new and renewable sources of energy, including potential for offshore wind. From work undertaken so far, it seems that the achievement of 10% of the UK's electricity from renewables by 2010 would almost certainly require bringing forward technologies in addition to those proposed to be supported under fifth Non-Fossil Fuel Obligation (NFFO-05), including offshore wind energy. I plan to participate through our renewable energy programme in a European Union JOULE project to study the structural loading of a wind turbine off the coast of Blyth in Northumberland. We are aware of the Norwegian report to which my hon. Friend refers.

Insider Dealing

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she has powers to re-examine, or cause to be re-examined by some other authority, closed DTI investigations into alleged insider share dealing. [46140]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: It is always open to the Secretary of State to appoint inspectors to investigate alleged insider dealing if there is evidence justifying such appointment.

Dounreay

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what advice she has sought from the Government's Radioactive Waste Management Advisory Committee in respect of possible methods of handling the remaining irradiated spent fuel at Dounreay in the period of decommissioning the plant. [45450]

Mr. Battle: The Government believe that nothing is more important than safety in the management of nuclear facilities which is why we welcomed the investigation into the management of safety at Dounreay by the Health and Safety Executive (HSE) and the Scottish Environment Protection Agency (SEPA). I shall be considering the UKAEA's future proposals for Dounreay in the light of any recommendation by the HSE and SEPA and will consult with the Government's Radioactive Waste Management Advisory Committee and other interested groups as appropriate.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps have been taken to implement Commission decision 92/194 EURATOM of 4 March 1992, in respect of remediation of waste management arrangements at Dounreay. [45873]

Mr. Battle: 92/194/Euratom: Commission Decision of 4 March 1992 imposed a formal "warning" concerning the standard of the nuclear material accountancy and control procedures in a facility at Dounreay.

To rectify the situation, modifications were made to the plant and to management procedures, and improvements were made to the accounting, measurement and associated record systems across the whole facility, including the relevant waste streams.

Millennium Compliance

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what discussions she, other Ministers, and officials of her Department have had with (a) British Energy, (b) BNFL and (c) the UK Atomic Energy Authority in respect of the year 2000 millennium compliance of their computer systems. [45517]

Mr. Battle: Ministers and officials are in regular contact with British Energy, BNFL and UKAEA. Officials have raised with them the actions they are taking to address the potential impact of the century date change on their computer systems. All nuclear operators have major programmes of work underway to address the matter, and are working in close co-operation with the relevant safety, security and environment regulators. I understand that all essential work is due to be completed by the end of April 1999. Through a specially formed liaison group involving all civil nuclear site licensees and the independent nuclear safety regulator, the Health and Safety Executive, the nuclear industry is exchanging information on the issue and trying to ensure the adoption of best practice in addressing it.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Sickness and Disability Benefits

Mr. Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans she has to set up a forum to discuss sickness and disability benefits as outlined in The Green Paper, "New Ambitions for our Country: a New Contract for Welfare". [46714]

Ms Harman: I am pleased to announce the first meeting of the Disability Benefits Forum took place today. This is an important step forward to ensure a proper dialogue between Government and disability organisations.

The terms of reference of the Forum are: To consider possible options for changes in the gateways to benefits for long-term sick and disabled people and carers, and how to ensure that help is directed to those who need it.

The Forum will bring together representatives of disabled people and experts in disability issues, to conduct an open and detailed dialogue with the Government.

The members of the Forum are:

	Organisation
Peter Adeane	National Association of Citizens Advice Bureaux
David Behan	Local Government Association
Ian Bruce	Royal National Institute for the Blind and co-chair of the Disability Benefits Consortium
Jane Campbell	National Centre for Independent Living
Alison Cobb	MIND
Nicole Davoud	Independent Disability Consultant
Marilyn Howard	Independent Disability Consultant
Professor R. Grahame	Chairman of the Disability Living Allowance Advisory Board
Jill Harrison	Carers National Association
Rachel Hurst	Rights Now!
Brian Lamb	SCOPE
Margaret Lavery	RADAR

National Insurance

Mr. Dawson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will estimate the effect on Treasury revenue of abolishing the ceiling on national insurance contributions. [46134]

Mr. Denham: If the Upper Earnings Limit on employees' Class 1 contributions and the Upper Profits Limit on Class 4 contributions had been removed in 1998/99, estimated additional revenue of some £4.6 billion would have been raised in respect of earnings in that year.

The figure assumes that the current 10 per cent. contribution rate would apply to earnings above the present Upper Earnings Limit and that the current Class 4 contribution rate of 6 per cent. would apply to profits above the present Upper Profits Limit. The figure also assumes that the Upper Earnings Limit would remain in place for the calculation of employee and employer contracted-out rebates.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Special Advisers

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many special advisers, political advisers and other political appointees are working in his Department; at what annual cost to the public purse including recruitment costs, salaries, pensions and National Insurance contributions; and what was the position in the last full year of the last Government. [43323]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: For details of the numbers of Special Advisers and the annual cost of employing them, I refer the hon. Member to the answer my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister gave to the hon. Member for Woodspring (Mr. Fox) on 11 June 1998, Official Report, column 664.

Amsterdam Treaty (Asylum and Immigration)

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what view the German Foreign Secretary expressed in his recent letter on Article

73K of the Amsterdam Treaty concerning the relationship of national legislation and community legislation in the field of asylum and Immigration policy. [45790]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The letter from the German Foreign Minister expresses the view that nothing in the Amsterdam Treaty provisions on immigration policy prevents national immigration rules as long as they are compatible with the Treaty. A copy of the letter will be placed in the Libraries of the House shortly.

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will place in the Library copies of the correspondence which has been exchanged with the German Government regarding interpretation of Article 73K of the Amsterdam Treaty. [45791]

Mr. Doug Henderson: Copies of letters on this subject from Chancellor Kohl and from the German Foreign Minister, Klaus Kinkel, which have already been made available to the German parliament, will be deposited in the Library shortly, together with a copy of the letter from the Foreign Secretary under which the German Foreign Minister's letter was circulated to other Member States.

Gibraltar

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what support his Department has provided to Gibraltar following recent incidents involving Spanish vessels in British waters. [46123]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The Governor has assured the Royal Gibraltar Police of his full support, and that of HMG, in any measures needed to enforce the laws within the British waters around Gibraltar.

Council of Europe

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last discussed the United Kingdom's budget contribution to the Council of Europe with the Secretary General of the Council of Europe. [46016]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The views of Her Majesty's Government on the UK's contribution to the Council of Europe budget are relayed to the Secretary General in meetings of Ministers' Deputies on a regular basis by our Permanent Representative in Strasbourg.

Intergovernmental Authority on Development

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what initiatives were agreed at the recent meeting of the IGAD Partners Forum in The Hague; what role the United Kingdom Government will play in efforts to achieve peace; and if he will make a statement. [45960]

Mr. Fatchett: The IGAD Partners Forum in The Hague has yet to take place. It is due to meet from 17 to 18 June. I will represent the UK.

The conference will provide an opportunity to reinvigorate the IGAD peace process by developing an action plan for consideration when the talks resume in Addis Ababa in August. The UK will play a full part in the meeting and will remain engaged thereafter.

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations the United Kingdom Government are planning to make to the IGAD members and the warring parties in Sudan before the forthcoming meeting in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, in August. [45961]

Mr. Fatchett: The Intergovernmental Authority on Development (IGAD) Partnership Forum, of which we are a member, has convened a meeting in the Hague from 17 to 18 June. The objective is to re-invigorate the IGAD peace process and to propose an action plan that will be put forward when the IGAD peace talks reconvene in Addis Ababa in August.

All the Sudanese parties will be represented along with the members of IGAD and international partners. I will represent HMG.

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what financial support the United Kingdom Government have given for the IGAD peace talks; and to whom it has been given. [45963]

Mr. Fatchett: HMG have offered financial support to the Intergovernmental Authority on Development (IGAD) for work on the Sudan peace process in the past. The offer has not been taken up.

We are currently considering offering further material support in the context of discussions with IGAD and the Partners Forum.

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the Government will support the establishment of a permanent secretariat for the current peace talks on Sudan under the auspices of the Intergovernmental Authority on Development. [45962]

Mr. Fatchett: The Intergovernmental Authority on Development already has a permanent secretariat.

Youth for Europe

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the expansion of Youth for Europe to non-EU countries in respect of the themes of (a) developing European solidarity and (b) developing European awareness in such. [46072]

Mr. Doug Henderson: One of the objectives of the "Youth for Europe" programme is "to promote exchanges with young people from non-member countries".

We welcome and support action in this field.

Panel 2000

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many times Panel 2000 has met; and if he will list the agenda for each occasion. [46066]

Mr. Fatchett: There have been three plenary sessions of Panel 2000. These were held on 1 April, 6 May and 11 June. The agenda items for each meeting are set out in the list.

There have also been several meetings of five specialised subgroups in which members of the Panel have taken part.

1 April 1998

1. Paper by Demos Think Tank on the international projection of Britain
2. Discussion of Key Messages and audiences
3. Discussion of existing projection methods. Commissioning of four papers (see agenda for 6 May)

6 May 1998

1. Consideration of papers commissioned from the FCO by the Panel
   - Inventory of Information Practice (an overview of international projection of the United Kingdom)
   - International perceptions of the UK
   - Implications of UK devolution for the international projection of the UK
   - Specific promotional projects and events
2. Strategy: Discussion of recommendations by Panel subgroups
   - Subgroup 1: Key Messages about the UK
   - Subgroup 2: The means of delivery
3. Public Sector co-operation in projection: Presentation by the Director General of the British Council on the FCO/British Council/DTI new Images initiative in Australia
4. Panel 2000 and Millennium events
5. Further work, including preparations for Expo Hanover 2000 and new British Embassies in Berlin and Moscow

11 June 1998

1. Consideration of further sub-group reports:
   - Public/private sector co-operation in promoting Britain abroad
   - FCO communication at home and abroad
   - Recommendations on further major promotional events
2. Panel draft Interim Report
   - Key Messages
   - Recommendations
3. Other elements of the Interim Report
4. Arrangements for launch of Interim Report.

India and Pakistan

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if it is the policy of Her Majesty's Government to support membership of India and Pakistan of the Nuclear Non Proliferation Treaty as nuclear weapon states. [46082]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The NPT defines nuclear weapon states as those which exploded a nuclear device before 1967 (before the Treaty existed). Notwithstanding their recent nuclear tests, neither India nor Pakistan has the status of a nuclear weapon state in accordance with the NPT. They cannot, therefore, accede to the NPT as nuclear weapon states.

The UK continues to urge India and Pakistan to accede to the NPT as it stands and without modification. All NPT states parties commit to the non-proliferation of nuclear weapons and undertake to pursue negotiations on effective measures relating to nuclear disarmament.

Kosovo

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps the Government have taken to address the current problems in Kosovo; and what co-operation it has sought from other EU and European countries on this issue. [46055]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The UK has taken a leading role in coordinating international efforts to promote a peaceful resolution to the problems in Kosovo, both as a member of the Contact Group and as EU Presidency. With our European partners, we have taken a number of steps to register our concern at the gravity of the situation and to persuade the government in Belgrade to offer a meaningful political process to the Kosovar Albanian leadership, rather than to continue violent repression. Most recently, the European Council in Cardiff on 15 June agreed to take steps to impose a ban on flights by Yugoslav carriers between the FRY and EU member states. The UK has also been active in the contingency military planning taking place in NATO, and at the UN has proposed a Chapter VII resolution designed to meet the threat to regional security and stability. British aircraft also took part in a NATO exercise on 15 June designed to demonstrate NATO's ability to project airpower rapidly into the area.

Indonesia

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on his Department's policy on the provision of further support from the International Monetary Fund, the World Bank and other financial agencies to Indonesia. [44225]

Mrs. Liddell: I have been asked to reply.

The UK will continue to support Indonesia, including through the international financial institutions, provided economic reforms continue to be implemented vigorously, and recognising that successful economic reform also requires continued progress on political reform. An IMF team is currently in Jakarta discussing Indonesia's economic adjustment programme, and lending may resume next month. The UK also recognises the economic hardship faced by the people of Indonesia and welcomes the steps being taken to alleviate the impact of the crisis on poor people.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD Pig Farming

Mr. Cran: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will visit Beverley to meet the editor of Pig World to discuss the future of the pig industry. [43000]

Dr. John Cunningham [holding answer 21 May 1998]: I have no plans to visit Beverley in the near future.

Mr. Cran: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what requests he has received to contribute an article for the magazine Pig World on the state of the sector and its prospects; and what response he has made. [43002]

Dr. John Cunningham [holding answer 21 May 1998]: The hon. Member wrote asking if I would contribute an article for "Pig World", and I replied to him on 18 May.

Periodicals

Mr. Cran: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his policy on writing and contributing articles for sectoral periodicals. [43005]

Dr. John Cunningham [holding answer 21 May 1998]: I take decisions on requests for contributions to periodicals on the merits of each individual case.

Agricultural Shows

Mr. Jack: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list for himself and each of his Ministers the agricultural shows and similar events which (a) they have attended in the United Kingdom so far this year and (b) they have made commitment to attend during the remainder of the year. [44871]

Dr. John Cunningham [holding answer 8 June 1998]: So far this year, my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary has attended the Suffolk Show on 27 May and my noble Friend the Parliamentary Secretary has attended the Cornwall Show on 5 June.

At present, I plan to attend the Royal Show on 6 July, my hon. Friend the Minister of State plans to attend the Three Counties Show on 16 June, the Royal Show on 6 July and the Westmoreland Show on 10 September. My hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary will be attending the Lincolnshire Show on 25 June, the Royal Show on 6 July, the Great Yorkshire Show on 14 July and the East of England Show on 22 July. My noble Friend the Parliamentary Secretary will be attending the Royal Show on 5 July.

Fishing

Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what percentage of fish caught at sea by British fishing vessels were (a) landed and (b) sold for human consumption in the last year for which figures are available. [46034]

Mr. Morley: In 1997, 89 per cent. of the fish landed by the UK fleet was sold for human consumption. Information on the percentage of fish which is caught but not landed is not available.

Fish Quotas

Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what percentage of their allocated cod quota French fishing vessels have caught in the English Channel in each of the past five years. [46038]

Mr. Morley: Catches of cod in the English Channel by the French fishing fleet, as reported to the EU, and their respective quotas are set out in the table.

Catches and quotas for cod in the English Channel: France

Quota and catch are in tonnes liveweight

Year	Quota	Catch	Uptake (per cent.)
1993	13,815.0	10,702.0	77
1994	12,832.0	10,985.5	86
1995	12,940.0	13,596.1	105
1996	15,030.0	13,420.4	89
1997	15,272.0	15,372.4	101

Source:
EU catch reports

Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what percentage of their allocated haddock quota British fishing vessels have caught in the North Sea in each of the past five years. [46039]

Mr. Morley: The percentage of the UK's haddock quota caught by British fishing vessels in the North Sea in each of the past five years is as follows:

Year	UK quota (tonnes)	UK landings (tonnes)	Landings as percentage of quota
1993	77,620	70,779	91.2
1994	91,820	77,791	84.7
1995	68,030	67,005	98.5
1996	67,830	68,560	101.1
1997	64,241	64,434	100.3

Distant Water Fleet

Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what has been the tonnage of the British distant water fleet in each of the years since 1976. [46036]

Mr. Morley: The most recent available information, on a consistent basis, is set out in Table A2.2 of 'UK Sea Fisheries Statistics 1996', a copy of which is available in the Library. Comparable information prior to 1991 is not available.

Food Safety

Mr. Jack: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what studies his Ministry has undertaken to compare the food safety requirements, animal welfare requirements and agrochemical safety requirements of the United Kingdom with those of each of the countries which export food to the United Kingdom. [45496]

Dr. John Cunningham [holding answer 15 June 1998]: Legislation at EU and UK levels exists to ensure that food products entering the UK meet acceptable standards of safety. Developments in other countries are kept under general review and the Government are committed to improving standards of food safety and farm animal welfare at home and throughout Europe.

Legislation

Mr. Jack: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) which of the requirements of the primary and secondary legislation relating to agriculture, fisheries and food currently in force within the United Kingdom are applicable only in the United Kingdom; [45498]

(2) which of the requirements of the primary and secondary legislation relating to agriculture, fisheries and food currently in force in the United Kingdom are also applicable in other EU countries; and if he will publish the data his Department has collated on the cost compliance for each EU member state where the requirements apply. [45497]

Dr. John Cunningham [holding answer 15 June 1998]: The agriculture, fisheries and food industries are subject to legislation which applies generally, such as employment law, as well as that which is sector specific. Much of the legislation, which is the responsibility of several Government departments, derives from EU requirements which apply to all other member states. The specific information requested could be supplied only at disproportionate cost.

BSE

Mr. Jack: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he will next be asking SEAC to consider the need for maintaining the over thirty months scheme. [45499]

Dr. John Cunningham [holding answer 15 June 1998]: I recently met Professor Sir John Pattison, chairman of SEAC, to discuss a number of issues in relation to the future work of the Committee. The Committee advises Government on all issues in relation to the spongiform encephalopathy diseases and that includes keeping under review the measures currently in force to protect public and animal health. If the Committee considered, in the light of developments, that some measures were no longer necessary or could be altered while at the same time maintaining a proper degree of protection for public and animal health, I would expect the Committee to make such recommendations to the Government, but I have not specifically asked the Committee to review this legislation. I have always made it clear that our first priority must be to protect consumers and I will continue to operate on that basis.

Quarantine

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he expects to receive the report of the Advisory Group on Quarantine. [46641]

Mr. Rooker: The Chairman of the Advisory Group on Quarantine, Professor Kennedy, envisages a delay in the Advisory Group's report, which had been expected this month. It is important that all the evidence be considered most carefully, and given due weight, before the Advisory Group's report is submitted. I now expect that the report of the Advisory Group on Quarantine will be published in the summer or early autumn. A full public consultation will then be held.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Parades

10. Mr. Salter: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what has been the cost of policing the Drumcree parade in each of the last three years. [44749]

Mr. Ingram: The cost of police manpower directly employed in policing the Drumcree parade for each of the last three years has been calculated as follows: £960,000 in 1995, £2,110,000 in 1996 and £680,000 in 1997.

Confidence-building Measures

11. Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will make a statement on new proposals for confidence-building measures in Northern Ireland. [44750]

Mr. Worthington: We have taken a very close interest in measures to build confidence in all parts of the community in line with manifesto commitments.

Of course the Good Friday Agreement is the most substantial confidence building measure that any of us could have hoped for because it provides an agreed long-term basis for tackling the deep historical divisions within the community.

Following the referendums the best way to go on building confidence is to implement the Agreement in a positive spirit and for all of us to use our influence to minimise tensions during what could otherwise be a difficult summer period.

New Northern Ireland Assembly

13. Mr. Gareth R. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will make a statement on arrangements for the first meeting of the Northern Ireland assembly. [44752]

Mr. Paul Murphy: I refer my hon. Friend to the oral reply I gave earlier today to my hon. Friends the Members for Stretford and Urmston (Ms Hughes) and for Birmingham, Edgbaston (Ms Stuart).

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps the Government are taking to ensure maximum participation in the assembly election. [44740]

Marjorie Mowlam: Over 80 per cent. turnout for the referendum suggests a high turnout for the consequential Assembly elections. The Government sent every household in Northern Ireland a copy of the Agreement and an information leaflet stating where, when and how to vote for the New Assembly elections. Additionally, advertisements were placed in Northern Ireland newspapers on 24 and 25 May with details of application procedures for absent votes.

Policing

14. Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans she has for the future of policing in Northern Ireland. [44753]

16. Mr. Grogan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will make a statement on her Department's plans for the future policing of Northern Ireland. [44755]

Mr. Ingram: The Government are committed to securing the best possible police service for Northern Ireland. The Police (Northern Ireland) Bill, currently under consideration in another place, is intended to improve efficiency, effectiveness and accountability arrangements, within the tripartite structure. It will also establish the Police Ombudsman for Northern Ireland. Work is in hand on implementing changes to police discipline and performance management systems, flowing from the Police (Northern Ireland) (Amendment) Order 1995. Policing is also part of the Comprehensive Spending Review, and of the Cross Cutting Review of Criminal Justice, both of which seek improvements to service delivery and value for money. The Government recently published a consultation paper "Your Voice—Your Choice" on the community police interface and on the make up of, and method of appointment to, the Police Authority; we are considering the responses. In addition, the Belfast Agreement (Cmnd 3883) sets out principles for policing and terms of reference for an independent Commission on Policing. I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland to the hon. Member for Fermanagh and South Tyrone (Mr. Maginnis) on 3 June 1998, Official Report, columns 216–17.

The Government will continue to work with the Royal Ulster Constabulary and Police Authority to look for, and implement, improvements to the police service in Northern Ireland. Furthermore, if a peaceful society is achieved, then inevitably questions will have to be faced about the size of the police service. We are on the record as saying that any changes in this area will be handled sensitively and with generosity.

Guardsmen Fisher and Wright

15. Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will facilitate the early release of Guardsmen Fisher and Wright following recent legal decisions. [44754]

Mr. Ingram: The Secretary of State is currently considering these cases in light of the content of the recent judicial review judgment. The cases remain scheduled for further review by the Life Sentence Review Board in October 1998.

Minimum Wage

17. Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what estimate she has made of the effect on employment in Northern Ireland of a minimum wage of £3.60 an hour. [44756]

Mr. Ingram: With tax and benefit reform, the national minimum wage is part of the Government's range of policies to make work pay. It will, therefore, encourage people to move from dependence on state benefits into employment.

Downe Hospital

18. Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will undertake a review of the document entitled, "Securing the Future for Downe Hospital", issued on 29 May. [44757]

Mr. Worthington: A review of this document is not appropriate. The issues which it highlights reflect the consensus of medical advice across the UK. Since its publication the paper has attracted a great deal of support including that of a number of prominent Northern Ireland doctors.

Secondary Schools

19. Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans she has to provide a controlled secondary school in inner south Belfast. [44758]

Mr. Worthington: There are no plans to provide a controlled secondary school in Inner South Belfast. It is a matter for the Belfast Education and Library Board, in the first instance, to establish the need for such school provision and prepare suitable plans.

Irish Language

20. Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress is being made in establishing opportunities for the use of the Irish language in education in Northern Ireland. [44759]

23. Ms Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress is being made in establishing opportunities for the use of the Irish language in Northern Ireland education. [44762]

Mr. Worthington: In fulfilment of the commitment in the Good Friday Agreement a Draft Order in Council was recently laid before the House placing a statutory duty on the Department of Education to encourage and facilitate Irish-medium education. The Order also includes provision for day one recurrent funding of new Irish-medium schools and powers to fund a promotional body in line with current arrangements for integrated education. Seven primary schools and one secondary school currently receive 100 per cent. grant-aid for recurrent expenditure and these cater for 90 per cent. of the 1,400 pupils educated through the medium of Irish in Northern Ireland. In addition, plans to expand pre-school provision this year will include a number of places in Irish-medium settings.

The teaching of Irish meets the foreign language requirement in the statutory curriculum and it is estimated that some 24,000 pupils are studying Irish at present in other secondary schools.

Peace Process

21. Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will make a statement about the development of the peace process. [44760]

Mr. Paul Murphy: Following the result of the referendum of 22 May when the people of Ireland, North and South, overwhelmingly endorsed the Belfast Agreement, I am confirmed in my view that we now have the best chance for a generation to bring lasting peace and political stability to Northern Ireland.

Employment Equality White Paper

22. Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what responses she has received to the consultation on the employment equality White Paper. [44761]

25. Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what responses she has received to the consultation on the employment equality White Paper. [44765]

Mr. Worthington: Written comments on the consultation elements of the White Paper, "Partnership for Equality" were to be sent to Central Community Relations Unit by 12 June 1998. We have received 114 replies which are now being given careful consideration before taking further action.

Victims of Violence

24. Shona McIsaac: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps are being taken to help the victims of violence in Northern Ireland. [44764]

28. Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps are being taken to help the victims of violence in Northern Ireland. [44768]

Mr. Ingram: I refer my hon. Friends to the oral reply I gave earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for Blackpool, North and Fleetwood (Mrs. Humble).

Council of the Isles

26. Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will make a statement on progress on establishing the Council of the Isles. [44766]

27. Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when she expects to make progress in establishing the Council of the Isles. [44767]

Marjorie Mowlam: The Good Friday Agreement allows for the establishment of a British-Irish Council which reflects an earlier proposal for a Council of the Isles.

We are currently making preparations for the establishment of all the various institutions prescribed by the Agreement. In the case of the British-Irish Council this will include consultations with the interested parties, including the Irish Government, to prepare for the inaugural meeting in shadow form later this year.

Security Situation

29. Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment she has made of the current security situation. [44769]

Mr. Ingram: Since the signing of the Agreement on 10 April there have been four murders. In addition several attempts have been made to detonate explosive devices, thwarted by excellent work by the security forces, north and south. Sadly a continuing threat exists from some terrorist groups opposed to the Agreement. The security forces remain alert to deal with this.

Prisoners (Early Release)

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what representations she has received concerning the early release of prisoners. [44751]

Mr. Ingram: I have received a number of representations from various political parties, groups and individual members of the public concerning the early release of prisoners.

Sinn Fein

Mr. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what representations he has made to the Government of the United States of America regarding the proposed employment by Sinn Fein of Ms Rita O'Hare in the United States of America. [46308]

Mr. Ingram: None.

Paedophiles

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland for what reasons the families and victims of the convicted paedophile W. J. McGarry were not informed of his release on 2 April. [45741]

Mr. Ingram: Mr. William John McGarry, who had been convicted on 4 April 1995 of 61 offences of assault and gross indecency against female children, was released from prison, time served, on 2 April 1998.

In accordance with agreed joint protocols, the majority of which are contained in CIRCULAR HSS (CC) 3/96—a copy of which has been placed in the Library—the Prison Service served Mr. McGarry with a Notice detailing his requirement—in line with the provisions of the Sex Offenders Act 1997—to register with Police within 14 days of his discharge from custody and, on 2 April 1998, it notified the Police that McGarry was being discharged and was a person required to register.

I understand that Mr. McGarry's release date was notified to the relevant Social Services authority shortly after his committal to prison under sentence in 1996 but that the usual reminders, which are generally issued three months prior to final discharge, were not sent and that is something that I very much regret.

I must stress, however, that all the relevant authorities were notified of Mr. McGarry's release before he was discharged.

Steps have now been taken to ensure that the agreed protocols are rigorously followed.

I would remind my hon. Friend that, while the Prison Service has no liability to identify and notify the victims, or their relatives, of offenders discharged upon completion of their sentence, the Northern Ireland Prison Service and the Probation Service Northern Ireland work very closely with the Social Services in the local area and are confident that the existing arrangements take account of both the needs of the Community and of the offender. Even so, an inter-agency working group is currently considering how best to improve the communication about and the management of the release of such offenders. I expect to receive their conclusions and recommendations shortly.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when the RUC Case Unit was informed of the release of W. J. McGarry. [45742]

Mr. Ingram: The RUC CARE Unit, on inquiry, was informed by the Prison Service on 1 April of Mr. McGarry's impending release.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will list the normal procedures followed and the relevant agencies involved when the release of a paedophile is pending, including informing the victims and their families. [45743]

Mr. Ingram: Any person convicted of one of the sexual offences listed in Schedule 1 to the Sex Offenders Act 1997 is required, within 14 days of discharge from custody, to register with Police.

The Northern Ireland Prison Service serves such prisoners, during their release interview, with a Notice detailing this requirement. In addition, the Prison Service routinely and automatically notifies the Force Information Bureau of the RUC of the temporary or final release of every prisoner. In the case of Schedule 1 offenders, the FIB is additionally supplied with a copy of the Notice of Requirement to Register served on the discharged prisoner.

As I indicated to my hon. Friend in an earlier reply, the Northern Ireland Prison Service, in addition to liaising with the Police, works closely with the Courts, Probation Service Northern Ireland and the relevant Social Services authorities as well as with Psychiatrists, Psychologists and other professionals involved in case management prior to the release of the offender.

The Prison Service, in common with other agencies, remains seriously concerned that the unregulated release of information about persons convicted of sexual offences may prejudice the work of those agencies assisting the process of re-settlement and re-integration and may also lead—as in recently widely reported cases in England and Wales—to public disorder and the commission of crime.

The Prison Service has, however, in co-operation with other Agencies, agreed procedures to manage the disclosure of information relating to the release of sex offenders where this is judged to be appropriate and is already dealing with such cases.

HEALTH

Road Accidents (Payment for Treatment)

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on progress on the recovery of NHS expenditure on the treatment of road accident victims from those responsible for the accidents in question; and if he will make a statement. [45522]

Mr. Milburn: The National Health Service recovers around £13 million per year towards the cost of treatment of the victims of road traffic accidents under the terms of the Road Traffic Act 1988. A draft Bill outlining a revised scheme will be introduced as soon as Parliamentary time permits.

The intention in the Bill will be to improve the administration of collection and increase the amounts collected more closely in line with actual costs.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to further extend the recovery of NHS expenditure on accident victims from those responsible for accidents (i) in the workplace and (ii) elsewhere; and if he will make a statement. [45510]

Mr. Milburn: There are currently no plans to extend the recovery of the costs of National Health Service treatment, as provided for by the Road Traffic Act 1988, to other forms of accident. The suggestion that such an extension might be made, as raised by the Law Commission in their consultation document "Damages for personal injury: Medical, nursing and other expenses", is being considered.

NHS Pension Scheme

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of general practitioners' staff have taken advantage of the NHS Pension Scheme. [45754]

Mr. Milburn: It is not possible to calculate a precise percentage of practice staff in the National Health Service Pension Scheme as the figures available relate to different months. However, data from the NHS Pension Agency show 59,064 practice staff in the pension scheme at February 1998. Data from the General Medical Services Census show 60,579 whole-time equivalent practice staff at October 1997.

Primary Care Groups

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures he will take to maintain a balance of interests within the make-up of primary care groups in the new NHS. [45483]

Mr. Milburn: Primary Care Groups will be established as a committee or sub-committee of the health authority. The chief executive of the health authority is the accountable officer and must ensure that proper arrangements are in place for ensuring that the Primary Care Group operates within the authority it has been delegated. The health authority will also ensure that arrangements are in place that meet the needs of the local population, within the terms of the health improvement programme. Governing arrangements of a Primary Care Group will include input from doctors and community nurses, and representation of social services.

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what mechanisms he proposes to ensure that medical justification is the prime motive for spending decisions within primary care groups in the new NHS. [45481]

Mr. Milburn: Medical justification will remain the prime motive for spending decisions in Primary Care Groups. Individual general practitioners will use their clinical judgment to decide, as they do now, what is best for the individual patient. Patients will continue to be guaranteed the drugs and the treatments they need. Participation by GPs within a Primary Care Group, or membership of a Primary Care Group board, will not interfere with their terms of service obligation always to refer and prescribe in the best interests of their patients.

Varicose Veins (Operating Waiting Lists)

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of hospital operation waiting lists in each health authority are accounted for by women waiting for varicose vein operations. [45751]

Mr. Milburn: The information requested is not available centrally, since waiting list information is collected only by medical specialty. Varicose vein operations are part of general surgery and not separately identified.

Insulin Injection Pen Needles

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress he has made in consideration of whether general practitioners should be allowed to prescribe insulin injection pen needles on the National Health Service. [45545]

Mr. Milburn: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Tynemouth (Mr. Campbell) on 28 April 1998, Official Report, column 121.

Dental Services

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the current level of access to NHS dentistry; and what measures he is taking to increase access to dental healthcare. [45532]

Mr. Milburn [holding answer 16 June 1998]: We are aware that there are localised problems of access to National Health Service dental services in some areas of the country. That is why, in September 1997, we introduced the Investing in Dentistry (IID) scheme. We have made £19 million available through this scheme to help dentists to expand existing practices and to set up new ones in areas of the country where access problems are most acute. To date, we have received over 450 IID proposals from health authorities. In the longer term, we will be piloting the personal dental services which will provide health authorities with the flexibility to tailor dental services more closely to local need. I recently announced 15 pilot schemes, involving over 150 dentists, to be launched in October this year.

Cystic Fibrosis

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the costs of introducing universal screening of children for cystic fibrosis. [45983]

Mr. Boateng: Research evidence about antenatal and neonatal screening for cystic fibrosis, which will include some estimates of costs, is due to be published shortly. The National Screening Committee, which offers Ministers advice about the case for introducing or changing individual screening programmes, will consider this evidence and offer advice about the next steps later in the year.

Public Appointments

Mr. Healey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he intends to publish details of the public appointments made by his Department; and if he will make a statement on the involvement of members of the local community on NHS boards. [46426]

Mr. Dobson: A report with details of all public appointments made to bodies sponsored by the Department of Health is published today. It contains details of 3,794 individuals appointed to 586 bodies at 1 March 1998. It relates to chairs and non-executives in National Health Service trust and health authority boards, members of Executive Non-Departmental Public Bodies (NDPBs) and, for the first time, contains details of those who serve on the 41 Advisory NDPBs which give specialist technical and professional advice to my Department.

Of those people named in the report, around 1,000 have been appointed by me since 1 May 1997, predominantly to NHS trusts and Executive NDPBs.

All these appointments have been made on merit to the exacting procedures laid down by the Commissioner for Public Appointments, which ensure an open and transparent process and encourage people from all walks of life to come forward.

We have honoured the Government's commitment to increase the local accountability of NHS boards, by publicly advertising posts and by seeking nominations from local authorities and Members of Parliament. We have appointed people who live within the local community wherever possible and have substantially increased the participation of women and people from ethnic minorities. In the year to 1 May 1998, 36 per cent. of chairs, and 52 per cent. of non-executives appointed were women and 9 per cent. of appointees were drawn from the ethnic minority population.

We have significantly changed the make-up of NHS trust boards to reflect the abolition of the internal market and the new local partnership which we expect NHS trusts to develop. Of those people appointed since 1 May 1997, over 30 per cent.—the largest single group—are NHS users, carers or voluntary workers.

We intend to maintain this progress and are currently in the process of appointing around 300 people to serve on health authority boards. When completed, details of these new appointments will be placed in the Library and published on the Internet. Copies of the Department of Health Public Appointments Annual Report 1998 are available in the Library.

Hip Operations

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Health in respect of how many cases of hip joint replacement operations conducted in England and Wales since 1980, patients have been readmitted to hospital for further hip replacement surgery within (a) five years and (b) 10 years of the original operation. [45776]

Mr. Milburn: There are currently no mechanisms within the data collection systems in England which allow hospital operations to be linked to individual patients. We are, however, discussing with the professions how we might get better information on the outcome of primary hip replacement operations. The table shows the number of primary and revision hip replacement operations carried out in England since 1990–91.

Information about hip operations in Wales is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

Total hip replacement and revision of hip replacement operations

Community Health Councils

Sir Sydney Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement about the role of community health councils, with particular reference to their independence vis-a-vis local health authorities and the regional offices of the NHS; and if chairmen and members of community health councils can be removed before their appointment period expires. [46133]

Mr. Milburn: Community Health Councils are statutory bodies which are independent of health authorities. Regional offices of the National Health Service Executive provide operational support to facilitate CHCs' fulfilment of their functions. Regulations provide that members, including chairmen appointments, can be terminated by resignation, failure to attend meetings for 4 months, and if the Secretary of State considers that it is not in the best interests of the health service for a person to continue as a member.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Ogden Tables

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what steps he proposes to take to require the courts to receive in evidence and apply the new edition of the Ogden Tables in personal injury and fatal accident cases. [45436]

Mr. Hoon: The Lord Chancellor will take note of the result of the appeals to the House of Lords in Wells v Wells, Thomas v Brighton Area Health Authority and Page v Sheerness Steel, and consult interested parties, before exercising any powers which may affect the calculation of awards in personal injury claims. I understand that the appeals have now been heard. It is expected that the outcome will be known in the near future.

Legal Aid

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what representations he has received from Cumbria on his proposed reforms to legal aid. [45654]

Mr. Hoon: Since the announcement of these reforms in October last year we have received many hundreds of letters about the reforms and, more recently, some 238 responses to the consultation papers "Access to Justice with Conditional Fees". These letters and responses have not been recorded by the geographical location of the sender and this information could be obtained only disproportionate cost. However, it has been possible to establish that, since October last year, the hon. Gentleman has forwarded five letters about these reforms from organisations and individuals in his constituency to my noble and learned Friend the Lord Chancellor.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what is his estimate of the cost to legal services of asylum seekers whose application has not been resolved in the last year for which figures are available. [45540]

Mr. Hoon: The information requested, in so far as it relates to costs to the legal aid fund, is not available, because this information is not recorded separately on the Legal Aid Board's computer database.

DEFENCE

RAF Northolt

Mr. Pound: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has received requesting an increase in commercial operations at RAF Northolt. [45708]

Dr. Reid: The Ministry of Defence has frequent contracts with established casual and regular civil users of RAF Northolt. In addition, since 2 May 1997, MOD has received specific unsolicited representations from the following business aviation users about utilising spare capacity at RAF Northolt:

Heathrow Executive Jet Operators' Association

Operational Support Services

Magna

Granada Group

Servant Transport Consultants

Glasgow Prestwick International

Luftair Aviation

Virgin Executive Jets.

Most of these approaches were of a tentative nature. Only one explicitly mentions an increase in commercial operations at RAF Northolt over the limits currently in place.

"Shaping the Future Together"

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the cost to his Department of the production and distribution of the annual report on defence activity in 1997–98 entitled "Shaping the Future Together". [46139]

Mr. George Robertson: Seventy-five thousand copies of the annual report on defence activity were produced at a cost of 21.53 pence per copy. Copies of the Report were distributed to all Members of Parliament and to Members of the House of Lords with a particular interest in defence issues. The report is available to members of the public on request from the MOD Directorate of Information Strategy and News and on the MOD Touring Exhibition which visits outdoor shows over the Summer. A number of copies have already been distributed to journalists and other members of the public at a cost of approximately £50 in postage.

Prisoners of War

Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what assessment he has made of the extent of the deductions made from the pay of protected personnel in enemy prisons during the Second World War; and what is his policy on compensation for those affected; [46195]

(2) what representations he has received from Second World War protected personnel who had their pay deducted. [46193]

Mr. Spellar: I refer the hon. Member to the answers I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Carmarthen, West and South Pembrokeshire (Mr. Ainger) on 24 July 1997, Official Report, column 720 and to the hon. Member for New Forest, West (Mr. Swayne) on 9 March 1998, Official Report, column 41.

Land Mines

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many and what percentage of the anti-personnel landmines in the possession of United Kingdom armed forces have been destroyed since 1 May 1997. [46135]

Mr. George Robertson: 438,727 anti-personnel landmines have been destroyed since 1 May 1997. This represents 45.6 per cent. of the total number of such landmines held by the UK.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what measures he is taking to ensure that the landmines in the possession of the United Kingdom armed forces are destroyed before 2004 in accordance with the Ottawa Convention. [46136]

Mr. George Robertson: I refer the hon. and learned Member to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Leicester, East (Mr. Vaz) on 8 June 1998, Official Report, columns 423–24.

National Air Traffic Services

Ms Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the financial relationship between the Ministry of Defence and National Air Traffic Services. [46444]

Mr. Spellar: The Ministry of Defence and National Air Traffic Services Ltd. collaborate closely in the provision of air navigation services in United Kingdom airspace. Costs are shared, by agreement, broadly in proportion to the services supplied.

Bulldog Training Aircraft

Laura Moffatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the Private Finance Initiative Project to replace the Bulldog training aircraft. [46914]

Dr. Reid: I am pleased to announce that Bombardier Services has been selected as the preferred bidder for the Royal Air Force's planned Light Aircraft flying task contract. The contractor will supply Grob 115D aircraft. The aircraft will be owned and maintained by the contractor who will provide flying hours and support services to the University Air Squadrons and the Air Cadet Air Experience Flights at 13 locations across the UK.

The planned contract will provide the RAF with a modern aircraft that is ideally suited to the training role it is required to perform. The aircraft is quieter and significantly cheaper to run than the aging Bulldog aircraft it will replace.

The choice of aircraft was narrowed down to the Grob 115D and the Firefly M260. The Grob 115D better meets our particular requirements for the University Air Squadron and Air Cadet tasks and in particular its cockpit size and ergonomics offer a better teaching environment. Moreover, the Grob is quieter and operating costs are significantly less than the Firefly. Taking all factors into account it offers better value for money on this occasion.

Subject to final negotiations, the contract is expected to result in savings in excess on £30 million over its ten-year life, compared with the cost of running-on the Bulldog. It is also cheaper than our assessment of the cost of a conventional procurement of a new aircraft fleet.

The service is to be procured in line with the Private Finance Initiative, demonstrating the Government's strong resolve to achieve value for money in Defence support. Appropriate risks will rest with the contractor and the contract will contain suitable incentives to ensure the RAF receives a high quality service.

Gallantry Medals

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many gallantry medals were awarded to members of Her Majesty's Forces serving in (a) the Falklands war, (b) the Gulf war and (c) peacekeeping operations in former Yugoslavia; and if he will list the class of gallantry medals awarded. [45394]

Mr. George Robertson: Awards for gallantry are published in the London Gazette, copies of which are placed automatically in the Library of the House. The first three levels of gallantry awards are recognised by the granting of a medal, and are as follows:

	Current armed forces awards	Additional armed forces awards pre-October 1993	Current non-combatant awards
Level 1	Victoria Cross		George Cross
Level 2	Distinguished Service Order Gallantry Cross	Conspicuous Gallantry Medal (for RN) Distinguished Conduct Medal (for Army) Conspicuous Gallantry Medal (Flying) (for RAF)	George Medal
Level 3	Distinguished Service Cross (for RN), Military Cross (for Army), Distinguished Flying Cross (for RAF)	Distinguished Service Medal (for RN) Military Medal (for Army) Distinguished Flying Medal (for RAF)	Queen's Gallantry Medal, Air Force Cross (for aircrew of RN, Army and RAF) [Air Force Medal—Pre October 1993] (for aircrew of RN, Army and RAF)

Note:

The pre-October 1993 awards were subsequently discontinued following a Joint Service Review of Honours and Awards

Gallantry Medals were awarded to Service personnel for service in the Falkland War, the Gulf War and the former Yugoslavia, as follows:

Royal Armoured Corps

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the average manning levels as a percentage of peace-time establishment in (a) the regular Royal Armoured Corps as a whole and (b) the Second Royal Tank Regiment; and how many (i) Territorials, including S type and (ii) regular reservists are included in those percentages. [45851]

Dr. Reid: Average manning levels as a percentage of peace time establishment are 96 per cent. for the Royal Armoured Corps as a whole and 94 per cent. for the Second Royal Tank Regiment. 43 Territorial Army soldiers are currently serving in the Royal Armoured Corps. No Territorial Army or Regular Reservists are currently serving with the Second Royal Tank Regiment.

NORTHERN IRELAND

European Parliament

Mr. Flight: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland for what reason she attended a question and answer session at the European Parliament on the Northern Ireland peace agreement. [45292]

Marjorie Mowlam: I had the honour of addressing a special plenary session of the European Parliament which had been called to debate a resolution welcoming the Belfast Agreement. I took the opportunity to thank the Members for the positive contribution which the EU has made towards creating the climate necessary for the Agreement.

Military Complaints Procedures

Ms Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when she intends to lay before Parliament the annual report of the Independent Assessor of Military Complaints Procedures in Northern Ireland. [46724]

Barbara Follett: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when she intends to lay before Parliament Mr. Jim McDonald's annual report as Independent Assessor of Military Complaints Procedures in Northern Ireland. [46807]

Marjorie Mowlam: I have today arranged for the Fifth Annual Report of the Independent Assessor of Military Complaints Procedures in Northern Ireland to be placed in the Library of the House. I note that, following Mr. McDonald's first year in office, he is of the firm view that the complaints procedures and their operation continue to be given proper attention by the Army and, although there has been an increase in non-criminal complaints compared with the previous year, I am heartened that the Assessor concludes that this is at least in part a reflection of increased public confidence in the effectiveness of the complaints system.

The report provides welcome reassurance to the Government and to the public that the Army's complaints procedures stand scrutiny.

Tuition Fees

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how she intends to monitor the effects of the decision not to waive fourth-year fees for eligible Northern Irish students at Scottish institutions. [46298]

Mr. Worthington: We shall continue, as now, to monitor the number of applicants domiciled in Northern Ireland who apply for degree courses at Scottish institutions.

SCOTLAND

Higher Education

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on his policy on the future of the four-year honours degree at Scottish universities. [46296]

Mr. Wilson: It will continue to be for higher education providers to determine the length of course required for students to attain the standard of academic achievement appropriate to the award of an Honours degree. The Government support educationally worthwhile change and, in the context of lifeline learning and the proposed Scottish Credit and Qualifications Framework, would expect institutions to make decisions on course length, and suitable entry/exit points, which reflect both the learning needs and prior attainment level of students, the changing requirements of employers and the need to maintain rigorous academic standards.

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how he intends to monitor the effects of (a) the abolition of grants, (b) the introduction of tuition fees and (c) the decision not to waive fourth-year tuition fees for English, Welsh and Northern Irish students, on the (i) age, (ii) gender, (iii) domicile, (iv) ethnicity, (v) socio-economic background and (iv) total number of students at Scottish institutions. [46295]

Mr. Wilson: The Scottish Office regularly receives and publishes information on Scottish student award holders and on all students studying in Scottish higher education, including information on age, gender, domicile and total number of students. The Government are currently considering what further information can be collected and made available on ethnicity and socio-economic background.

In addition, in response to the Garrick Report, the Government have asked the Scottish Higher Education Funding Council to provide advice on issues arising for higher education in Scotland including the implementation of the reforms, in consultation with all those who have an interest in education. The Scottish Office has also asked SHEFC to undertake a survey of access by different socio-economic groups in Scotland and to work with partners in developing a national strategy to widen access.

Teacher Training

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what period of notice teacher training institutions in Scotland will be given before an inspection; and what reasons underlie the decision on the giving of notice. [46294]

Mr. Wilson: HM Inspectorate will be developing the framework for inspection of teacher education in consultation with interested parties. Details such as period of notice have not yet been addressed, but HM Inspectors' normal procedures for inspection provide for giving reasonable notice—usually at least nine weeks. I would expect the position to be similar for inspection of teacher education.

WALES

Public Appointments

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many (a) female and (b) male appointments he has made; and if he will make a statement. [44600]

Mr. Ron Davies: Since 1 May 1997, I have made 96 new appointments. Of these, 36 were women and 60 men. I have also approved the re-appointments of existing members (23 women and 79 men) where they met the criteria.

The proportion of women in public appointments in Wales has risen from 26 per cent. in December 1997 to 29 per cent. in June 1998. We are making progress but I am not complacent. I have pledged to redouble our efforts to encourage more women to come forward so that I can balance, wherever possible, the numbers of men and women appointed.

Chernobyl

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what areas of Wales remain contaminated by radioactivity as a result of the Chernobyl disaster; and how many sheep are affected. [45757]

Mr. Win Griffiths: The area of land under restriction in North Wales as a result of the Chernobyl accident is now approximately 530 square kilometres (131,000 acres) and about 180,000 sheep are affected. These restrictions cover areas within the Unitary Authorities of Gwynedd, Conwy and Powys.

TREASURY

Foreign Earnings Deductions

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the impact of the abolition of foreign earnings deduction announced in the Budget on (a) companies employing British subjects overseas and (b) the competitiveness of British consultants working overseas. [40484]

Dawn Primarolo: In reaching the decision to end the general foreign earnings deduction, full consideration was given to all likely practical consequences. It would, however, be wholly misleading to look at one aspect of tax in isolation. The Government believe the best way to support business is by generating a stable economic environment and through broadly based relief.

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the cost to UK aid agencies of the proposed changes to the foreign earnings deduction regulations announced in the Budget. [40918]

Dawn Primarolo: Based on information provided by the agencies, any such cost will be very low. There are a number of measures built into the tax system which are designed to provide support for charities. Foreign earnings deduction (FED) was not one of these. The majority of aid agency employees abroad will not be UK resident for tax purposes and so will be unaffected by the FED changes.

Sir Alastair Goodlad: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the foreign earnings deduction regulations announced in the Budget on the UK staff of overseas aid agencies who are employed on contracts overseas. [40917]

Dawn Primarolo: Most aid agency employees working abroad will not be UK resident for tax purposes and so will be unaffected by the FED changes. The small number of aid agency employees affected by the FED changes will be left in a position similar to that of other UK resident charity employees, and new relief will be available to them for travel and accommodation.

Savings and Investments

Mr. Loughton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he intends to adopt proposals by the European Commission for a minimum tax on income from savings and investments; and what other measures of tax harmonisation are being considered. [43746]

Dawn Primarolo: We support international co-operation in taking effective action against tax evasion in a way which does not damage EU financial markets. We shall be studying the draft directive carefully and consulting on its implications.

A draft directive on cross-border payments of interest and royalties between associated companies is also under consideration.

Budget Measures

Mr. Lilley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will extend Table 1.3 in the 1998 Financial Statement and Budget report entitled, "The Budget Measures", to each of the tax years 2001–02 indexed and 2002–03 indexed. [43987]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 1 June 1998]: The effects of Budget tax and spending measures are reflected in the fiscal projections set out in the "Financial Statement and Budget Report" (HC620). However, the cost of individual Budget measures on an indexed base shown in Tables 1.3 and C.1 are not routinely estimated beyond 2000–01 and any estimates would become increasingly speculative in later years. For measures where revenue effects are expected to be substantially different from those in Tables 1.3 and C.1, information is already published in FSBR appendix C.1; other estimates would be disproportionately costly.

EU Code of Conduct Group

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the (a) dates and (b) venues of future meetings of the European Union Code of Conduct Group. [43573]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 1 June 1998]: Given that paragraph 12 of the Council Conclusions of 9 March 1998 states that the Council

"agrees that the work of the Code of Conduct group shall be confidential", the Government cannot give the dates and venues of meetings. However, paragraph 10 of the same conclusions provide that "the Group shall meet not less than twice a year".

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will list and place in the Library copies of papers and reports prepared for forthcoming meetings of the European Union Code of Conduct Group; [43574]

(2) if he will list the subjects for discussion at the next meeting of the European Union Code of Conduct Group. [43571]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 1 June 1998]: Paragraph 12 of the Council Conclusions of 9 March 1998 states that the Council

"agrees that the work of the Code of Conduct Group shall be confidential".

The Government are not, therefore, at liberty to place papers before the Group in the Library of the House, or to comment on the issues for discussion. However, the Government will place in the Library reports from the Group to the Council which are published, and inter-institutional Communications on harmful tax competition will be subject to parliamentary scrutiny in the normal way.

Post Office

Sir Sydney Chapman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what were the total payments received by the Treasury from the Post Office (a) in corporation tax and (b) under the external finance limit, in each of the last 10 years; and what estimate he has made of the amounts the Treasury will receive in this and the following two financial years. [44677]

Mr. Geoffrey Robinson: Payments received for corporation tax and contributions via the external financing limit (EFL) are shown in the table for each of the last 10 years. No Government estimates of future corporation tax revenue for individual bodies are made. The Post Office's EFL for 1998–99 is £-335 million, before any adjustment resulting from end-year flexibility. The Post Office's financial regime for the two following years is under discussion in the Comprehensive Spending Review and the Post Office review.

£ million

	Contribution via EFL	Contribution via corporation tax
1988–89	102	52
1989–90	102	42
1990–91	0	71
1991–92	74	69
1993–94	182	81
1994–95	235	103
1995–96	245	150
1996–97	285	145
1997–98	1338	215

[1] Provisional outturn

Sir Sydney Chapman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if the Post Office operates under the same public sector borrowing requirement rules as its EU equivalents. [44678]

Mr. Geoffrey Robinson: As long as the Post Office remains in the public sector the Government will need to ensure that there are adequate controls on its borrowing in order to protect the taxpayer's interests. Control is currently exercised via the external financing limit rather than public sector net borrowing. A variety of different arrangements apply in other EU countries.

Tax Demands

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer on how many occasions the Inland Revenue has sent out under the self-assessment initiative (a) more than one demand to the same person, (b) demands where no tax was due, (c) demands containing computational error and (d) penalty notices to taxpayers who filed in time. [44949]

Dawn Primarolo: Under self-assessment, the Inland Revenue issues taxpayers with Statements of Account (not demands) which are a statement of the individual's tax position and include a payslip to enable the taxpayer to make payment if one is due. It is therefore possible that a taxpayer would receive a statement of account showing no tax to pay.

The Management Information System for Self Assessment, whilst recording the number of Statements of Account issued, does not record whether more than one had been issued to the same person or whether any have been issued containing computational errors. Nor does it record the number of penalty notices issued to taxpayers who filed on time but the Inland Revenue do know that some penalties were incorrectly issued where returns were not recorded as received. Incorrect penalty notices will of course be cancelled.

The Inland Revenue will, in the second year of live service for self-assessment, be looking at improved guidance to staff and the development of quality monitoring processes to ensure continued improvement to a system that has performed well in its first year.

Propane (Vehicle Fuel)

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what tax incentives exist to encourage the use of propane as a vehicle fuel; if he will extend tax incentives to encourage propane use; and if he will make a statement. [45128]

Dawn Primarolo: This year the duty on road fuel gases (liquefied petroleum gas (propane) and liquefied natural gas (methane)) has been frozen for the second Budget in succession. This has increased the differential in favour of road fuel gases in recognition of their environmental benefit and more than fulfilled the pledge to maintain the duty differential with more conventional fuels for the lifetime of this Parliament.

Duty rates on the main road fuels are now as follows:

Road fuel gas: 21.13 pence per kg (approximately 2 litres)

Ultra low sulphur diesel: 42.99 pence per litre

Unleaded petrol: 43.99 pence per litre

Conventional diesel: 44.99 pence per litre

Super unleaded petrol: 48.76 pence per litre.

The widened duty differential with conventional fuels offers a clear incentive for high mileage fleets, vans and buses to convert to cleaner gas power and will help offset the cost to motorists of vehicle conversion. As a further incentive to use road fuel gas, the cost of converting a vehicle to run on gas will not be taken into account when calculating any income tax car benefit change.

Diesel Duties

Ms Lawrence: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the revenues which will be obtained by the Treasury under the new definition of ultra-low sulphur diesel in the Finance (No. 2) Bill; and how this compares with the revenues that would be received if no changes were made. [45300]

Dawn Primarolo: The decision to change the definition of ultra-low sulphur diesel was made solely for environmental reasons. No separate estimate was made of the revenue effect. It was assumed that the effect on ULSD clearances of the new definition would be broadly offset by the increased demand for ULSD created by simultaneously widening the duty differential with conventional diesel from 1 to 2 per litre.

Duty Free

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer in what circumstances United Kingdom ferries will be able to sell duty free after 1999. [45661]

Dawn Primarolo: The European Commission has set out in a working document its view, based on interpretation of Community law, of the arrangements which should apply to sales on board ships following the abolition of intra-EU duty-free sales after 30 June 1999. They express the view that (i) duty-free sales of goods to be carried away will be allowed only on journeys which touch the territory of third countries; (ii) duty-free sales of goods to be carried away will not be allowed on voyages directly between Community ports—even if part of a ship's voyage is in international waters; and (iii) duty-free sales of goods for consumption on board will continue to be governed by the national provisions of member states until the Council adopts Community provisions on stores for boats and aircraft. Commission chaired discussions at official level are now underway in Brussels to work out the detail of these proposals.

Smugglers' Vehicles

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the value and number of the vehicles confiscated from smugglers and bootleggers of tobacco and alcohol in each financial year since 1994; and how the vehicles have been disposed of. [45789]

Dawn Primarolo: I regret that figures on the value of these seized vehicles are not available.

In the past four financial years, Customs seized the following numbers of vehicles used in the carriage of smuggled alcohol and tobacco:

Most vehicles seized are restored upon payment of a fee. In cases where restoration is not appropriate, vehicles are sold at auction or for scrap at their trade-in value; a small number may also be appropriated by Customs for operational use.

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what differences there have been in the types and characteristics of vehicles confiscated from smugglers and bootleggers of tobacco and alcohol during the last year compared with those confiscated in previous years; and if he will make a statement. [45788]

Dawn Primarolo: I regret that no central record on the types and characteristics of vehicles seized from excise smugglers is kept by Customs.

Alcohol Duty

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the effect on Treasury revenues of a reduction in beer duty of 10 per cent. [46047]

Dawn Primarolo: HM Customs and Excise estimate of the revenue lost to the Exchequer in a full year through a 10 per cent. reduction in the level of excise duty for beer is £335 million.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the effect on revenues of each 10 per cent. reduction of tax on wine, beers and spirits. [45958]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 15 June 1998]: HM Customs and Excise estimate of the revenue lost to the Exchequer in a full year through a 10 per cent. reduction in the level of excise duty for each of the product types set out is as follows:

Wine: £110 million

Beers: £335 million

Spirits: £80 million.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans has he made to equalise the tax on wines and spirits following the abolition of duty free. [45956]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 15 June 1998]: The Chancellor keeps duty rates under regular review. The abolition of intra-EU duty free sales from 30 June 1999 is unlikely to raise any new policy considerations.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the duty lost through smuggling of wines and spirits from the Continent to United Kingdom in the last year for which figures are available. [45957]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 15 June 1998]: HM Customs and Excise estimate of the revenue lost to the Exchequer through cross-channel smuggling of wines and spirits in 1997 is set out in the table.

£ million

Product type	Excise duty	VAT	Total
Wines	35	15	50
Spirits	20	5	25

Notes:

1. Figures have been independently rounded to £5 million

2. Figures for estimates revenue losses use Customs assumptions that 70–80 per cent. of smuggled alcoholic drinks substitute for similar purchases in the UK.

The above estimates exclude any amounts for revenue lost on wines and spirits involved in commercial fraud or smuggling in freight consignments. There are no official estimates for the extent of these activities.

Tax Collection

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the annual cost of collecting income tax in each of the five tax years prior to the introduction of self-assessment; and what was the estimated cost in the first year of self-assessment. [45341]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 16 June 1998]: The annual cost of collecting income tax in each of the years referred to in the question was as follows (all figures are rounded to the nearest £10 million):

Year	£ million
1997–98 (first year of SA)	1,030
1996–97	960
1995–96	1,000
1994–95	1,020
1992–93	1,070

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many staff were employed in collecting income tax in each of the five tax years prior to the introduction of self-assessment; and what was the number in the first year of self-assessment. [45342]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 16 June 1998]: The number of staff employed in collecting income tax in each of the years referred to in the question was as follows (all figures are rounded to the nearest 100):

	Man years
1997–98 (first year of SA)	37,200
1996–97	38,800
1995–96	41,000
1994–95	43,900
1993–94	44,700
1992–93	47,000

Frozen Assets (Iraq)

Mr. Derek Twigg: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the Government's policy concerning applications for the release of Iraqi frozen assets to cover legal fees. [46915]

Mrs. Liddell: Since 29 October 1997, any application for Iraqi frozen assets to be released to cover legal fees has had to be considered by Ministers. In the taking of decisions, there is a presumption against the release of the assets.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

West Coast Main Line

Ms Keeble: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has received about the upgrade of the West Coast Mainline from rail users in Northampton. [45317]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The West Coast Main Line remains a high profile rail infrastructure project which attracts a high level of public interest. On 7 April, I met a delegation from Northampton to discuss service issues for Northampton. As part of the consultation process I understand that the Rail Regulator consulted both local authorities (County and District) and the RUCCs on the WCML upgrade.

Ms Keeble: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what consultation there has been with rail users in Northampton over the proposed upgrade of the West Coast Mainline agreed by the Rail Regulator. [45318]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I understand that the Rail Regulator consulted both local authorities (county and district) and the Rail Users Consultative Committees on the West Coast Main Line upgrade.

Ms Keeble: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the impact on Northampton's train services of the West Coast Mainline upgrade agreed by the Rail Regulator. [45320]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Franchising Director has considered the impact of the PUG2 scheme when completed for services between London and Northampton. He has satisfied himself that Railtrack will be able to maintain the existing journey times for peak services, and also maintain the current number of such services. The Regulator has taken this advice into account in approving the PUG2 agreement.

Ms Keeble: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what access trains serving Northampton will have to the fast lines on the West Coast Mainline following the upgrade agreed by the Rail Regulator. [45319]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Railtrack has indicated that it will be able to maintain the existing journey times for the fast peak Northampton services which currently use fast lines.

In addition, the upgrade will provide for some spare capacity on the fast lines for operators other than Virgin, which could potentially include faster services via Northampton.

Rural Development and Countryside Commissions

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the projected public expenditure settlement for (a) the Rural Development Commission and (b) the Countryside Commission for each of the next two years. [45667]

Mr. Meacher: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced on 27 March 1998, Official Report, columns 289–91, that the Countryside Commission will merge on 1 April 1999 with that part of the Rural Development Commission which is not to be incorporated into the Regional Development Agencies.

Spending plans for the rest of the Parliament will be announced as part of the outcome of the Comprehensive Spending Review which will be reported to Parliament before the summer recess. Detailed plans for individual programmes will follow.

New Zealand Flatworm

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to limit the damage caused by the New Zealand flatworm. [45665]

Angela Eagle: The New Zealand flatworm was added to Part 1 of Schedule 9 of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 on 17 March 1992, making it an offence to release or allow it to escape into the wild. In 1996, the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food issued a 'Code of Practice to Prevent the Spread of Non-Indigenous Flatworms' and an identification guide. The status of this species continues to be monitored.

Local Agenda 21

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many local authorities have (a) promoted local air quality schemes and (b) published information on the implementation of local Agenda 21 schemes; and if he will make a statement. [45521]

Angela Eagle: Information about the number of local authorities which have promoted local air quality schemes is not held centrally.

The new Local Air Quality Management (LAQM) system, however, came into effect at the end of December 1997. Under this system, district and unitary local authorities are currently reviewing the quality of the air within their area and assessing it against statutory objectives in the UK National Air Quality Strategy for seven key pollutants.

Localities must be designated Air Quality Management Areas where the review and assessment shows that national measures will not ensure that an objective (or objectives) are likely to be achieved by the end of 2005. The relevant local authority must then prepare an action plan in pursuit of the objective(s).

The LAQM guidance which the Government have published to assist local authorities is listed in Environment Circular 15/97 (Welsh Office Circular 63/97) and is available in the Library.

The Local Government Management Board (LGMB) monitors progress by local authorities in adopting and implementing Local Agenda 21 strategies. "Local Agenda 21 in the UK—the first five years" published by the LGMB in July 1997 showed that 55 per cent. of UK authorities were in the process of putting a Local Agenda 21 strategy in place. In July this year, the LGMB will be publishing the results of a new survey of local authorities undertaken in April. This will indicate the number of authorities which have now published Local Agenda 21 strategies and how close we are towards meeting the Prime Minister's target that all local authorities should have a strategy in place by the year 2000.

Rented Accommodation

Mr. Kemp: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to introduce a system of guarantees on deposits for rented accommodation. [45799]

Mr. Raynsford: The Government are concerned about the problem of tenants' rental deposits being withheld unreasonably by landlords at the end of tenancies. We are currently looking at legislation operating overseas to see whether there is an appropriate model for dealing with these problems. But we will need to be satisfied that any new requirements would not deter reputable small landlords, or potential landlords, and that they would achieve a fair balance between the interests of tenants and landlords.

My Department's Housing Investment Programme guidance encourages local housing authorities to consent setting up rent and deposit guarantee schemes where tenants on low incomes have difficulty gaining access to private rented accommodation. These schemes provide a guarantee to the landlord to cover unpaid rent or the cost of damage to the property where the tenant cannot afford to pay a deposit. Over 100 local authorities now operate schemes and schemes are also run by voluntary bodies. The Department provides funding under section 180 of the Housing Act 1996 to voluntary organisations setting up such schemes and is also part funding a project by CRISIS called SmartMove, which aims to develop a network of voluntary schemes in partnership with local authorities in areas with significant levels of homelessness.

Housing

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if regional development agencies will be required to consider housing demand and need as part of their regeneration strategies. [46013]

Angela Eagle: The main vehicle for considering regional housing demand, and for planning for its provision, will continue to be Regional Planning Guidance (RPG). Regional Development Agencies will need to have regard to RPG, and to development plans, in formulating their regional economic strategies and in carrying out their regeneration functions.

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if the regional housing statement currently being drawn up by Government offices of the regions and regional offices of the Housing Corporation will be coordinated with the formulated strategy and activities of relevant RDAs. [45955]

Angela Eagle: The regional housing statements produced by some Government Offices for the first time in 1998, in association with the Housing Corporation and other regional partners, are intended to supplement national guidance to local authorities on Housing Investment Programmes, by highlighting issues specific to individual regions. We are assessing their value and considering whether to extend them to all regions. If they are produced for future years, they will need to take account of the work of RDAs, and where appropriate, of RDA's regional strategies.

Packaging Waste

Mr. Bill O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he plans to publish the reports on the review of the Producers Responsibility Obligation (Packaging Waste) Regulations 1997. [46106]

Angela Eagle: The recommendations of the Advisory Committee on Packaging following its review of the Producer Responsibility Obligations (Packaging Waste) Regulations 1997 are expected very shortly. As soon as they are submitted, a copy will be placed in the Library.

Once Ministers have considered all the issues, a consultation paper setting out any proposals for amendments to the Regulations will be published as soon as possible.

Genetically Modified Organisms

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 1 June 1998, Official Report, column 6, under what statutory authority the holder of a consent to conduct experimental trials concerning genetically modified seeds under the deliberate release regulations may delegate third parties to conduct releases on their behalf. [46207]

Angela Eagle: Under the Genetically Modified (Deliberate Release) Regulations 1992 (as amended in 1995 and 1997), the consent holder is authorised by the Secretary of State to conduct trials in accordance with the conditions of the consent. Therefore, if the consent imposes conditions which permit or require that the trial be carried out by a third party, the consent holder is authorised by the Secretary of State to carry out the trial in this way. In all cases, the consent holder is legally responsible for ensuring that the trial is carried out in accordance with the conditions and limitations of their consent.

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 8 June 1998, Official Report, column 418, if he will make a statement on the locations, references, holders and dates of, and the crops and the modified traits covered by, the release consents for (a) the site of 494 acres and (b) the commercial seed production site covering 17.5 acres. [46206]

Angela Eagle: (a) the consent holder for the release covering 494 acres is John K. Kings and Sons Ltd., reference number 98/R28/3. Consent for this release was granted on 17 March 1998, and is for oilseed rape modified for increased lauric acid production. The applicant has consent to release this material from 1 March 1998 to 1 November 2000. The total area covered by this release is not more than 200ha (494 acres), and is proposed to take place at 15 sites. This release is currently taking place at the following sites—

Whitehouse, Newcastle, Monmouthshire, (18.14ha)

Painslack Farm, Wetwang, East Yorkshire, (10.93ha)

Littledean Farm, Ayton, Eyemouth, Berwickshire, (13.92ha)

Awbridge Farm, Union Lane, Tryscull, Wolverhampton, (17.00ha)

Tythope Park, Kingsey, Thame, Buckinghamshire, (13.94ha)

Manor Farm, Crux Easton, Newbury, Hampshire, (12.12ha)

Bussey Stool Farm, Tarrant, Gunville, Blandford, Dorset, (12.14ha)

Hall Farm, Tofirees, Fakenham, Norfolk, (10.94ha)

Fenton Barns, North Berwick, East Lothian, (17.40ha)

Norcote Hall Farm, Northchurch, Berkampsted, Hertfordshire, (37.51ha)

Hunsley Hall, High Hunsley, Cottingham, East Yorkshire, (6.07ha)

Dunkirk Park, Bridge of Earn, Perth, (10.88ha)

Total area 181ha

(b) the consent holder for the release covering 17.5 acres for commercial seed production is Plant Genetic Systems, reference number 94/M1/1. Marketing consent was granted for this crop on 28 February 1996 under EU Directive 90/220/EEC. As such the applicant is not required to inform the DETR where the GM material is planted. However, the conditions of the marketing consent were for commercial seed production only, and the GM material cannot therefore enter the food or feed chain. Consent for this has not yet been issued by the French Competent Authority. The crop is a hybrid oilseed rape consisting of three different modified lines: a male sterile line, a fertility restoration line, and a combination of both lines expressing restored fertility.

Open Government

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to paragraph 2.19 of his Department's annual report, what was the nature of the four requests made to his Department under the Code of Practice on Open Government in the past year which were refused. [45872]

Angela Eagle: The four requests made under the Code of Practice on Open Government which were refused by my Department in 1997 were:

a. A request for details of submission made by the Commission for the New Towns to the Department to dispose of a site in Milton Keynes to a private developer.

b. A request for details of a Ministerial Direction relating to a scheme of redress for those who had experienced exceptional hardship from generalised blight as a result of the Channel Tunnel Rail Link before the final route was fixed.

c. A request for information on the A5036(T) road scheme identification study.

d. A request for a list of Ministerial Directions to accounting officers made since 1990.

Motorcycles

Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to review the regulations and law affecting learner motorcycle riders. [46189]

Ms Glenda Jackson: We will shortly be issuing a consultation paper to obtain views on the duration of provisional motorcycle licences. In addition, we will be considering, as part of the work on the new road safety strategy and targets, what further measures might be necessary to increase the safety of learner motorcyclists.

Biodiversity

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what measures he has evaluated to maintain the current level of biodiversity. [46227]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 16 June 1998]: The UK Biodiversity Action Plan and UK Biodiversity Steering Group Report contain the measures aimed at maintaining and enhancing biodiversity within the UK. Principal among these measures is the development of costed action plans for priority species and habitats. Some 116 species and 14 habitat action plans were published as part of the Steering Group report and are now being implemented. A further 56 species action plans were published on 2 June and copies are available in the Library. It is expected that by the end of the year over 400 species and 38 habitat action plans will have been published.

Sewerage

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what is the Government's policy on the draft water industry specifications for plastic sewage pipes; and what representations they have made on this matter; [45194]

(2) what discussions have taken place between his Department and the water companies on the draft water industry specifications for plastic sewage pipes; [45195]

(3) what representations his Department has received on the draft water industry specifications for plastic sewage pipes; [45196]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 16 June 1998]: My Department has received 33 letters on the draft water industry specifications for plastic sewage pipes. Such specifications are matters for the sewerage undertakers, and my Department has not commented on them nor had any discussions with the undertakers.

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when the British Standards Institute will be consulting on Part 1 for a European standard for plastic piping systems for structured wall non-pressure underground drainage and sewerage systems. [45197]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 16 June 1998]: The European Standard is currently being considered by the European Committee for Standardisation. I understand that it will be distributed for comment later in the year at which point the British Standards Institution will consult relevant parties.

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many water companies have been prosecuted for polluting groundwater with sewage for each year since 1990. [45198]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 16 June 1998]: Environment Agency records show that there have been no such prosecutions.

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what powers the Environment Agency has to prosecute water companies for polluting groundwater with sewage. [45199]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 16 June 1998]: It is an offence under section 85 of the Water Resources Act 1991 to cause or knowingly permit any poisonous, noxious or polluting matter or any solid waste matter to enter any controlled waters (including groundwater). The Environment Agency may bring a prosecution for this offence under section 85.

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how the Environment Agency monitors sewage leaking into groundwater. [45200]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 16 June 1998]: Most data on general groundwater quality are obtained from water companies' and private industrial and agricultural abstractions. The Environment Agency also monitors specific sites where it believes there is potential for pollution but does not monitor specifically for the effects of sewage leakage.

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what action the Environment Agency is able to take against jetting contractors who damage sewage pipes with high-pressure water jetting. [45201]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 16 June 1998]: If pollution were to occur as a result of a contractor damaging sewage pipes, the sewerage undertaker would be liable. Any prosecution by the Environment Agency would be in line with section 85 of the Water Resources Act 1991. Enforcement action could be taken against the contractor or the sewerage undertaker depending upon the evidence available.

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how his Department measures leakage from small holes in underground sewer pipes. [45202]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 16 June 1998]: The Department does not measure leakage from sewers. Under section 94 of the Water Industry Act 1991, sewerage undertakers are responsible for the effectual drainage of their area and for maintaining their pipework.

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what are the current targets for reduction in leakage from sewer pipes; and how these are measured. [45203]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 16 June 1998]: No targets have been set in relation to leakage from sewer pipes.

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how his Department monitors the effectiveness of the code of practice for removing blockages in sewer pipes which limits the pressure of the cleaning jet. [45204]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 16 June 1998]: The code of practice for removing blockages in sewer pipes which limits the pressure of the cleaning jet was produced on a voluntary basis by the manufacturers. As such, the Department does not monitor its effectiveness. It would be for the sewerage undertaker to specify compliance with a code of practice in any contract with contractors.

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what research his Department has conducted into the damage done to thin-walled plastic sewer pipes from the use of high pressure water jets to remove blockages; and what account his Department has taken of the extent to which recent design changes in jets prevent damage to the pipes. [45205]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 16 June 1998]: My Department has not undertaken any research into this area, which is the responsibility of the sewerage undertakers.

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what research his Department has evaluated into the infiltration of groundwater into sewer pipes and its impact upon the working of the sewer network. [45206]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 16 June 1998]: My Department has not undertaken any research on this issue. I understand that UK Water Industry Research Limited (UKWIR) are carrying out research on behalf of Water UK into infiltration into and exfiltration from sewers, the results of which are expected by April 1999.

Recycled Plastics

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to develop and promote research into and incentives for the recycling of plastics. [45987]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 17 June 1998]: We are committed to an increased level of recycling, and are currently reviewing our national waste strategy. This is aimed at reducing the amount of waste produced and ensuring its environmentally sound management. The recycling of plastics will be covered by the new strategy.

We have held discussions with a number of organisations involved in plastics recycling to ascertain what further measures can be taken by both industry and Government to increase recycling.

Plastics constitutes a significant proportion of packaging waste. The Producer Responsibility Obligations (Packaging Waste) Regulations 1997 aim to double the amount of packaging waste (including plastics) recovered to around 50 per cent. by 2001. The Regulations also impose a material-specific recycling target of 16 per cent. for each packaging material—including plastic packaging—to be achieved by 2001.

Diabetic Drivers

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement about the discussions he has had with the British Diabetics Association concerning driving licences for diabetics. [46281]

Ms Glenda Jackson [holding answer 17 June 1998]: My noble Friend the Minister for Roads met representatives of the British Diabetic Association in February to learn at first hand their concerns about the legislation preventing insulin-treated diabetes sufferers from driving medium-sized lorries and minibuses. She undertook to consider the review of medical evidence which they presented. The Department's Advisory Panel on Diabetes and Driving examined this and other evidence, in the light of which they recommended a limited modification to the present restrictions. The Government are currently consulting on a proposal which would allow, subject to meeting the qualifying criteria and stringent annual medical checks, those who have driven medium-sized lorries to renew that entitlement.

Sellafield

Mr. Alasdair Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what plans he has to reduce liquid discharges from the Sellafield plant; [45866]

(2) what account the Environment Agency is taking of the levels of technetium 99 in (a) seaweed and (b) lobsters in the Solway Firth in setting discharge authorisation levels for the Sellafield plant; [45867]

(3) if he will make a statement on the relationship between current levels of radiation from technetium 99 in the Solway Firth and EU intervention levels; [45868]

(4) what steps he intends to take to reduce radiation levels arising from technetium 99 in the Solway Firth. [45869]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 17 June 1998]: The Environment Agency is currently considering the responses received from a recent public consultation into the application by British Nuclear Fuels plc (BNFL) for variations to the discharge authorisations for the Sellafield site. In determining these applications, all relevant factors will be taken into account. We have reiterated to the Environment Agency that we wish to see progressive reductions in discharges and discharge limits at Sellafield, and this includes technetium-99. The Agency has proposed substantial reductions in the discharge limits for technetium-99 and a legal requirement on BNFL to develop abatement technology for this radionuclide. A number of requests have been made for the Secretary of State to call the applications in for his own determination. These requests are under consideration.

Community Food Intervention Levels are intended for use only in the event of a nuclear accident or emergency when the health impacts may be very uncertain.

Dolby Stereo (Cinemas)

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will examine the aural safety of the Dolby stereo system, used in cinemas. [44988]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 17 June 1998]: I am advised that the Health and Safety Executive is not aware of any aural safety implications of the Dolby stereo system.

Moorside Drift Mine

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement about the fatal accident at the Moorside Drift Mine, Eckington, Derbyshire, on 4 June. [45056]

Angela Eagle: I am saddened to hear of the accident at Eckington and would like to take this opportunity to extend my sympathy to the families of the two men who were killed.

An investigation into the accident is currently being carried out by the Health and Safety Executive's Mines Inspectorate. I will write to my hon. Friend when the investigation has been completed.

Throckmorton Airfield

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he will reply to the letter of 5 March from the hon. Member for Mid-Worcestershire about the planning status of Throckmorton Airfield. [46465]

Mr. Caborn: I signed a reply to the hon. Member's letter some time ago, but it has clearly gone astray. I can only apologise and I sent a further copy yesterday.

Coalfield Taskforce Report

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he intends to publish the Coalfield Taskforce's report. [46104]

Mr. Prescott: I warmly welcome the publication today of the Coalfields Taskforce's excellent report "Making the Difference: A New Start for England's Coalfield Communities". Copies of the report will be placed in the House Library.

Last year, I gave a commitment to help regenerate communities devastated by pit closures. I wanted to ensure that every option open to us was explored so that those communities could get the help and support that they need and deserve. That is why I set up the Coalfields Taskforce last October, under the chairmanship of Paula Hay-Plumb. I want to thank Paula and her team for their hard work and dedication in producing their excellent report.

The taskforce's report is comprehensive in its approach. It includes many promising practical proposals. I want to ensure that our response is equally comprehensive, and that careful consideration is given to the detail of all the recommendations. I will give our initial response at the conference to be held at Ollerton Miners Welfare, North Nottinghamshire on Monday 13 July. I will announce a detailed programme of action for the former coalfield communities in the Autumn.

We all agree that we must redress the decline of our former coalfields communities. Government cannot do this alone. All partners—central and local government, the voluntary and private sectors, and the communities themselves—must make a firm long term commitment if we are to make the difference.

Sites of Special Scientific Interest

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what actions his Department is taking to ensure protection of (a) existing sites of special scientific interest and (b) potential sites. [46696]

Angela Eagle: The Government are currently considering how best to improve the protection and management of Sites of Special Scientific Interest. This will involve examining the powers available to English Nature, who are responsible for notifying potential sites. Officials are preparing a consultation paper seeking views.

Water Abstraction

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what changes he proposes to make to the water abstraction licensing system in England and Wales. [46985]

Mr. Meacher: Together with the Welsh Office, my Department has prepared a consultation paper, setting out a wide range of proposals which will ensure that abstraction licensing and related arrangements in England and Wales provide full protection to the water environment while enabling fair and flexible measures for meeting properly managed demand for water resources. I shall place copies in the Library of the House tomorrow morning, coincident with the paper's publication.

Private Coach Hire Companies

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will review the operation of the tour operators margin scheme in respect of private coach hire companies. [45456]

Dawn Primarolo: I have been asked to reply.

HM Customs and Excise last reviewed the Tour Operators Margin Scheme in 1996 and undertook a comprehensive consultation exercise. Coach operators contributed to the review and full account was taken of their representations. Progress on implementing certain of the recommendations of the review has been constrained by EC law, but a case currently before the European Court of Justice may clarify further the legal interpretation. In the light of the outcome Customs will look again at the possibility of simplified treatment for businesses such as private coach hire companies.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Development Assistance

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what official development assistance was provided by the United Kingdom in 1997 as a percentage of gross national product; and how this compares with the performance of other members of OECD's Development Assistance Committee. [46808]

Clare Short: Precise figures are still to be calculated but the UK's expenditure on official development assistance in 1997 is estimated to have been £2,058 million, representing 0.26 per cent. of GNP. This is slightly lower than the 1996 figure of 0.27 per cent. The UK was the fifth largest bilateral aid donor in 1997 in volume terms. The average for all OECD DAC Member Countries in 1997 was 0.22 per cent. of GNP, its lowest ever level. The average for the European Union was 0.33 per cent. of GNP. These figures exclude financial flows to countries in transition in central and eastern Europe and more advanced developing countries as defined in the Development Assistance Committee list of aid recipients.

There is a clear need for more investment in developing countries to tackle poverty and social exclusion. This government are committed to playing their part, including by reversing the decline in UK development assistance as we promised in the manifesto.

World Bank

Mr. Fabian Hamilton: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development to what extent the objectives laid down by the donors for IDA 11 have been realised by the World bank. [44929]

Mr. Foulkes: The IDA 11 deputies' report—laid in the Libraries of both Houses in February 1998—sets out over 20 areas of action on a range of policy issues, e.g. covering efforts to strengthen the performance-based allocation of the International Development Association (IDA); improving the World bank's country assistance strategy process; encouraging the participation of affected people and non-governmental organisations, and the completion of poverty assessments. Important progress has been made in a number of these policy areas including improvements to the quality and coverage of poverty and environmental assessments, and overall improvements to the quality and impact of the IDA portfolio of projects. A copy of a matrix report dated April 1998 detailing the action taken on the implementation of this framework of policy issues will be laid in the Library of the House.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Parc Prison

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish the findings of the recent inquiries into serious disorders at Her Majesty's prison Parc; what assessment he has made of safety, security and order at that establishment; and if he will make statement. [44713]

Ms Quin: There have been three inquiries into recent events at Parc prison. Two were into acts of concerted indiscipline which took place on 6 May and 14 May, and the third was an investigation into a self-inflicted death which took place on 5 May. All these inquiries were conducted by senior managers in the Prison Service. In addition, I asked the director general of the Prison Service for a report on the current situation at Parc.

It is not current Prison Service policy to publish the findings of internal inquiries of this nature because of security considerations and issues of personal confidentiality. The management of the establishment is kept under regular review and it is working towards an action plan agreed with the Prison Service to deliver improvements in the operation and security of the establishment. I am in receipt of monthly reports on the establishment's progress towards achievement of the action plan. The action plan will be reviewed to take account of the recommendations contained in the recent inquiries and will be monitored closely by the Prison Service.

Zero Tolerance Policing

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what plans he has to implement zero tolerance policing as a formal policy; [45641]

(2) what assessment he has made of the cost implications of introducing a policy of zero tolerance policing; and if he will make a statement. [45617]

Mr. Michael: "Zero tolerance" is a term which has been interpreted in different ways by different people. Ministers have used it to indicate an approach which involves early intervention to discourage crime and disorder at an early stage rather than waiting until anti-social activities have reached a serious level. We are clear that "zero tolerance" does not mean intolerance or indiscriminate crackdowns by the police against the wishes of the community. It means action for, and with the consent of, the community to address the sort of anti-social behaviour which adversely affects people's quality of life.

Many forces have adopted effective strategies to tackle those local crime and disorder problems which impact on the quality of life of their local communities. We have given our full support to such strategies, whether they operate under the term "zero tolerance" or not. The findings of Her Majesty's inspectorate of constabulary's thematic inspection report on police community and race relations, published in October 1997, showed that there is strong support for policing which involves effective targeted action on quality of life issues.

The Home Secretary's key objectives for the police in 1998–99 include tackling local problems of crime and disorder in partnership with local authorities, other local agencies and the public. The Home Office Police Research Group is conducting an evaluation of the range of approaches to counter anti-social behaviour, with a view to developing key indicators on reducing anti-social behaviour. Meanwhile, Her Majesty's inspectorate of constabulary is carrying out a thematic inspection of the policing of disorder.

We are also taking steps to tighten the law in a number of areas. The Crime and Disorder Bill will ensure that the criminal justice system is better equipped to deal with anti-social and disorderly behaviour, including petty criminality amongst young offenders. First anti-social behaviour orders will provide protection from harassment and neighbourhood disorder. They will prohibit specified conduct, and may be made on anyone over the age of 10. If their terms are breached, criminal sanctions will be available.

Secondly, joint responsibilities will be placed on the police and local authorities in every area to work in partnership with other agencies and in consultation with the local community to develop and implement strategies to reduce crime and disorder. Thirdly, the Bill includes a range of measures to prevent and tackle youth crime, including powers for local authorities to establish night-time curfews on children under 10 and a statutory police reprimand and warning scheme to replace cautioning for youngsters and ensure a swift, effective response to their offending.

Prison Service

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish the results achieved by the Prison Service on each of its key performance indicators in each prison for the last available year; and if he will make a statement. [45555]

Ms Quin: The performance of each prison on the Prison Service's key performance indicators is listed in the table.

The overcrowding KPI is formulated in terms of overall Prison Service capacity and population levels; therefore, the performance of individual prisons cannot be meaningfully related to the KPI.

[1] Cost per place performance figures for HMP Parc, HMP Altcourse and HMP Lowdham Grange cannot be provided on a comparable basis because available data include an element for capital repayment

[2] Cost per place figures are provisional because final expenditure figures are not yet available. Final figures are not likely to be significantly different

[3] Purposeful activity performance figures for HMP Parc and HMP Lowdham Grange are not available for the financial year 1997–98, but will be available for 1998–99

[5] Random drug testing started at Altcourse in April 1998

[6] Private prison contractors do not supply training figures because they are treated as commercial in confidence

Prisoners

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) men and (b) women were on rule 43 in prisons in England and Wales on 1 June. [45444]

Ms Quin: The most recent available provisional information is for 30 April 1998. On that date, the number on inmates held on prison rule 43 or young offender institution rule 46 were:

	Good order and discipline	Own protection
Males	421	1,211
Total	428	1,232

Prisoners who are held for their own protection are generally held in separate units offering a normal regime. Prisoners held for the purposes of good order and discipline are normally held in segregation units.

Police Funding Formula

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the names of those serving on the police funding formula working party; and if he will indicate those aspects of the formula currently under review. [45668]

Mr. Michael: The members of the allocation formula working Group are as follows:

Members of formula working group 1998

Members
Ms Lynda Lockyer—(Chair)	Home Office, Police Resources Unit
Mr. Jim Bradley	Home Office, Police Resources Unit
Mr. Andrew Honeyman—(Secretary)	Home Office, Police Resources Unit
Mrs. Liz Curry	Home Office, Police Resources Unit
Mr. Simon Field	Home Office, Resource Analysis Unit

Members of formula working group 1998

Members
Dr. Ian Williamson	Home Office, Resource Analysis Unit
Dr. Phil Emmott	Home Office, Resource Analysis Unit
Mr. Robin Dickens	Home Office, Finance Unit
Mr. Barry Coker	Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary
Mr. Andrew Presland	Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions
Mr. Justin Vetta	Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions
Mr. Steven Marshall	Welsh Office
Chief Constable Barry Shaw	Association of Chief Police Officers
Deputy Chief Constable Malcolm Cairns	Association of Chief Police Officers
Assistant Chief Constable Tony Lake	Association of Chief Police Officers
Deputy Assistant Commander Roy Clark	Metropolitan Police
Mr. John Parker	Metropolitan Police
Mr. Alan Meyrick	Metropolitan Police Committee Secretariat
Mr. Mike Heiser	Association for London Government
Mr. Malcolm Watson	Association of Police Authorities
Mr. John Street	Association of Police Authorities
Mr. Howard Springthorpe	Association of Police Authorities
Mr. Bill Wilkinson	Association of Police Authorities
Mr. Derek Smith	Association of Police Authorities
Mrs. Catherine Crawford	Association of Police Authorities
Mr. Richard Tettenborn	Association of Police Authorities
Mr. Mike Grealy	Association of Police Authorities

The main areas being considered currently by the working group are: the question whether there are additional costs associated with policing in sparsely populated rural areas and/or difficult urban areas; the pensions component; the area cost adjustment; and some technical issues.

I have decided to commission two pieces of external research into whether there are additional costs associated with policing in sparsely populated rural areas and/or difficult urban areas. I hope that the results of this work will inform the 2000–2001 police funding settlement.

Police (Health)

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will introduce annual fitness tests for police officers; [45656]

(2) what research he has evaluated into the cost to police authorities of police officers being unavailable for duty due to illness related to a lack of physical fitness. [45657]

Mr. Michael: Annual fitness tests and the monitoring of sickness absence are matters for individual chief police officers to consider. Many forces do require officers in specialists units, such as firearms units, to undertake regular fitness tests. The Home Office has not undertaken any work as to the causes of sickness absence due to a lack of physical fitness, but has issued police forces with advice on the management of sickness absence, together with training booklets for managers in the police service to try to improve sickness levels amongst police officers. Her Majesty's inspectorate of constabulary has carried out a thematic inspection of sickness in the police service, and has made a number of recommendations for improving the way in which sickness absence and ill health retirement are dealt with. A copy of the report is in the Library. One of the report's recommendations is that all forces should calculate the cost of their sickness absence to a common formula, a format for which is provided in the report.

We will be collecting information from all forces on the way they have responded to that report, and will ask them to provide information on local practice in respect of regular fitness tests.

Chief Police Officers

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the selection procedure for chief officers of police. [45679]

Mr. Michael: The responsibility for making appointments and for managing the procedures for the selection and appointment of chief officers of police in England and Wales rests with police authorities.

On 2 December 1996, the Home Office issued guidance to police authorities following consultation with representatives of the then police authority associations, Her Majesty's inspectorate of constabulary, the police staff associations and the Equal Opportunities Commission.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what was the income for each year since its formation of the Chief Police Officers Staff Association; what is the membership fee for each member; what amount is contributed from public funds; and if he will make a statement; [46085]

(2) if the Association of Chief Police Officers will be subject to the Government's proposed freedom of information legislation; [46115]

(3) if he will place in the Library copies of the accounts for the Association of Chief Police Officers for each of the last five years for which they are available. [46108]

Mr. Michael: Under the current proposals, the Association of Chief Police Officers of England, Wales and Northern Ireland would not be subject to the proposed legislation. ACPO is not a public body within the terms of the proposals. However, much of the information which is supplied by ACPO and which would be held by public bodies such as police forces, or the Home Office, would fall within the scope of the proposals.

The Chief Police Officers' Staff Association is a private, voluntary organisation whose activities are entirely financed by membership subscriptions. The levels of those subscriptions are entirely a matter for the internal management of the association, which is not accountable to the Secretary of State. No public funds are provided to CPOSA to support its activities, although its members may claim expenses in relation to their representative functions on the Police Negotiating Board and the Police Advisory Board. The Home Office has allocated £2,000 in 1998–99 to the staff side in respect of expenses in connection with CPOSA's duties as part of the staff side of the Police Negotiating Board.

I have arranged for copies of the accounts for the Association of Chief Police Officers for the years 1992–93 to 1996–97 to be placed in the Library.

Drivers (Sentences)

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many persons were (a) convicted and (b) jailed for (i) driving with excess alcohol and (ii) driving while disqualified, in each of the last three years for which figures are available. [46236]

Mr. Michael: The information requested is in the table.

Persons convicted of offences of driving while disqualified and driving after consuming alcohol or taking drugs England and Wales

	1994	1995	1996
Driving while disqualified
Persons convicted	24,167	24,394	23,246
Persons sentenced to immediate custody	8,395	9,581	9,483
Driving etc. after consuming alcohol or taking drugs
Persons convicted	78,005	81,464	85,012
Persons sentenced to immediate custody	3,243	3,443	3,529

Notes:

Figures for 1997 are not yet available.

Protection from Harassment Act

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many persons have been prosecuted under sections 1 or 2 of the Protection from Harassment Act 1997; and how many prosecutions have resulted in a conviction; [46229]

(2) how many complaints have been received by the police in respect of section 1 of the Protection from Harassment Act 1997; and if he will make a statement. [46231]

Mr. Michael: Sections 1 and 2 of the Protection from Harassment Act 1997 came into force on 16 June 1997. Section 1 refers to the prohibition of harassment with section 2 advising that a person who pursues a course of conduct in breach of section 1 is guilty of a summary offence.

Provisional court proceedings data for 1997 show 504 prosecutions under section 2 of the Act, which resulted in 247 convictions. In addition, 171 cautions have been recorded provisionally for the offence.

Figures for complaints received by the police in respect of this Act are not collected centrally. However, the British crime survey is collecting information on levels of harassment reported by respondents.

Air Guns

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many cases of deaths and personal injuries resulting from air guns have been recorded in England and Wales over the last five years. [45787]

Mr. Michael: The information requested is contained in the table. The information is confined to notifiable offences recorded by the police in which air weapons were reported to have been used. Corresponding figures for accidental deaths or injuries are not available.

Notifiable offences recorded by the police in which air weapons were reported to have been used in England and Wales, by injury

Year	Fatal injury	Other injury
1992	—	1,718
1993	—	1,572
1994	—	1,580
1995	1	1,400
1996	—	1,203

Figures for 1997 are not yet available.

Cricket

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what discussions he has had with the England and Wales Cricket Board regarding crowd disturbances at test matches following the game against South Africa at Edgbaston on 4 June; [46042]

(2) what discussions he has held with the England and Wales Cricket Board regarding its plans to control crowd behaviour during the cricket world cup in the United Kingdom in 1999. [46039]

Mr. Michael: My right hon. Friend has not had any discussion with the England and Wales Cricket Board on these matters. The Association of Chief Police Officers is responsible for co-ordinating policing arrangements for the cricket world cup. In October 1997, the association held an initial meeting with the tournament organiser appointed by the England and Wales Cricket Board. A co-ordinating group consisting of the organiser and representatives of the 17 forces involved in policing arrangements for the cricket world cup met in January and April, and further meetings are planned. One of the purposes of these discussions is to ensure that there is a consistent approach by stewards and police officers to the behaviour of spectators. West Midlands police held discussions with Warwickshire country cricket club before, during and after the Edgbaston test.

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the total number of cricket-related arrests in each of the past 10 cricket seasons, broken down by (a) test matches, (b) one-day internationals, (c) Sunday league, (d) Benson and Hedges, (e) Nat West and (f) county championship games. [46048]

Mr. Michael: The Home Office collects information on the total number of arrests but it is not possible to determine those which are cricket-related.

Police (Minimum Height)

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will set a minimum height requirement for police officers. [45839]

Mr. Michael: An earlier minimum height requirement was removed by the previous Government in 1990 on the advice of the Police Advisory Board. We have no plans to reintroduce it.

Vehicle Fleets (Fuel)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police and fire authorities have converted their fleets, in whole or in part, to run on compressed natural gas, LPG or electricity. [46125]

Mr. Michael: The information requested is not held centrally. However, a number of police forces are currently engaged in trials of alternative fuels, the results of which will be disseminated by the National Association of Police Fleet Managers. We are not aware of any initiatives within the fire service to trial such fuels.

Closed Circuit Television (London)

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many closed circuit television schemes have been installed by each London borough council. [46370]

Mr. Michael: We do not have a record of closed circuit television schemes which have been funded by local councils. The number of schemes within London boroughs which have received awards under the Home Office CCTV challenge competition are shown in the table. These schemes are sponsored by local crime reduction partnerships, most of which involve the local authority.

Restriction Orders

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many of those British citizens arrested in France in the past month (a) are now or (b) have previously been the subject of a restriction order. [46447]

Mr. Michael: None.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of those convicted of eligible offences in the last five years are currently the subject of restriction orders. [46448]

Mr. Michael: There are currently 71 people subject to restriction orders under the Football Spectators Act 1989. This is an increase of 62 since the start of the year. The number of convictions for football-related offences in the five years 1992–93 to 1996–97 was 19,969.

Football Hooligans (France)

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps the Government have taken to ensure that those arrested for committing football offences in France are tried there. [46449]

Mr. Michael: The policing of the world cup and decisions on dealing with people who are arrested are matters for the French authorities. British and French police officers have worked together extensively in the run-up to the world cup, and are continuing to do so during the tournament. We have made it clear that the French authorities have our full support in ensuring that spectators are policed firmly and effectively and in taking proceedings against those who are arrested.

Racial Abuse

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proposals the Government have to combat the chanting of racial abuse at sporting events. [46100]

Mr. Michael: Under section 3 of the Football (Offences) Act 1991, it is an offence for two or more people to take part in racist chanting at football matches. In May, the Government accepted a recommendation by the football task force that the 1991 Act should be amended to make racist abuse by individual supporters an offence. The Government will amend the 1991 Act as soon as legislative priorities allow. In the meantime, the Home Office has written to all chief police officers in England and Wales reminding them of existing powers under the Public Order Act 1986.

MINISTER WITHOUT PORTFOLIO

Millennium Experience

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Minister without Portfolio if he will list the committees involved in the millennium experience indicating their membership and the number of meetings each has held in 1998. [44447]

Mr. Mandelson: The New Millennium Experience Company has a board of 10 non-executive directors: Bob Ayling (chairman); Sam Chisholm (deputy chairman); Ian Ash; the hon. Mrs. Sara Morrison; Sir Brian Jenkins; Councillor Len Duvall; David Quarmby; Sir Alan Cockshaw; Michael Grade; Ruth Mackenzie; and three executive directors: Jennie Page, chief executive; Liam Kane, managing director; and Steve Brown, finance and corporate services director. The board meets once every month and has met six times in 1998. In line with normal company practice, the board has established a number of committees, with specific delegated responsibilities, to act on its behalf:

The executive committee (chaired by Sam Chisholm; members are Michael Grade, Jennie Page and, co-opted members, David Chance and Matthew Freud). The terms of reference provide for the chairman to decide the frequency of meetings. The committee has met 13 times in the 1998 calendar year to date.

The audit committee (chaired by Sir Brian Jenkins; members are Ian Ash and Len Duvall). The terms of reference provide for the committee to meet not less than twice each year and otherwise as any member may require. The chief executive, in her role as accounting officer attends the meetings of this committee, as does the finance and corporate services director. The committee has met four times in the 1998 calendar year to date.

The remuneration and recruitment committee (chaired by Bob Ayling; members are Sir Brian Jenkins, the hon. Mrs Sara Morrison and David Quarmby). The terms of reference provide for the committee to meet not less than twice a year and otherwise as often as the members may require. The Committee has met twice in the 1998 calendar year to date.

The health, safety and environment committee (chaired by David Quarmby; members are Sir Alan Cockshaw and the hon. Mrs Sara Morrison). The terms of reference provide for the committee to meet at least four times a year and otherwise as often as any member may require. The committee has met once in the 1998 calendar year to date.

In addition the NMEC has established two advisory groups:

The advisory group on accessibility (chaired by David Phillips—holiday care services; members are Paul Bush—TFA consortium; Stephen Bradshaw—Spinal Injuries Association; Peter Holland—Disability Partnership; Peter Parker—RNIB GDBA; David Bonnett—Access for England; Claire Goodridge—RADAR; Brian McGinnis—MENCAP; Sue Peace—Buro Happold; Andrew Berry—SCOPE; Sara Langton-Lockton—CAE; Carol Thomas—Disability Wales; Robert Pickles—Disability Scotland; Fiona Hill—South East MIND; Andrew Bradock—London Transport; Monica Wilson—Disability Action Northern Ireland; Ken Whittingham—RNID; Wendy Dibdin—Greenwich Association for Disabled People; Orla McCann—Disability Action Northern Ireland; Bob Benson—Disability Scotland). The group held its first meeting in June 1997. During 1998, three meetings have been held to date.

The creative strategic review group—the "litmus group" (chaired by Michael Grade—board member and chairman, First Leisure Corporation plc; members are Ruth Mackenzie—board member and general director, Scottish Opera; Floella Benjamin—Floella Benjamin Productions; Sir Neil Cossons—director, the national museum of science and industry; Mike Davies—Richard Rogers Partnership; Professor Christopher Frayling—rector, Royal College of Art; Simon Jenkins—millennium commissioner and journalist; Michael Jolly, chairman and chief executive, the Tussauds Group and chairman CBI tourism action group; Lord Puttnam—chairman, Enigma productions; Lord Rogers—chairman, Richard Rogers Partnership; John Sorrell—chairman, the Design Council; and Alan Yentob—Director of Television BBC). The group was established in December 1997 and has met eight times in 1998 to date.

The NMEC liaises closely with other groups and committees established by the Department for Culture, Media and Sport, notably the Lambeth group. The company also attends the new millennium experience co-ordinating group set up by the Minister without Portfolio, who is shareholder of the company on behalf of Government, and which is also attended by representatives of the Millennium Commission.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

National Lottery

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what guidance he has issued to the Arts Council on the priority to be accorded to the likely popular appeal of films in determining whether to grant them national lottery funding. [45834]

Mr. Fisher: In accordance with section 26(1) of the National Lottery etc. Act 1993, on 1 June 1998, the Secretary of State issued a direction to the Arts Council of England that, in distributing its share of the net lottery proceeds, it must take account of the needs of projects relating to film and moving image. It is for the Arts Council to draw up the detailed criteria for lottery funding.

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what powers he has to recover national lottery money from film companies when a grant has been obtained on a false prospectus. [45831]

Mr. Fisher: Responsibility for the recovery of lottery moneys obtained by fraud is a matter for the issuing national lottery distributing bodies.

Millennium Commission

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what proportion of Millennium Commission money has been apportioned to Wales. [46289]

Mr. Chris Smith: This is a matter for the Millennium Commission. I shall write to my hon. Friend in my capacity as chairman of the commission and place copies of my reply in the Libraries of the House.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Journalists in Europe Project

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations his Department has made to ensure political impartiality in the Journalists in Europe project concerning European integration; and if he will make a statement. [45273]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The Journalists in Europe organisation runs an annual training programme for young journalists from around the world, focusing on the EU and on political, economic and social developments in Europe. This Department has no role in determining the activities of this organisation and we have made no representations about them.

European Commission of Human Rights

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which cases are currently pending before the European Commission of Human Rights; and if he will make a statement on the nature of each case. [45671]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: As of 15 June 1998, 375 applications against the United Kingdom pending before the European Commission of Human Rights had been registered but not yet put before the Commission, 2 had been adjourned, 26 had been communicated to the United Kingdom Government with no request for observations for the moment, 109 had been communicated to the Government with a request for observations, and 53 applications had been declared admissible and were awaiting examination of the facts and arguments of the parties by the Commission. It would not be practicable for the Government to make a statement in respect of all these cases.

Sierra Leone

Mr. Howard: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he expects to receive Sir Thomas Legg's report. [46028]

Mr. Robin Cook [holding answer 15 June 1998]: Sir T. Legg said that he will complete his investigation and report as soon as possible. He is currently interviewing witnesses and examining evidence.

Mr. Howard: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs at what point in the drafting of United Nations Security Resolution 1132 the unambiguous reference to the arms ban applying to both the Government-in-exile of President Kabbah and their replacement was replaced by more general terminology; which Governments moved the amendment; what was the position of Her Majesty's Government; if the documents relating to such will be made available to Sir Thomas Legg QC; and if he will make a statement. [46277]

Mr. Robin Cook [holding answer 16 June 1998]: At no stage during the drafting of Security Council Resolution 1132 did the draft under consideration in New York refer to the arms ban applying to both the Government in exile of President Kabbah and their replacement. The earliest and all subsequent drafts referred only to a ban on the sale or supply of arms and related material to Sierra Leone. Sir Thomas Legg has access to all documents germane to his investigation, including those relating to the drafting of Security Council Resolution 1132.

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when Baroness Symons was informed by officials of alleged United Nations sanctions breaking by Sandline International. [46021]

Mr. Robin Cook [holding answer 16 June 1998]: I refer to the answer given by my noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Baroness Symons, to a Private Notice Question from Lord Avebury in another place on 15 June 1995, Official Report, House of Lords, column 1287–89.

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish the advice he has received on the legal interpretation of UN Resolution 1132 provided by the United Nation's lawyers. [46062]

Mr. Robin Cook [holding answer 16 June 1998]: Our interpretation of SCR 1132 was set out in my reply to a question from the hon. Member for Reigate (Mr. Blunt) 4 June 1998, Official Report, columns 345–46. The legal advice on which this interpretation is based has been made available to the Select Committee on Foreign Affairs. The Government's interpretation has not been affected by the advice sent to the Chairman of the Sierra Leone Sanctions Committee of the United Nations by the UN's Legal Counsel. Subsequent discussion in the Sanctions Committee revealed that different member states held differing views on the Legal Counsel's advice.

Mochovce Power Plant, Western Slovakia

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he has taken to provide assistance to the management of the Mochovce power plant in Western Slovakia. [45967]

Mr. Doug Henderson [holding answer 15 June 1998]: None.

Intergovernmental Authority on Development

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what proposals there currently are to increase transparency in respect of the IGAD peace talks and subsequent activities. [45964]

Mr. Fatchett: The level of transparency in the Inter Governmental Authority on Development (IGAD) peace talks is determined by the IGAD members themselves. At the conclusion of each round of talks, the Ministerial Subcommittee of IGAD produces a communiqué which describes the ground covered, the agreements reached and the recommendations on how to proceed. We believe this is an adequate arrangement.

EU Youth Forum

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list (a) the organisations belonging to and (b) the events hosted by the European Union Youth Forum funded by the European Communities; and what representations (i) he and (ii) his colleagues, have received from that organisation. [46070]

Mr. Doug Henderson: Questions about the membership and activities of the European Youth Forum should be addressed to that organisation. I received a delegation from the EUF on 14 June to hear a report of a conference they had held on youth unemployment.

Intelligence

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if his oral answer to the right hon. and learned Member for Sleaford and North Hykeham (Mr. Hogg), on intelligence, on 12 May 1998, Official Report, column 159, was based on oral or written briefing that he had received. [46279]

Mr. Robin Cook: I received oral briefing to the effect that no intelligence reports were seen by Ministers that referred to Sandline, or companies associated with Sandline, and to the supply of arms or military equipment.

Export Promotion

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will set in hand an examination of the structure of the Government's arrangements for export promotion. [46963]

Mr. Fatchett: My right hon. Friends the Foreign and Commonwealth Secretary and the President of the Board of Trade, with the approval of my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister, have asked the Secretary to the Cabinet to lead a review with the following terms of reference:

To examine the arrangements for providing official support and promotion for exports (other than defence goods and services) and investment abroad, having regard to the importance of continuing close interaction between business and the DTI on all aspects of business performance, and maintaining the close integration of all aspects of support by diplomatic posts for the full range of British interests overseas, and to make recommendations to the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs and the President of the Board of Trade.

Sir Richard Wilson will be assisted by a panel whose members are:

Sir Ronald Hampel (Chairman, ICI plc)

Mr. David John (Chairman, BOC plc)

Mr. Eric Peacock (Chief Executive, Hertfordshire Business Link)

Mr. Martin Henry (Chairman, Lastolite Ltd.)

Mr. John Shepherd (Deputy Under Secretary of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office)

Mr. Tom Harris (Director-General of Export Promotion, Department of Trade and Industry)

Mr. Harry Bush (Enterprise and Growth Unite, HM Treasury).

Sir Richard expects to report by the autumn.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Ms Yvonne Davies

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when she proposes to answer the letters from the hon. Member for Alyn and Deeside of the 30 September 1997, 20 March 1998 and 24 April 1998 on behalf of Ms Yvonne Davies; and if she will make a statement. [46300]

Mr. Keith Bradley: A reply was sent to my hon. Friend on 17 June.

The delay, which was caused by an administrative error, is regretted.

HEALTH

Drugs Treatment

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will estimate the current average waiting list for NHS drug treatment services. [43849]

Ms Jowell: We currently have no comprehensive systematic national data on waiting lists for drug treatment services. However, early returns from work being carried out on behalf of the Department by the Standing Conference on Drug Abuse suggests that the average waiting time for access to drug services in the statutory and non-statutory sectors is 14 weeks. Returns were received from around half the agencies in England. These agencies were broadly representative of the pattern of services nationally in that they were equally divided between the National Health Service and the voluntary sector and community-based and residential services.

One of the key performance targets in "Tackling Drugs Together to Build a Better Britain", which sets out our 10 year anti-drugs strategy, is to reduce the number of drug misusers being denied immediate access to appropriate treatment. Over the next few months, we will be considering what changes are necessary to meet this key aim and what systems will be required to monitor progress towards the target.

NHS Pension Scheme

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the exclusion of general practitioners' staff who are part of a co-operative from participating in the NHS Pension Scheme. [45755]

Mr. Milburn: The current extension of the National Health Service Pension Scheme, which has recently been agreed with the profession, is intended to include staff employed under a contract of employment by a general practitioner or practitioners. We have no plans to open the NHS Pension Scheme to staff who are not directly employed by GPs, including staff employed by GP co-operatives.

General Practitioners

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients have been de-listed by GPs (a) in the West Midlands Region and (b) nationally in the last three years. [45554]

Mr. Milburn: The latest available information is contained in the "General Medical Practitioners Census Additional Data Collection 1995/1996", copies of which are available in the Library.

Primary Care Groups

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what controls there will be on the relative expenditure on staffing and other budget heads imposed on primary care groups in the new NHS in the next financial year. [45480]

Mr. Milburn: Each Primary Care Group will have available its population's share of the available resources for hospital and community health services, prescribing and general practice infrastructure. Within this single cash limited envelope, the group will have the opportunity to deploy resources and savings to strengthen local services and ensure that patterns of care best reflect their patients' needs.

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what consultations he has had with groups representing GPs in respect of the establishment of primary care groups in the new NHS. [45484]

Mr. Milburn: We have had a number of consultations about Primary Care Groups with groups representing general practitioners, including the General Medical Services Council, the National Association of Fundholding Practices, the Association of Independent Multifunds, the National Association of Commissioning GPs (which has been renamed the National Health Service Alliance), the Royal College of General Practitioners, the National Association of Non-Principals and the National Association of GP Co-operatives.

NHS (Patient Satisfaction)

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to introduce a national framework for measuring patient satisfaction in the NHS. [45448]

Mr. Milburn: As stated in our White Paper "The New NHS", we propose to carry out an annual survey of patient experience of the National Health Service. Work to plan and design the first of these surveys is currently in progress.

Female Consultants

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many consultants currently in post are female; [45803]

(2) how many female consultants are currently in post in (a) pathology, (b) obstetrics, (c) paediatrics and (d) psychiatry. [45805]

Mr. Milburn: The latest information on the numbers of female consultants currently in post in National Health Service hospitals, including numbers by specialty group, can be found in the Department's statistical bulletin: "Hospital, Public Health Medicine and Community Health Service Medical and Dental Staff in England: 1986–1996", copies of which are available in the Library.

Food Poisoning

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the cases of food poisoning caused by the consumption of meat in each of the past 10 years, indicating the number of people who (a) were affected and (b) died in each case. [46124]

Ms Jowell: Information on individual, sporadic cases of food poisoning is not available. The Public Health Laboratory Service's (PHLS) current surveillance system for food poisoning outbreaks was introduced in 1992. Information on the number of outbreaks associated with meat where the suspect vehicle is known is in the table. Also included in the table is information on (a) numbers affected and (b) the number of deaths. The PHLS collects data on outbreaks involving multiple cases and publishes quarterly information in its Communicable Disease Review, copies of which are available in the Library.

General outbreaks of infectious intestinal disease associated with the consumption of poultry or meat and meat products England and Wales 1992–96

Tuberculosis

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 30 March 1998, Official Report, column 434, what steps the Government are taking to combat tuberculosis. [46213]

Ms Jowell: Steps have been taken to strengthen the surveillance, prevention and control of tuberculosis, including drug resistant tuberculosis, within the United Kingdom. The main measures for dealing with tuberculosis include: promptly identifying cases, treating them and examining their contacts; the routine immunisation of children in schools; screening people entering the UK from countries where the incidence is high and arranging Bacille-Calmette-Guerin immunisation or treatment where necessary; immunising the new-born infants and children of immigrants from areas with a high incidence of TB and monitoring the population to keep up to date with trends in incidence. A report was sent to health authorities last year highlighting the importance of monitoring TB and summarising key messages and pointers for practice.

Direct Payments

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 11 June 1998, Official Report, columns 687–88, concerning direct payments, if the Greater London Forum for Elderly People will be consulted. [46309]

Mr. Boateng: A general invitation has been issued to all interested parties to comment on the implementation of the direct payments legislation. Any comments that the Greater London Forum for Elderly People wish to make will be welcomed and considered in the review.

Smoking Trends

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what were the smoking trends for all categories of young people below the age of 30 years in each of the last 15 years for which figures are available. [46483]

Ms Jowell: The information is not available in the form requested. The prevalence of cigarette smoking among adults aged 16–34 and school children aged 11–15, in England, in 1982–1996, is given in the tables.

Health Services (Worcestershire)

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will decide on the plans developed by Worcestershire Health Authority for the restructuring of health services in Worcestershire; and if he will make a statement. [46464]

Mr. Milburn: We are aware of the decision taken by Worcestershire Health Authority, at the meeting which took place on 11 June 1998, to approve its preferred option for service reconfiguration. We are also aware that support for this option has been received from two of the three local community health councils within Worcestershire.

On the basis that the Kidderminster and District Community Health Council has formally objected to the proposals, a submission will be made to Ministers. We will give it careful consideration and make a decision in due course.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Heads of Information

Mr. John M. Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what has been the cost to public funds of compensating those departmental heads of information who have been replaced since 1 May 1997. [46097]

Dr. David Clark: Of the 10 changes at departmental Head of Information level since 1 May, five have been on early retirement terms. In line with the practice of successive Administrations, information on the cost of compensating the five individuals is not provided in order to protect the privacy of the individuals concerned.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Teachers' Pay

Mr. Michael J. Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the school teacher starting salary (mainscale/spinal point O) for each of the years 1979 to 1998, in (a) cash terms and (b) 1998 real values. [45552]

Ms Estelle Morris: The information is as follows:

Physical Education

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what provision his Department currently makes for teacher training in physical education; [46101]

(2) if he will make a statement on the requirements for physical education in teacher training programmes. [46102]

Ms Estelle Morris: In November 1997, the Government gave the Teacher Training Agency a target of 1,450 trainees to be recruited to specialist physical education initial teacher training courses in 1998–99.

The Secretary of State's requirements for courses of initial teacher training set out the standard of knowledge, understanding and skills all trainees must demonstrate in order successfully to complete a course of initial teacher training and be eligible for Qualified Teacher Status. It is for individual providers of initial teacher training to decide how physical education is covered in their courses in order to ensure that these standards are met.

Skills Mismatches

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment he has made of the extent of skills mismatch on a regional basis. [45854]

Dr. Howells: In early Spring this year, each English Region held a Skills Summit specifically to consider regional skills needs. Information from these events has been passed to the national Skills Task Force, whose remit includes consideration of geographical skills needs. Training and Enterprise Councils (TECs) also undertake a periodical survey of local skills needs and a report will be published by the TEC National Council after their Skill Strategy Steering group meeting on 24 June 1998.

Staffordshire TEC

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment he has made of the performance of Staffordshire TEC. [46299]

Dr. Howells: Staffordshire Training and Enterprise Council achieved or surpassed most of the targets contracted in its 1997–98 Business Plan against DfEE/DTI funding lines. Its overall performance was the best in the West Midlands.

Tuition Fees

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how he intends to monitor the effects of the decision not to waive fourth year fees for eligible English and Welsh students at Scottish institutions. [46297]

Dr. Howells: We shall continue, as now, to monitor the number of applicants domiciled in England and Wales who apply for degree courses at Scottish Institutions.

PRIME MINISTER

Sierra Leone

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Prime Minister on what date the Cabinet Secretary was first informed of the planned involvement of UK Government personnel and military assets in support of Sandline International's involvement in restoring the Government of Sierra Leone. [41833]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 14 May 1998]: The Cabinet Secretary first received an indication of the allegations against Sandline on 20 April 1998. It was not until 30 April 1998 that such information was confirmed.

Intelligence Services

Mr. Baker: To ask the Prime Minister if the information available to the Permanent Secretaries' Committee on the Intelligence Services is available in full to the Intelligence and Security Committee. [44413]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 9 June 1998]: The Permanent Secretaries' Committee on the Intelligence Services (PSIS) advises Ministers on the intelligence and security agencies. Advice to Ministers is not disclosed to the Intelligence and Security Committee (ISC) but some of the information available to the PSIS may be made available to the ISC.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Prime Minister if the reports to, and minutes of, meetings of the Ministerial Committee on the Intelligence Services are available in full to the Intelligence and Security Committee. [44414]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 9 June 1998]: The remit of the Ministerial Committee on the Intelligence Services is to keep under review policy on the Security and Intelligence Services. Proceedings of Ministerial Committees are not disclosed to the Intelligence and Security Committee, but much of the information available to the Ministerial Committee may also be made available to the Intelligence and Security Committee.

House of Lords

Mr. Cash: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the proposed reform of the House of Lords; and if he will introduce measures to permit hereditary peers to stand for election to this House. [45619]

The Prime Minister: The Government will publish detailed proposals for fulfilling their Manifesto commitments on reforming the House of Lords in due course.

Lockerbie

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister (1) if he will show the evidence which the Crown Office has in relation to the destruction of Pan Am 103 to a Lord of Appeal in Ordinary for his scrutiny; [46017]

(2) pursuant to his answer of 11 May 1998, Official Report, columns 19–20, if he will re-examine the basis on which on 6 October 1995 the then Lord Advocate wrote to the hon. Member for Linlithgow confirming that proof of the case against two Libyans accused of the destruction of Pan Am 103 does not depend on the evidence of Mr. James T. Thurman. [44909]

The Prime Minister [holding answers 15 and 17 June 1998]: I have nothing to add to the answer which I gave on 19 May 1998, Official Report, column 314.

British Nuclear Fuels

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Prime Minister which representatives from British Nuclear Fuels were invited to participate in the last British trade and co-operation visit to Japan. [45953]

The Prime Minister: There have been a number of trade visits to Japan this year. British Nuclear Fuels did not participate in any of these but they do maintain a permanent representative in Tokyo.

Ambassadors' Telegrams

Mr. Butterfill: To ask the Prime Minister if ambassadors' telegrams to the Foreign Office are routinely copied to No. 10 Downing Street. [45861]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 16 June 1998]: FCO telegrams are distributed internally and to other Government Departments using pre-set distribution lists linked to the subject of the telegram. No. 10 appears on a number of these distribution lists.

Dounreay

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Prime Minister (1) what discussions he had with President Clinton on the transfer of nuclear waste from Georgia to Dounreay; and what data the US Government gave him on this material; [46248]

(2) on what dates negotiations took place with the US Government with regard to the importation of nuclear material from Georgia; on what date it was first discussed that low-grade nuclear material would form part of the consignment; and which UK representatives were involved in these discussions; [46249]

(3) on what date he was notified that 9 kilogrammes of low-grade nuclear waste was included in the consignment of nuclear material brought to Dounreay from Georgia; and what quantity of low-grade nuclear waste was proposed when he agreed to receive the material into the United Kingdom; [46246]

(4) who made the decision to accept the 9 kilogrammes of low-grade nuclear waste from Georgia for reprocessing at Dounreay; when it was made; and which ministers were informed. [46247]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 16 June 1998]: Following their initial approach in July 1997, there were contacts at official level with the US Government on several occasions. The decision to accept the Georgian nuclear material was made in the normal way, in consultation between Cabinet colleagues, at the beginning of February this year, and communicated to the US Government during my visit to the United States a few days later. Policy officials from the DTI and their security advisers took part in a meeting in Washington on 24 February to discuss security and transport issues related to the movement. Technical information relating to the probable nature of the consignment was among the detailed documents received from US officials and subsequently passed on to the technical specialists at Dounreay so that they could make the necessary preparations for receipt and safe-keeping of the Georgian material.

The Government's prime objective was to remove material of proliferation concern from Georgia. Before the Government made the decision to take the material, we were informed of all relevant issues. Low grade nuclear waste did not form part of the consignment, which consisted of irradiated highly enriched uranium. As I told the House on 22 April 1998, Official Report, column 818, in my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Ealing, Acton and Shepherds Bush (Mr. Soley), the intermediate level radioactive waste resulting from reprocessing the irradiated uranium would fill two drums. The exact details of the consignment were a matter for the technical specialists whose job it was to handle the material safely and securely once it arrived in this country.

ASEM

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Prime Minister if he will support the expansion of ASEM to include India and Pakistan; [42358]

The Prime Minister: The United Kingdom has supported the inclusion of India and Pakistan, as well as Australia and New Zealand, since the start of the ASEM process in 1996.

However, it is clear that Asian members of ASEM are not ready to see expansion of membership before ASEM 3 in the year 2000. Any decision to expand membership will require the support of all current members.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Small and Medium Businesses

3. Mr. Llwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement on the range of schemes available to assist in the start-up of small and medium businesses. [45052]

Mrs. Roche: There is a range of support available to assist those wishing to start-up in business. This includes schemes funded through the Single Regeneration Budget Challenge, European Structural Funds and New Deal together with other locally funded initiatives.

The Business Link network, Business Connect in Wales and Scottish Business Shops provide key information, business support and advice through partner organisations such as Local Enterprise Agencies and Training and Enterprise Councils.

26. Mr. Dismore: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement on the support offered by Government to small businesses. [45077]

Mrs. Roche: Small businesses are crucial to a successful enterprise economy and the Government are firmly committed to stimulating and sustaining the competitiveness of the sector.

The key principles underlying the Government's approach include fostering an enterprise culture that rewards innovators and risk takers; providing and maintaining a supportive economic environment; and providing high quality business support for SMEs at all stages of their development.

Industry Productivity

15. Mr. McNulty: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what action her Department is taking to improve productivity in British industry. [45066]

Mrs. Beckett: Improving productivity is at the heart of the Government's drive to improve the competitiveness of UK companies.

While the responsibility for this lies largely with business itself, the Government have a key role to play. It is for this reason that I set up six business-led working parties last year to make recommendations about how Government and business could work together in partnership to promote competitiveness. I am also co-hosting, with my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer, a series of seminars on the UK's productivity gap.

This work will contribute to a White Paper on competitiveness to be published in the Autumn. This White Paper will, for the first time, be written in partnership with the business community.

"Fairness at Work"

16. Mr. Skinner: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many representations she has received on the "Fairness at Work" White Paper; and if she will make a statement. [45067]

Mr. Ian McCartney: When the Government published the White Paper on 21 May, we asked for views on a number of the specific issues which it raised. By 10 June, the Department had received twelve responses. The consultation period lasts until 31 July.

Manufacturing Industry

17. Mr. Robathan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment she has made of the prospects for manufacturing industry. [45068]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: Despite tough competition in domestic and overseas markets, UK manufacturing output is expected to grow both this year and next.

21. Mr. Baldry: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the level of United Kingdom manufacturing exports for (a) the last three-month period for which records are available and (b) the same period in the previous year. [45072]

Mrs. Roche: In the three months to March 1998, United Kingdom exported manufactured goods, worth £32.8 billion, little changed from a year earlier. The volume of manufactured exports, grew by 5 per cent. over the same period.

22. Mrs. Lait: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations she has received on the prospects for manufacturing industry to the year 2000. [45073]

Mrs. Beckett: Every day, I hear success stories about British manufacturing industry. I also hear about its strengths and weaknesses and about the issues which affect its short and long-term prospects. The Government's task is to work in partnership with industry to build on the strengths, address the weaknesses and promote the sustainable healthy businesses on which we depend as a nation for our future prosperity.

Post Office

20. Mr. Leigh: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans she has to increase private sector involvement in the Post Office. [45071]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The review of options for giving the Post Office greater commercial freedom is considering the potential for the involvement of the private sector, for example through increased use of joint ventures. We plan to present our proposals to Parliament in the Autumn.

Framework Research Programme

23. Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement on the EU fifth Framework research programme. [45074]

Mr. Battle: I am pleased to say that we have made very good progress with negotiations on the fifth framework programme (FP5) during the UK Presidency of the European Union.

The Council common position on FP5 was secured at the EU Research Council meeting, which I chaired, on 12 February. The new programme, as agreed in the Council, is well focused on a limited number of user-led objectives of clear European importance and is designed to complement the work undertaken at national level. Potential users of the research will also be given a formal advisory role in the implementation of the programme to define the research they need as the programme progresses. Ministers agreed a budget of 14 billion ecu for FP5 (around £10 billion), which closely reflects the UK priorities and objectives. In addition, the UK Presidency also hosted a Ministerial Colloquium meeting in April to consider how FP5 can be managed and implemented to make the most effective use of these resources. A number of points for action were agreed with the Commission which will make an important contribution to the future effectiveness of the programme.

The Commission have recently proposed texts for the specific programmes of FP5 which set out the detail of the research and technological priorities for the new programme. Three of these specific programmes will be considered by Ministers at the forthcoming Research Council meeting on 22 June, and the remainder in the autumn. Much remains to be done, but I am optimistic that we will be able to bring FP5 in on time at the beginning of 1999.

EH101 Helicopter

24. Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what launch aid her Department has provided for the Westland EH101 helicopter and its powerplant the RTM322. [45075]

Mr. Battle: DTI provided £60 million of launch aid toward the development of the civil variant of EH101 between 1986 and 1994. No launch aid was paid by DTI toward development of the RTM322 engine. Launch aid is a repayable but risk-sharing Government investment in specific projects for the design and development of civil aircraft, helicopters and aeroengines in the UK.

Clothing and Textile Industry

25. Mr. Woolas: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations she has received on the export prospects in the United Kingdom clothing and textile industry. [45076]

Mrs. Roche: DTI ministers and officials have a regular dialogue with representatives of the textiles and clothing industry to discuss export prospects and opportunities for UK manufacturers of textiles, clothing and footwear. This dialogue is conducted through the British Apparel and Textiles Export Advisory Group (BATEAG).

BATEAG is used primarily as a forum for discussing specific export opportunities for the textiles and clothing industry, but it also provides members with the opportunity to discuss the wider economic background to exporting.

Mr. Woolas: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations she has received regarding the value of the pound and its impact on the clothing and textile industry. [44990]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: I have met representatives of the textiles, clothing, and footwear industries over the past six months and have had the opportunity to discuss with them the impact of macro-economic factors upon the industry in the UK. I have discussed these issues recently with the T&GWU at their conference in Skegness, with a range of knitwear manufacturers at a conference in April, and with footwear manufacturers in February.

Mr. Woolas: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what measures she is taking to promote the British clothing and textile industry. [44989]

Mr. Battle: DTI is supporting a range of activities aimed at improving the competitiveness of the UK's textiles and clothing industries. These include projects to help improve marketing skills, develop supply chain partnerships, encourage better links between industry and academia, improve environmental performance, promote the profile of the industry, and assist young fashion designers.

DTI Ministers and officials are also engaged in a dialogue with representatives of the textiles and clothing industries and the trade unions, with a view to establishing a more coherent strategic framework in which these various activities can be placed.

Economic and Monetary Union

27. Mr. McWilliam: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what further progress her Department has made in assisting businesses to prepare for the launch of EMU. [45078]

Mrs. Beckett: The Euro Preparations Unit was set up in the Treasury at the beginning of this year to raise business awareness of this issue and to help firms prepare.

My officials will continue to work closely with the EPU to ensure that the many contacts that my Department has with business are used to support these objectives.

Ice-cream Industry

28. Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations she has received about restrictive practices in the United Kingdom ice-cream industry. [45079]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: Several representations have been received.

My right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade and I are currently considering the Monopolies and Mergers Commission report on the supply of wrapped ice-cream to wholesalers by Birds Eye Wall's Ltd.

EU Structural Funds

30. Mrs. Heal: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement on the European Commission's proposals for the reform of EU structural funds. [45081]

Mrs. Roche: The draft regulations for the Structural and Cohesion funds covering the operation of the Funds from the years 2000 to 2006 were published on 18 March as part of a wider Agenda 2000 package.

It is important that the Structural and Cohesion Funds be reformed to make them more effective and to provide better value for money. The Funds' procedures are in need of substantial simplification and the prospect of enlargement of the EU to include central and Eastern European countries makes this reform vital in any event.

During the long negotiations ahead, we will be striving to achieve three main aims for the UK and its regions—these are fairness, affordability and durability.

Publication of the Regulations marks the start of a long negotiation initially under the UK Presidency and continuing possibly into 1999. The regulations will have to be agreed in the council of Ministers and approved where appropriate by the European Parliament.

Minimum Wage

31. Mr. Hanson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when she expects to announce her response to the Low Pay Commission report on the level of the minimum wage. [45082]

Mr. Ian McCartney: My right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade will be making a statement to the House later this afternoon.

Millennium Compliance

32. Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assistance she is giving to industry to help counteract the year 2000 computer problem; and what role her Department is playing in providing the technicians announced by the Prime Minister. [45083]

Mrs. Roche: I have established Action 2000 to specialise in helping industry to address the year 2000 problem. The Department is also making use of existing delivery mechanisms to ensure that the message gets across. Business Links, the main delivery channel for Government support to the SME sector, are working closely with Action 2000 in developing services to provide information and advice on this issue. In addition, Business Links are working closely with the Training and Enterprise Councils (TECs) to help employers access the Department of Education and Employment (DfEE) funding announced by the Prime Minister to train 20,000 people in IT skills. DTI also contributes to the funding of the IT National Training Organisation (ITNTO) which is directly involved in developing the programme.

34. Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is her current assessment of the state of awareness within the United Kingdom of the need for computer systems to be millennium compliant and of the action that is necessary to be taken in the private sector. [45085]

Mrs. Roche: Recent research by Action 2000 shows that the vast majority of large companies and most small and medium enterprises are aware of the need to ensure that their computer systems can handle Millennium date changes. Large businesses are taking action to avoid disruption to their own systems and increasingly addressing the potential for problems in the supply chains across their sectors.

Many smaller companies have yet to act, and these are the priority target for Action 2000 which has put in place a number of activities to pursue progress with these.

Regional Development Funds

33. Mrs. Ellman: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps she will take to ensure that Merseyside receives a fair allocation of objective 1 funding relative to other European objective 1 areas. [45084]

Mrs. Roche: We are at an early stage in the negotiation on the Commission's proposed reform for the Structural and Cohesion Funds from 2000 to 2006. The Commission have not made any detailed proposals for the financial allocations to individual areas. When they do, the Government will press for the future allocation of the European Structural Funds to be fair and affordable to the UK and its regions.

35. Mr. Andrew George: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment she has made of the requirement to ensure that each United Kingdom bid for EU objective 1 status is from a territory recognised by the United Kingdom as a European region. [45086]

Mrs. Roche: The present criterion for Objective 1 is as follows

"regions at NUTS level 11 whose per capita GDP, on the basis of the figures for the last three years, is less than 75 per cent. of the Community average".

This applies across the European Union.

The Commission produced draft proposals on 18 March for the reform of the Structural and Cohesion Funds. We are at an early stage in the negotiations. I cannot therefore make an assessment of the likely eligibility of any region for Structural Funds.

Steel Industry

Mr. MacShane: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will support measures to ensure fair trade in steel products (a) in Europe and (b) globally. [45069]

Mr. Battle: We support strict controls on subsidies for European Union steel production; action against dumped or subsidised steel where that is clearly consistent with our World Trade Organisation obligations and in the interests of the European Union as a whole including steel users; and action against unjustified restrictions on European Union steel exports.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment she has made of the impact of dumping of steel products by competitors in Europe on the British steel industry; and if she will make a statement. [45070]

Mr. Battle: The European Commission is responsible for any investigations following complaints that products originating outside the EU are being dumped. These investigations include an assessment of the impact of any dumping on the EU industry concerned. A number of steel products are currently under such investigation, or consideration for investigation.

Gas-fired Power Stations

Mr. Peter Atkinson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how long she plans to continue the moratorium on the building of gas-fired power stations. [45080]

Mr. Battle: I propose to continue to defer decisions on consents for power stations until we have the conclusions of the review of energy sources for power generation. The present position is not a moratorium: exceptions are possible, and some have been approved.

Nuclear Material

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will list the countries which have received weapons-usable nuclear material from Dounreay since 1968, indicating (a) the quantity of material, (b) the type of material, (c) the date of the contract, (d) the date the material was shipped to the client country and (e) the proportion of weapons-usable remains and by-products from this material which have been returned to the United Kingdom. [43064]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 21 May 1998]: I have asked the Chairman of the UKAEA for this information and his reply will be placed in the House of Commons Library.

Sellafield

Mr. Alasdair Morgan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what action the Nuclear Industries Directorate has taken to investigate the effects of radiation from liquid discharges into the Irish Sea from the Sellafield plant. [45865]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 17 June 1998]: The Nuclear Industries Directorate of my Department has no role in this matter. Monitoring in the Irish Sea, and elsewhere, and investigations into the effects of discharges is carried out by BNFL, the operators of the Sellafield plant. Independent monitoring and investigations are also carried out by the Environment Agency (who are responsible to DETR) who regulate the level of discharges, and the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food.

Power Generation (South-East England)

Mr. Ottaway: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when she plans to announce the result of Barking Power Station's application of 4 July 1997 to build an emergency black start facility to cover London and the South East. [46456]

Mr. Battle: My right hon. Friend, the President of the Board of Trade, will make her decision on the application as soon as practicable.

Mr. Ottaway: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what advice she has received from the National Grid Company about emergency black start capacity covering London and the South East. [46455]

Mr. Battle: The National Grid Company has written to my right hon. Friend, detailing the benefits of black start capacity in relation to the security of supply for London and the South East.

Legislation

Mr. Prior: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement on the impact on the level of employment of her employment and industrial relations legislation. [45087]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The Government's strategy is to secure high and sustained rates of growth and employment. This requires a flexible labour market based upon the principles of fair treatment and partnership at work.

The Government's proposals in this area create a legislative framework of decent minimum standards. This should encourage people to move into employment, raise employee commitment, reduce turnover, and increase incentives for employers and employees to invest in training. Employment prospects should not be damaged and the net economic effect should be beneficial.

Military Exports

Ann Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement on the countries in conflict for which the United Kingdom has provided ECGD cover for military exports since May 1997. [45050]

Mrs. Roche: I can assure my hon Friend that, when considering the risks associated with the provision of its support, ECGD takes into account all political circumstances of the market into which UK goods are to be exported.

Anglia TV (Shares)

Mr. Miller: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will place in the Library the findings of the previous inquiry into Anglia TV share dealings. [46485]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: Reports of insider dealing inspections are not published. There are strict legal restraints on disclosure of information obtained in such inspections.

Mr. Miller: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will re-open the inquiry into Anglia TV share dealings. [46484]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: Possible insider dealing in Anglia shares in 1994 has already been carefully investigated. The matter would be re-opened only if substantial fresh information became known which it was considered in the public interest should be investigated.

Diesel

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps she is taking to increase the availability in the United Kingdom of low-sulphur diesel. [46575]

Mr. Battle: The major step the Government have taken to increase the availability of ultra-low sulphur diesel has been the change in the relative levels of excise duty between this fuel and conventional diesel, announced in the March Budget. I expect new suppliers of this fuel to enter the UK market as a result.

Key Cutting

Ms Stuart: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans she has to prevent registered keys being cut without proper identification, by limiting the availability of key blanks to authorised key cutters and locksmiths. [46266]

Mr. Michael: I have been asked to reply.

Concern over the ease with which car thieves were able to obtain duplicate keys led to discussion last year between the Home Office Vehicle Crime Prevention Group and the Master Locksmiths Association. The result of negotiations between the various trade associations, the main players in the automotive key cutting industry, the police service and the Home Office resulted in a voluntary Code of Practice being drawn up at the beginning of this year which we launched on 2 March.

All key cutting outlets have been asked to comply with the Code of Practice.

There are no plans at the moment to extend the Code of Practice to cover the supply of keys generally, but we will keep progress in this area under review.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Live Animal Exports

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food in respect of how many of the sheep exported in 1997 for (a) slaughter and (b) further fattening the final destination was stated in the route plan, submitted to the Minister, as (i) Artenay, (ii) Lunery, St. Florent sur Cher, (iii) Baroche, (iv) Zuilichem, (v) Morkhoven, (vi) Elst, (vii) Harmelen, (viii) Pervije and (ix) Loker. [44648]

Mr. Morley: It is not open to me, on grounds of commercial confidentiality, to disclose information about specific businesses which has been given in fulfilment of statutory obligations.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what research his Department has commissioned on the number of animal deaths per year resulting from the live animal export trade. [46026]

Mr. Morley: None. The Ministry's research programme is intended to provide a better understanding of the way animals respond to transport and to determine factors relating to vehicle design, handling and stocking of animals on vehicles and feeding, watering and rest requirements for animals on long journeys.

Egg Producers

Mr. Baldry: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he has made of the cost to United Kingdom egg producers of the European Commission's proposals on new cage sizes. [45467]

Mr. Rooker: As part of our recently completed consultation exercise on these proposals, we invited UK industry organisations to supply information on costs. The outcome of our evaluation of the estimates supplied will be included in the regulatory appraisal which is currently in preparation.

Flood Damage

Mr. Baldry: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to the visit of the Parliamentary Secretary, the hon. Member for Scunthorpe (Mr. Morley), to Banbury to consider flood damage, what estimate he made of the level of compensation payable to (a) Cherwell District Council and (b) local residents as a consequence of the recent flooding. [45827]

Mr. Morley: I have made no such estimates. Local authorities have statutory powers to deal with emergencies and are expected to budget accordingly. They may apply for additional financial assistance where there is a case for doing to under existing rules. Cherwell District Council has indicated its intention to submit such an application in respect of the Easter floods. The Government do not provide compensation direct to individuals.

Grade 1 Land

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he has made of the permanent loss of Grade 1 agricultural land since 1980. [45896]

Mr. Morley: The Department does not hold information about actual agricultural land losses by ALC Grade. The Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions' Land Use Change Statistics give, for England, approximate estimates of the amounts of land changing from agriculture to developed urban uses, but the data do not record ALC Grade.

Rabbits

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the research documents on rabbits published by his Department over the last 20 years. [45835]

Mr. Morley: I have placed in the Library of the House a list of research papers written by researchers undertaking research on rabbits funded by this Department and published in scientific journals.

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what has been his Department's expenditure on research on rabbits for each of the last 10 years. [45836]

Mr. Morley: Details of expenditure covering research on rabbits funded by the Department from 1991–92 to 1998–99 are listed. The figures relate to the whole cost of research projects rather than the proportion directly addressing rabbits. Details covering 19988–89 to 1990–91 could be obtained only at disproportionate cost and so are not listed.

Year	£
1991–92	672,000
1992–93	741,000
1993–94	648,000
1994–95	647,000
1995–96	782,000
1996–97	744,000
1997–98	435,000
1998–99	597,000

Estimate

Meat Labelling

Mr. Luff: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer of 15 June 1998, Official Report, column 28, if he will make it his policy to encourage beef from animals born, raised and slaughtered in the United Kingdom and sold in the United Kingdom to be prominently and clearly labelled as British. [46463]

Mr. Rooker: Yes, but the Government cannot insist that all such beef is so labelled because the EU Scheme is a voluntary one.

EU Wine Subsidies

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action the Government intend to take to contain expenditure on European Union wine subsidies; and if he will make a statement. [46392]

Mr. Rooker: When negotiations commence on the European Commission's awaited new proposal to reform the EC wine regime, we will be seeking fully to expose the budget implications. Our main objective will be to achieve a balanced market using cost-effective, enforceable and transparent mechanisms.

Written Answers to Questions

Friday 19 June 1998

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Turkey

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the discussions held during his recent visit to Turkey. [44520]

Mr. Doug Henderson: During his visit to Ankara on 19 May my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary held discussions on a range of issues with the Turkish President, the Prime Minister and the Foreign Minister. The focus of the discussions was largely on Turkey's relationship with the European Union.

UN Resolutions

Mr. Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many United Nations resolutions the United Kingdom Government have vetoed in the past 12 months; and if he will list them. [45466]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: None.

Peruvian President

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what factors underlay the decision to invite the President of Peru, Alberto Fujimori, as an official guest of the Government; and what human rights issues he will raise during the President's visit. [46532]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The invitation to President Fujimori to visit Britain was originally extended in 1996. The principal objective of this visit is to strengthen our already good relations with a country where we have important and growing commercial interests. We also want to improve co-operation with Peru on areas of importance to UK interests such as drugs, environmental protection and human rights.

The visit provides a good opportunity to discuss the human rights situation in Peru in general and to express support for the Peruvian Government's commitment to improving their performance in this field.

DEFENCE

RAF Northolt

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what contacts, and when, his Department has had with (a) Stagecoach Aviation Ltd and (b) other commercial interests since 2 May 1997 about (i) turning RAF Northolt into a civil airport and (ii) increasing the permitted number of civil aircraft movements or the stipulated operating hours for civil aircraft at RAF Northolt. [45290]

Dr. Reid [holding answer 18 June 1998]: The Ministry of Defence has had no contact with Stagecoach Aviation Ltd. expressing an interest in civil operation at RAF Northolt. However, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence received a letter in February 1998 from Glasgow Prestwick International about combined civil/military use of RAF Northolt. Glasgow Prestwick International has since been bought by Stagecoach.

For other expressions of interest, I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Ealing, North (Mr. Pound) on Thursday 18 June 1998, Official Report, column 264.

Royal Yeomanry and Queen's Own Yeomanry

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent assessment his Department has made of the readiness state and mobilisation arrangements for squadrons of (a) the Royal Yeomanry and (b) the Queen's Own Yeomanry; what trials were involved in such assessments; what visits to the unit were made by ministers or senior officers; and what consultation took place with the unit. [45847]

Dr. Reid [holding answer 18 June 1998]: These units are assessed annually on a number of factors including their manning levels, sustainability and equipment holdings, as well as their collective performance on exercises. The Royal Yeomanry's first assessment, conducted nine months after becoming operational in April 1997, showed the unit as not yet achieving required readiness levels at that time. The Queen's Own Yeomanry's last assessment, during 1997, reported that it was close to or at the required level for all factors against which it was assessed.

The Commander in Chief Headquarters Land Command visited the Royal Yeomanry in November 1997, and the Deputy Commander in Chief Headquarters Land Command visited the Queen's Own Yeomanry in May 1997, during which they discussed a number of issues concerning the units.

PRIME MINISTER

World Citizenship

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Prime Minister what contribution each department currently makes to education in world citizenship. [44577]

The Prime Minister: An Advisory Group on Education for Citizenship and the Teaching of Democracy in Schools has been established by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Employment. It will advise on how schools can develop in their pupils an understanding of democratic institutions and practices at local and national level and an awareness and concern for world affairs and global issues. There are already requirements and opportunities in the National Curriculum for pupils to study global issues, particularly through geography, history and modern foreign languages.

The Government have also established an Advisory Panel on Sustainable Development Education. This will consider education for sustainable development in schools, further and higher education, at work, during recreation and at home; and make practical recommendations for action in England. The Panel reports directly to the Deputy Prime Minister and the Secretary of State for Education and Employment. Panel members are considering the relationship between citizenship education and education for sustainable development.

The Foreign and Commonwealth Office also jointly funds with the Department for International Development (DFID) the Chevening Scholarship programme. This enables some 3,000 overseas students to study in the UK each year. DFID also promotes greater participation of citizens in developing and transitional countries through their support for civil society, democratic reform and human rights—including the strengthening of legal systems.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Child Care

Caroline Flint: To ask the Chairman of the Administration Committee if the Committee has received the results of the child care survey conducted by Research Services Ltd; and if she will make a statement. [47004]

Mrs. Roe: The Administration Committee has now received the results of the childcare survey, which were considered at the Committee's meeting on 16 June. For the benefit of the House, the Committee agreed that it should publish a short information Report, to which the results would be appended. I wish to advise the hon. Lady that the Report, the First Report from the Administration Committee, Session 1997–98, entitled "Childcare Facilities Survey" was published by The Stationery Office at twelve noon today. The Report, HC (1997–98) 825, is available to hon. Members from the Vote Office; in view of her interest in this matter, I have arranged for a copy to be sent to the hon. Lady.

The Committee agreed with the majority of respondents to the survey that the House should continue to provide some assistance with childcare, and hon. Members will wish to note that the Committee agreed also to a Resolution, making several recommendations which it will draw to the attention of the relevant House authorities. The text of the Resolution is available in the Report.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Housing

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the effect on housing provision for low-income single people of the Government's policy to end the predict and provide approach to housing provision. [45959]

Mr. Raynsford: When the new system is in place, we will expect the Regional Planning Conferences (RPCs) to report each year on a number of indicators, which are likely to include local housing needs. We will consult later this year on what the indicators should cover. If the RPC reports were to show serious shortfalls or other impacts, we would expect provision to be increased in the next revision of Regional Planning guidance, although an earlier review of Regional Planning Guidance could be undertaken if that were necessary.

Illegal Travellers

Mr. Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is the current average time taken by local authorities to respond to complaints relating to illegal travellers. [46212]

Mr. Raynsford: My Department does not collect such information centrally.

It is for local authorities to develop their own policies for responding to incidents of unauthorised camping. In doing so, my Department would expect local authorities to take account of existing legislation, current Circular advice from my Department, and prevailing local circumstances.

My Department's proposed good practice on unauthorised camping, to which I referred in my previous reply of 15 June 1998, Official Report, column 36, will also look at such issues, based on research carried out on current practice in local authorities.

Motor Cycles

Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what meetings he has had with representatives of motorcycle users to discuss integrated transport policy. [46201]

Ms Glenda Jackson: On 25 November 1997 my noble Friend the Minister for Roads held a consultative meeting with representatives of motorcycle, environment and safety groups to discuss all aspects of motorcycling within an integrated transport policy.

Local Authority Planning

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list those (a) local authorities, (b) county councils and (c) regional planning conferences which have adjusted their UDP, structure plans and housing estimates as a result of the replacement of Predict and Provide with Plan, Monitor and Manage. [46303]

Mr. Raynsford [holding answer 18 June 1998]: "Planning for the Communities of the Future" (Cmnd 3885) makes clear that the new approach to setting future levels of housing provision outlined in that document will be implemented through new arrangements for the revision and adoption of Regional Planning Guidance. It is for local planning authorities to decide whether they wish to alter or replace their structure plans or UDPs once new Regional Planning Guidance is in place. We are discussing with relevant Regional Planning Conferences ways in which the new approach can be introduced into reviews of RPG that are already underway, some of which will be completed early next year. Until then local authorities are required by statute to have regard, amongst other matters, to the existing regional guidance.

Telecommunication Masts

Mr. Faber: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many telecommunications masts are located within 500 metres of (a) a school and (b) a hospital. [46673]

Mr. Raynsford: This information is not collected centrally.

Mr. Faber: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to introduce planning restrictions prohibiting the siting of telecommunications masts less than 500 metres from (i) schools, (ii) hospitals and (iii) any residence. [46711]

Mr. Raynsford: We have no plans to introduce such restrictions. Local planning authorities already have the opportunity to exercise control over the siting of individual mast developments, whether that be through the consideration of a full planning application or the determination of a "prior approval" application under the Town and Country Planning (General Permitted Development) Order 1995.

Mr. Faber: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what plans he has to update PPG 8 to bring it into line with Article 130r of the Maastricht Treaty; [46655]

(2) what proposals he has to issue regular guidance to local authorities on the planning implications of electromagnetic fields from telecommunications masts. [46657]

Mr. Raynsford: The potential impact on the environment of telecommunications development is a key factor in forming Government policy on telecommunications planning. This is set out in my Department's Planning Policy Guidance note 8, supplemented by Appendix E to Circular 9/95 and by the answer given by my hon. Friend the Minister for the Regions, Regeneration and Planning to my hon. Friend the Member for Hull, West and Hessle (Mr. Johnson) on 4 November 1997, Official Report, column 152. The general policy is to facilitate the growth of such systems while protecting the environment.

We are currently drawing up a joint circular with the Department of Health to address the issue of development in proximity to sources of electromagnetic fields. This includes guidance in respect of telecommunications base stations, and will in that respect be supplementary to PPG8. I anticipate that the proposed joint circular will be issued in draft form for public consultation later this year.

Mr. Faber: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what discussions his Department has had with the relevant authorities in (i) Australia, (ii) New Zealand, (iii) Denmark and (iv) Sweden concerning the siting of telecommunications masts. [46656]

Mr. Raynsford: This Department has not engaged in any direct discussions with the relevant authorities in (i) Australia (ii) New Zealand (iii) Denmark and (iv) Sweden about the siting of telecommunications masts. My officials continue to liaise with other Government Departments in monitoring practice internationally in order to assist the development of policy in this country.

WALES

Beef Exports

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the prospects for exporting beef produced in Wales. [45884]

Mr. Win Griffiths: The European Commission has issued a proposal for a UK Date Based Export Scheme for the export of meat from animals born after 1 August 1996. The proposal will now be considered by the Standing Veterinary Committee.

This is a key step towards lifting the export ban throughout the UK. But there are tough negotiations to come. The Government are working hard for a scheme which fits the scientific advice and permits real trade to resume as rapidly as possible.

Beaches

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what initiative he has taken to ensure cleaner beaches in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [45882]

Mr. Win Griffiths: The Government are committed to complying with the EC Bathing Water Directive (76/160/EEC). Last year 60 of the 64 EC identified bathing waters on the Welsh coastline met the mandatory bacteriological standards set in the Directive. This compliance rate of 94 per cent. was the highest ever achieved in Wales.

Earlier this month 13 Welsh beaches were awarded Blue Flags. This is also the highest level ever achieved in Wales. To be eligible for Blue Flag status, water quality must attain the even more stringent guideline standards set in the EC Directive, as well as meeting various land based criteria. 31 of the 64 EC identified bathing waters monitored in Wales in 1997 met the guideline standards. The Welsh Office fully supports the aim of the Green Sea Initiative to achieve 50 Blue Flags in Wales.

Diesel Emissions

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what research his Department has evaluated into the link between diesel engine emissions and lung disease in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [45875]

Mr. Win Griffiths: The Welsh Office has not evaluated any research specifically into links between diesel engines and lung disease in Wales.

A Government research initiative into air pollution and respiratory disease was launched in 1995. Research into lung function and diesel emissions is included amongst the projects chosen to receive funding. It is hoped that when this programme is completed towards the end of next year, we may have a better understanding of some of the mechanisms that may be at work concerning air pollution and lung disease.

Dobshill and Meadowsleigh Hospitals

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will make a statement on the future of Dobshill Hospital, Flintshire; [45879]

(2) if he will make a statement on the future of Meadowsleigh Hospital, Flintshire. [45878]

Mr. Win Griffiths: The future of these hospitals is a matter for the North Wales Health Authority. I am advised by the authority that no proposals have been made to change their function.

Environmental Health Officers

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many environmental health officers were in post in Wales in (a) 1990 and (b) 1997; and if he will make a statement. [45886]

Mr. Win Griffiths: The information requested is not held centrally.

Waiting Lists

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how he proposes to reduce waiting lists in North East Wales. [45877]

Mr. Win Griffiths: An additional £20 million will be spent in 1998–99 on reducing inpatient and daycase waiting lists to below the level which the Government inherited. £4.124 million of this is available to North Wales Health Authority to reduce waiting lists in its area.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what new financial resources have been devoted to tackling waiting lists in the district hospital trusts at Wrexham and Bodelwyddan. [45876]

Mr. Win Griffiths: An additional £20 million will be spent in 1998–99 on reducing inpatient and daycase waiting lists to below the level which the Government inherited. £4.124 million of this is available to North Wales Health Authority to reduce waiting lists in its area. It will be for the Health Authority to consider how to allocate the additional funding to individual programmes.

Ambulance Service

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many calls there have been to the Welsh Ambulance Service NHS Trust since 1 April 1998 during standby time after midnight; and how many of these calls have resulted in an ambulance arriving at the scene of the emergency within performance standards. [46114]

Mr. Win Griffiths: The Department monitors the total number of emergency and other calls received by the ambulance service on a quarterly basis to ensure compliance with agreed performance standards. An hourly breakdown of all call responses may be obtained from the Welsh Ambulance Services NHS Trust.

SCOTLAND

Scottish Parliament

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland which members of the Scottish Parliament would be Crown servants for the purposes of the Official Secrets Act 1989. [34584]

Mr. McLeish [holding answer 16 March 1998]: The Government intend that Members of the Scottish Executive and junior Scottish Ministers will be Crown servants for the purposes of the Official Secrets Act 1989.

Fisheries

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland on what dates Spanish Fishery Officers have been on board Scottish Fisheries Protection vessels; for what duration; and if he will list the vessels. [46037]

Mr. Macdonald: No Spanish fishery officers have been on board Scottish Fishery Protection Vessels. The Agency does not hold records which would show the nationality of EU fisheries inspectors who have embarked on Agency vessels.

Scottish Court Service

Mr. Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what targets have been set for the performance of the Scottish Court Service in the Supreme and Sheriff courts for 1998–99. [47190]

Mr. Dewar: The targets I have set for the performance of the Scottish Court Service in the Supreme and Sheriff Courts for 1998–99 are set out.

Performance against these targets will be published in the Annual Report of the Scottish Court Service.

Performance of the Scottish Court Service in the Supreme and Sheriff Courts

Targets—1998–99
Number of time-limited cases falling as a result of SCS action/inaction	0
Percentage of Court of Session diets allocated within waiting periods set by the Lord President	92
Percentage of solemn and summary appeals allocated to rolls within waiting periods set by the Lord Justice-General	70
Percentage of Sheriff Courts meeting summary criminal waiting periods agreed with Sheriffs Principal	85
Percentage of Sheriff courts meeting ordinary civil waiting periods agreed with Sheriffs Principal	95
Percentage of Sheriff Courts with 5 per cent. or less lack of time adjournments	80
Percentage achievement of administrative standards set by the Lord President/Lord Justice-General	95
Percentage of Sheriff Courts achieving administrative standards agreed with Sheriffs Principal	95
Percentage of Court Houses meeting "Coming to Court" standards	85
Staff, accommodation and administrative costs per court sitting day	£1,000

Voting Systems

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what educational publicity campaign he plans at what estimated cost to inform electors of the proportional voting system to be used to elect UK members of the European Parliament. [46559]

Mr. McLeish: I refer to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Home Department to my hon. Friend the Member for Birmingham, Erdington (Mr. Corbett) today, Official Report, column 340.

National Lottery

Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what sums have been distributed by each of the five National Lottery distributors in Scotland in each year since the commencement of the National Lottery. [46531]

Mr. Galbraith: Information on Lottery grants made is given in the table.

HEALTH

Smoking

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will estimate the (a) total number and (b) percentage of the population aged (i) under 15 years, (ii) under 20 years and (iii) under 25 years who are likely to become tobacco smokers in the next five years as a result of (1) peer pressure, (2) advertising and (3) other reasons. [29129]

Ms Jowell [holding answer 12 February 1998]: No such estimates have been made, as no data are currently collected centrally on when, at what age and for what reason individuals start smoking.

Available data on smoking behaviour in recent years are, however, provided in the tables.

Hospital Staff (Cumbria)

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) nurses and (b) doctors were employed in hospitals in Cumbria in each year since 1979. [44842]

Mr. Milburn: Information from 1982 (the earliest year for which information is available) is shown in the table.

"Cumbria" has been defined as hospital and community health service units within the following health authority areas:

1982 to 1993: East, South and West Cumbria District Health Authorities

1994 to 1997: North Cumbria Health Authority and Morecambe Bay Health Authority (excluding Lancaster Acute Hospitals NHS Trust and Lancaster Priority Services NHS Trust)

[3]It is not possible to identify all staff employed in specific health authority areas in 1993 as some staff were returned centrally by the regional health authority

[4]Figures from 1995 are not directly comparable with those for earlier years because new occupation codes were used to classify staff from 1995, replacing the old payscale based system

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many PFI projects his Department has entered into in the last year; and what is their combined value. [45468]

Mr. Milburn: Five major Private Finance Initiative (PFI) schemes with a combined capital value of over £400 million have reached financial close since 1 May 1997. These form part of the biggest new hospital building programme the National Health Service has ever seen, with a total of 30 major hospital developments given the go ahead. Twenty five of these, worth almost £2.2 billion, will be delivered through the PFI scheme and are expected to reach financial close by the end of 2000–2001.

Details of individual schemes with a capital cost of less than £10 million are not held centrally.

Chronic Fatigue Syndrome

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action his Department has taken subsequent to the publication in October 1996 of the report on Chronic Fatigue Syndrome by a joint working group of the Royal Colleges of Physicians, Psychiatrists and General Practitioners; and if he will make a statement. [45472]

Ms Jowell: The Chief Medical Officer of the Department of Health wrote to all general practitioners in his quarterly newsletter in February of last year drawing their attention to chronic fatigue syndrome (CFS)/myalgic encephalomyelitis (ME), and specifically referring to the report published by the Medical Royal Colleges in 1996 and the report from the national task force on CFS, Post Viral Fatigue Syndrome and ME which was produced in 1994. It was intended that drawing attention to both reports in this way would provide a broad base of information to which GPs could refer for help in regard to the treatment and care of people who suffer from CFS/ME.

Free Sight Tests

Ms Perham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will estimate the cost of providing free sight tests to men over 65 and women over 60. [46058]

Mr. Milburn: The cost of providing such tests is estimated to be between £25 million and £30 million per annum.

Warminster Hospital

Mr. Faber: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many letters he has received since 1 May from members of the public concerning the proposed closure of Ward 2 at Warminster Hospital; and how many are awaiting reply; [46653]

(2) what discussions he has had with the Wiltshire Health Authority concerning the provision of beds for the elderly mentally ill in West Wiltshire; [46671]

(3) when he intends to reply to the letter to him of 22 May from the hon. Member for Westbury concerning Warminster Hospital and beds for the elderly mentally ill in West Wiltshire; [46672]

(4) for what reasons he has declined to meet a delegation from Warminster Town Council, led by the hon. Member for Westbury, to discuss the proposed closure of Ward 2 at Warminster Hospital; [46670]

(5) what representations he has received from (i) general practitioners and (ii) representatives of health workers concerning the proposed closure of Ward 2 at Warminster Hospital and the provision of beds for the elderly mentally ill in West Wiltshire. [46654]

Mr. Milburn: We have received eight letters from members of the public concerning the proposed closure of ward 2 at Warminster Hospital. Officials in the South and West Regional Office of the National Health Service Executive have responded to them all.

No letters have been received from general practitioners. We have received one letter from a representative of health workers.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State will be replying to the hon. Member's letter of 22 May 1998 shortly and is giving consideration to the hon. Member's request for a meeting. He has had no discussions with Wiltshire Health Authority concerning the provision of beds for the elderly mentally ill.

Electromagnetic Fields

Mr. Faber: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what evidence his Department has submitted to the five year study currently being undertaken by the World Health Organisation into the possible adverse health effects of electromagnetic fields; and if he will publish it. [46661]

Ms Jowell: The Department has submitted to the World Health Organisation a brief description of several ongoing projects on possible health effects of electromagnetic fields (EMF), which the Department is funding under its radiation protection research programme. Although none of these EMF projects has yet reached publication stage, the individual research institutes are encouraged to publish their results in the open literature.

Mr. Faber: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he last obtained advice from (a) the National Radiological Protection Board and (b) the Committee on Medical Aspects of Radiation in the Environment concerning public health effects of electromagnetic fields from telecommunications masts. [46662]

Ms Jowell: The National Radiological Protection Board (NRPB) published advice on electromagnetic fields (EMFs) and cancer in 1992 and in a supplementary report in 1994. The NRPB's advisory group on non-ionising radiation is currently reviewing recent scientific literature and is expected to publish its findings shortly. Guidance on exposure to electromagnetic fields, including the low power microwave signals emitted by mobile telephones and base station antennae, was published in 1993. Further information on EMFs from telecommunications masts has been published in the form of leaflets and web site information. The last advice from the Committee on Medical Aspects of Radiation in the Environment on EMFs was on 2 August 1996 concerning the results of an epidemiological study about high powered transmitter masts in the United Kingdom. Copies of all literature mentioned are available in the Library.

Mr. Faber: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions he has had with the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions concerning proposals to limit the siting of telecommunications masts to a distance greater than 500 metres from hospitals and nursing homes. [46659]

Ms Jowell: Decisions about siting telecommunications masts are the responsibility of local authorities. There are no proposals to limit the siting of masts to a distance of greater than 500 metres from hospitals and nursing homes. The Department has not discussed this issue with the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions.

Mr. Faber: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what contribution his Department has made to the work of the European Commission Expert Group on mobile telephony and human health. [46658]

Ms Jowell: The Department has made no direct contribution to the European Commission Expert Group. The group consisted of internationally renowned European scientists. The chairman is, however, the head of the non-ionising radiation department at the National Radiological Protection Board which is funded by the Department. One other member is also from the United Kingdom. The recommendations of the group have yet to be formally advanced by the Commission.

Labour Briefing Document

Mr. Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health where, and by whom, in his Department the document entitled, Briefing for Labour Members, circulated prior to the debate on NHS waiting lists on 16 June to Labour hon. Members was (a) written and (b) photocopied; and what estimate he has made of the cost to his Department's budget. [46669]

Mr. Dobson: The document was written, produced, photocopied and distributed by one of the Department's special advisers. Every aspect of this activity is entirely consistent with the long-established role of special advisers as set out in the Ministerial Code and the model contract of employment for special advisers. It is not possible to identify the total costs to the Department of this individual piece of work.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Arrested British Citizens (France)

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many of those British citizens arrested in France in the past month have previously been convicted (a) of a football-related offence and (b) of any criminal offence. [46450]

Mr. Michael [holding answer 18 June 1998]: The information is not available in precisely the form requested. Information from the National Criminal Intelligence Service is that, by 17 June, 32 of those people from England and Wales arrested in connection with incidents associated with the World Cup have a criminal record of some kind in Great Britain. Twenty of them have previous convictions for offences of violence or disorder.

Voting Systems

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what educational publicity campaign he plans, at what estimated cost, to inform electors of the proportional voting system to be used to elect United Kingdom members of the European Parliament. [46558]

Mr. George Howarth: The European Parliamentary Elections Bill has not yet completed its passage through Parliament and no public money has been spent on publicising the electoral system which it will introduce.

Decisions on future publicity have not yet been taken. But a number of outside organisations will be running campaigns and my right hon. Friend will next week help to launch "Get the Vote out! Europe 1999", organised by the Institute for Citizenship.

Drug Dealers

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) men and (b) women have been convicted of drug dealing in England and Wales in the last 12 months. [46974]

Mr. George Howarth: 1996 is the latest year for which figures are available. During that year, 5,769 men in England and Wales were found guilty of possession with intent to supply drugs unlawfully, and a further 3,668 of the unlawful supply of drugs (these two offences are normally taken to equate to drug 'dealing'). The relevant numbers of women convicted were 807 and 532 respectively.

Police Service

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the adequacy of the arrangements for the management of career breaks across the police service; and what representations he has received on this subject. [46674]

Mr. Michael: The management of career break schemes is a matter for individual police forces. However, I have recently become aware that, in the absence of a standard scheme in the Police Regulations 1995, there is inconsistency between forces in the terms and conditions under which applications for career breaks are considered and granted. Accordingly, I have requested the official side of the Police Negotiating Board to enter into discussions with the staff side with a view to recommending a satisfactory standard scheme which we would propose to incorporate as an amendment to the Police Regulations 1995.

Cannabis

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects cannabis grown for therapeutic purposes to be available for large-scale clinical trials. [46574]

Mr. George Howarth: I am aware of one holder of a Home Office licence to grow cannabis who intends to carry out large scale clinical trials. Although the timing of those trials is a matter for the licensee, I understand that the cannabis is currently expected to be available to them in about 18 months.

Drivers (Sentences)

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many persons are currently serving a term of imprisonment for (a) driving with excess alcohol and (b) driving whilst disqualified. [46235]

Ms Quin: The available information is for 30 April and is given in the table. Persons under sentence for driving whilst disqualified are not identifiable as this offence is not a separately coded item on the prisons central computer.

Population under sentence in prisons in England and Wales for driving under the influence on 30 April 1998[1]

Offence	Number

Electronic Monitoring

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the cost to his Department in the last year for which figures are available of the provision of electronic monitoring services; and if he will list the expiry date of each existing contract. [46240]

Ms Quin: Because of considerations of commercial confidentiality, it would not be appropriate to publish details of the payments made to contractors which are the major part of the cost of curfew orders enforced by electronic monitoring.

Research into the trials has estimated that the average cost of a curfew order enforced by electronic monitoring would be around £1,900, if the scheme were available throughout England and Wales. However, this does not take account of the effect of providing electronic monitoring for curfew orders simultaneously with the proposed Home Detention Curfew scheme.

Both of the current contracts have been extended until 28 February 1999.

Prisoners (Sex Offenders Treatment Programme)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prison inmates in England and Wales convicted of sex offences took part in a sex offenders treatment programme course during 1997. [46006]

Ms Quin: During the financial year 1997–98, 671 convicted sex offenders completed accredited sex offender treatment programmes in prison.

Citizenship

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to amend the British Nationality Act 1981 as it affects children born to British citizen contract supplemented officers, with particular reference to those recruited by (a) the Overseas Development Administration and (b) quangos. [46046]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: We have no plans to change the current arrangements.

Immigration

Mr. Stinchcombe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 1 June 1998, Official Report, column 55, on immigration, if the criteria applied by his Department would accept a level of earned income which would be eligible for income support in a case where there is no intention to claim any form of state assistance. [46010]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Each case is considered on its own facts. In some cases it may be possible, in others it may not. A sponsor in the United Kingdom may continue to receive any public funds to which he is entitled in his own right. Whether a sponsor will be judged to have sufficient resources will turn on whether the sponsor is able to support and accommodate the applicant and any dependents without additional recourse to public funds, not on whether there is an intention to claim additional public funds.

TREASURY

Monetary Policy Committee

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will require each future appointee to the Monetary Policy Committee to have had experience in running a business. [46364]

Mrs. Liddell: Appointments to the Monetary Policy Committee will continue to be made on the basis of people who have the relevant expertise.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will require each member of the Monetary Policy Committee to give a reasoned explanation for their views on any interest rate changes proposed by the Committee. [46366]

Mrs. Liddell: The reasons underlying interest rate decisions are given in detail in the minutes of the monthly Monetary Policy Committee meetings. They are also covered in the press notices following any change in interest rates and in the Bank of England's "Inflation Report".

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will require a published statement from each member of the Bank of England's Monetary Policy Committee of their loans, mortgages, overdrafts and interest bearing accounts; [46367]

(2) if he will require each member of the Monetary Policy Committee to publish after each interest rate change a statement of its effects on their personal finances. [46365]

Mrs. Liddell: No.

Royal Mint

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, (1) pursuant to his answer of 10 June 1998, Official Report, column 585, what profit the Royal Mint has derived from seigniorage on coins issued in each of the last 10 years; [46263]

(2) pursuant to his answer of 10 June 1998, Official Report, column 585, on seigniorage what profit the Royal Mint has derived from seigniorage on coins issued in each of the last 10 years; and if this profit is retained by the Royal Mint. [46966]

Mrs. Liddell: Any profit "derived" from seigniorage on UK standard coins is not retained by the Royal Mint but instead paid to the Treasury. The figures for each of the last ten years are:

Year	£000
1988–89	51,129
1989–90	107,985
1990–91	69,410
1991–92	98,598
1992–93	−18,844
1993–94	47,769
1994–95	93,777
1995–96	88,859
1996–97	214,408
1997–98	86,691

These figures represent the difference between (i) the face value of issued coins and (ii) production costs and reimbursements for redeemed coins less the value of reclaimed metal from redeemed coins.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Arms Exhibitions

Ann Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will list those officials from her Department who attended the Berlin Air Show from 18 to 24 May, indicating the costs of their attendance and the total amount of public funds extended by her Department to defence companies attending this event. [44510]

Mr. Battle: I attended an Airbus Intergovernmental meeting of Ministers to discuss Airbus civil programmes in Berlin on 19 May, and afterwards visited the Berlin Airshow on the morning of 20 May. I was accompanied by a Private Secretary and three officials from the Department's Engineering Industries Directorate. Two officials from the Department's Export Control organisation attended a meeting held in Berlin between 19 and 21 May, and went to the Airshow on the afternoon of 20 May as part of a group visit, at no cost to public funds.

The total cost of attendance of the officials who accompanied me to Berlin was approximately £1,800.

Dounreay

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessments by external bodies of the reprocessing of (a) existing spent fuel and (b) unirradiated fast reactor fuel at Dounreay have been (i) commissioned and (ii) evaluated by her Department. [45452]

Mr. Battle: Dounreay is a licensed nuclear site. All processes are thoroughly evaluated by the independent regulators, the Health and Safety Executive, to ensure compliance with safety standards, and the Scottish Environment Protection Agency to comply with discharge authorisations, and they report to the Scottish Office. My Department has not commissioned additional assessments by external bodies.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

EU Mobile Information Centre

Mr. Flight: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the (a) primary and (b) secondary schools visited by the European Union Mobile Information Centre in 1997. [45293]

Dr. Howells: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State plays no part in the activities of the mobile information centre. These are matters for the European Commission.

Nunthorpe Comprehensive School

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what representation she has received from Nunthorpe Secondary Comprehensive School on provision for 11 to 18 year old pupils. [45164]

Mr. Byers: Letters from 34 parents of children attending Nunthorpe Comprehensive School were received in the Department between October and November 1997 and 2 further letters have been received this month. The Headteacher of the school also wrote to me in October 1997.

Comprehensive School Education

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the financial implications of extending secondary comprehensive school education to 16 to 18 year olds. [45165]

Mr. Byers: Extending secondary comprehensive school education to 16 to 18-year-olds may have capital as well as recurrent costs implications for schools, and may have an impact on other post-16 provision in the area.

Further Education Statistics

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list by socio-economic group (a) the numbers and (b) the percentages of (i) 16–17 year olds, (ii) 18–21 year olds and (iii) over 21 year olds in (1) full-time and (2) part-time further education for each of the last three years for which figures are available. [45750]

Dr. Howells: This information is not held by the Department or the Further Education Funding Council.

Science Teachers

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to increase the number of graduates going into science teaching in school. [46060]

Ms Estelle Morris: The recruitment of an adequate number of well-trained teachers is central to achieving our plans to raise standards in schools. Maintaining teacher supply is one of the key challenges facing this Government and the education system. We are working with our partners—the Teacher Training Authority, Higher Education Institutions, schools and others—to meet that challenge. Our response of 29 January to the Education and Employment Committee set out the measures we have taken to date.

We have already announced that all trainees studying to achieve a Post Graduate Certificate of Education (PGCE) will not have to make a means-tested contribution to tuition fees. In addition, the Teacher Training Agency will make some £10 million available in the coming year through the Secondary Shortage Subject Scheme further to support those in need who wish to train to teach in such subjects, including science.

Tuition Fees

Mr. Öpik: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to allow endowment mortgages to be counted against income in the calculation of tuition fees payable at university; and if he will make a statement. [45786]

Dr. Howells: Under the Mandatory Awards Regulations, in assessing the income of a student who is independent of their parents, a local education authority has discretion to take account of payments made in pursuance of any obligation, such as a mortgage, incurred before the start of their course. Where a student's parents or spouse is expected to contribute towards the support of the student, the gross amounts of any interest paid on loans, including mortgages, which attract tax relief are deducted from their income in assessing the size of their contribution.

For new students in 1998–99, the contribution to the student's support from their own income or that of their parents or spouse is first set against their £1,000 contribution to their tuition fees and any remaining amount goes towards the student's maintenance support.

We are examining the case for reviewing certain aspects of the assessment of contributions by students, their parents and their spouses towards the student's maintenance support.

Female Medical Professors

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many professors in medical schools are female. [45804]

Dr. Howells: In the 1996–97 academic year, the latest year for which figures are available, there were 44 professors of medicine who were female, in higher education establishments in the UK. This represents 6 per cent. of all professors in medicine.

This figure covers those employed within the professor grade in institutions. There may be others who carry the title of professor but are employed in other grade structures and so are not included in this figure.

Further Education

Mr. Fitzpatrick: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to implement the recommendations contained in the report from Helen Kennedy QC relating to further education; according to what timescale; and if he will make a statement. [46191]

Dr. Howells: We published "Further Education for the New Millennium" on 25 February 1998. This sets out our detailed response to those recommendations in Baroness Kennedy's report which were addressed to the Government.

Sex and Race Equality

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what (a) resources and (b) programme money was provided for the Sex and Race Equality Division in (i) 1996–97, (ii) 1997–98 and (iii) 1998–99. [45797]

Mr. Alan Howarth: The information requested is shown in the following table. It reflects two significant changes in responsibilities during the period: establishment of a separate Childcare Unit in the Department for Education and Employment; and transfer of staff working on some general women's issues to the Department of Social Security following establishment of the Women's Unit.

City Technology Colleges

Mr. McWilliam: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list (a) the unit cost per pupil from public funds in the last financial year for each city technology college, (b) the projected unit cost per pupil from public funds in the current financial year, (c) the combined public and private sector unit cost per pupil projected for the current financial year for each city technology college and (d) the average unit cost per pupil in secondary schools for each local authority which has a city technology college within its area; and if he will make a statement on the numbers of Ofsted inspections of city technology colleges relative to LEA schools in areas where there are CTCs. [45894]

Ms Estelle Morris: The unit of funding for all CTCs is calculated on an academic year basis. It is based on a direct comparison with budgeted spending for secondary schools in the LEAs from which the CTCs collectively take their pupils. For the 1996–97 academic year this figure was £2,546 and for 1997–98 it was £2,590. In addition CTCs currently receive an extra £165 per pupil. This will reduce to £120 in 1998–99 and is designed to mirror the top-up grant for specialist schools plus a small amount to cover insurance costs. CTCs also, to varying degrees, receive funding for school meals costs and London weighting. There is no requirement for private sector contributions towards the unit of funding.

Unit costs of secondary pupils in areas used for CTC funding in financial years 1996–97 and 1997–98 are given in the following table.

CTCs are subject to exactly the same inspection requirements as maintained schools.

Unit costs of secondary pupils in areas used for CTC funding in financial years 1996–97 and 1997–98

[1] The Unit Costs have been calculated using LEA Section 122 Part 1 Budget Statements and GM school equivalent data. However, certain expenditure lines have been disregarded as not relevant to the CTC unit of funding—the main ones being school meals and capital costs. The figures are therefore not the full average unit cost amounts expended on secondary education in these LEAs. The Unit Costs shown here are deflated, i.e. reduced to exclude London weighting factors. This is as they are used in calculating the "national" CTC unit of funding.
[2] The LEA areas used for CTC funding are those in which CTCs are located plus those from which CTCs draw a significant number of pupils.
[3] Derbyshire was subject to 1997 Local Government re-organisation, thus Derbyshire is included in the 1996–97 figures, but Derby City only in the 1997–98 figures.

Female Medical Students

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many current medical students in the United Kingdom are female. [45802]

Dr. Howells: In the 1997–98 academic year, the latest year for which figures are available, there were 18,474 medical students who were female in higher education establishments in the UK. This represents 51 per cent. of all medical students.

Telecommunications Masts

Mr. Faber: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what discussions he has had with the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions concerning proposals to limit the siting of telecommunications masts to a distance greater than 500m from schools. [46660]

Mr. Byers: Decisions about siting telecommunications masts are the responsibility of local authorities.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Community Legal Services

Mr. Stinchcombe: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department when he plans to publish details of the proposed expansion of community legal services. [45973]

Mr. Hoon: The Lord Chancellor has announced that proposals for a Community Legal Service will be finalised by the beginning of next year, when a consultation paper will be issued.

Correspondence

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department when he expects to reply to the letter from the hon. Member for Walsall, North of 11 May regarding evidence from professional witnesses in housing eviction cases; and for what reason no acknowledgment was sent at the time. [46090]

Mr. Hoon: My hon. Friend's letter was received by the Lord Chancellor's Department on 12 May and he should now be in receipt of my reply of 9 June. The Department's published target is to respond to all letters from hon. Members within 20 working days of receipt. The reply in this instance was provided within this target.

Fast-track Cases

Mr. Bruce George: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department when he will publish his consultation paper on a costs regime for fast-track cases. [47315]

Mr. Hoon: The Lord Chancellor has today published a consultation paper on a cost regime for the fast track entitled "Justice at the Right Price" and copies have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

PRIME MINISTER

Japanese Prisoners of War

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement on his meeting with Japanese prisoners of war on 10 June. [45812]

The Prime Minister: On 10 June I met the Chairman of the Japanese Labour Camps Survivors Association and the Chairman of the Association of British Civilian Internees Far East Region.

I explained the efforts that the Government have made on behalf of the former prisoners. In response to our representations, the Japanese Prime Minister had made an official apology on behalf of his Government and announced a new package of measures to promote reconciliation.

I also agreed to consider a legal opinion the former prisoners had received on whether it is possible to re-open the 1951 Peace Treaty. I explained that I did not want to raise false hopes about this as the Government had already received legal advice in the opposite sense.

Interception of Communications

Mr. Baker: To ask the Prime Minister when he expects to publish the 1997 report of the Commissioner into the operation of the Interception of Communications Act 1985. [46255]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 16 June 1998]: Shortly.

Election Pledges

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Prime Minister on what date he plans to publish the Government's report on progress on election pledges and other matters; and if he will make a statement. [46385]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 18 June 1998]: The Annual Report will be published shortly.

European Social Fund (Wales)

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Prime Minister if he will ensure that the powers of the Secretary of State for Wales in respect of the administration of the European Social Fund are comparable to, or greater than, those of the heads of Government regional offices in England; and if he will make a statement. [46703]

The Prime Minister: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales already has responsibility for training policy in Wales, including the management of the European Social Fund.

Intelligence and Security Committee

Mr. Baker: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make it his policy that there be an annual debate on the annual report presented to him by the Intelligence and Security Committee. [46712]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 19 June 1998]: As my right hon. Friend the Leader of the House made clear on 4 June 1998, Official Report, column 507, in her reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Sunderland, South (Mr. Mullin) the Government intend to hold a regular debate on the intelligence and security services. The arrangements for any debate will be a matter for discussion and agreement through the usual channels and with the Intelligence and Security Committee.

Social Exclusion Unit

Ms Perham: To ask the Prime Minister what plans he has to include disability within the future work programme of the Social Exclusion Unit. [46812]

The Prime Minister: Decisions on the future work programme of the Social Exclusion Unit will be announced in due course.

Honours System

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Prime Minister if he will ensure that no recommendation for an honour is made for anyone who minimises their tax liability by forming a company only for this purpose; and if he will make a statement. [46665]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 19 June 1998]: I recommend people for honours on the basis of their achievement and service to others, in changing things and making a difference. Each case is considered on its merits, and all circumstances are taken into account. No recommendation would proceed if it brought the honours system into disrepute.

Animal Welfare

Mr. Baker: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 2 February 1998, Official Report, column 476, when he expects to make an announcement in respect of the coordination within Government of animal welfare policies. [46971]

The Prime Minister: An announcement will be made as soon as possible.

Lockerbie

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister what was the result of Her Majesty's Government's discussions with the Secretary-General of the Arab League on 18 June as to the feasibility of conducting a trial of the Libyan suspects for the Lockerbie bombing in a third country. [46959]

The Prime Minister: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs met the Secretary-General of the Arab League on 18 June. They agreed on the need for urgent progress in resolving the Lockerbie issue. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State stressed the need for early Libyan compliance with the requirements of the relevant United Nations Security Council resolutions.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

National Lottery

Mr. Ennis: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what was the total interest which accrued on prize moneys not claimed for the National Lottery in the last year. [45824]

Mr. Banks: I have asked the Director General of the National Lottery, who is responsible for regulating the operation of the Lottery, to write to my hon. Friend, and copies of his response will be placed in the Library of the House.

Wembley Stadium

Mr. Sutcliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) what plans are being assessed by his Department relating to the 2006 World Cup bid in respect of the redevelopment of Wembley Stadium; [46252]

(2) what discussions have taken place between his Department and the partners involved in the Wembley Stadium refurbishment plans. [46251]

Mr. Banks [holding answer 17 June 1998]: I am keeping a close watch on how the project is progressing. It is of importance not only to the long term domestic needs of sport in this country, but as an integral part of the bid to host the World Cup in 2006 and a future Olympic Games. Day to day dealings with the development partners are being carried out by the English Sports Council, which is providing £120 million of Lottery funding towards the project.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Prisons (Family Rooms)

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisons have (a) creche facilities and (b) family rooms for use by visitors to prisons. [44706]

Ms Quin [holding answer 8 June 1998]: There are currently 66 prisons that provide a creche facility on either a full or part-time basis.

Fifteen prisons provide family rooms for use by visitors, but most prisons will provide a room if a requirement is recognised. The Prison Service is about to embark on a review of visiting arrangements with a view to promulgating best practice.

Prisoner Escort Services

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the cost to his Department in the last year for which figures are available of the provision of prisoner escort services; and if he will list the expiry date of each existing contract. [46239]

Ms Quin: The contracted out court escort service cost the Prison Service £89 million in 1997/98. This represents a full year's operation in seven of the eight contract areas and partial operation in the last (the North of England). The contract for that area commenced in April 1997 but was implemented in two phases, with the second not starting until July.

The contracts cover the transportation of prisoners, other than those in the highest security category (Category A), from prisons and police stations to court, their custody while there, and their return to prison. In addition, the contract for the North of England includes the option for the provision of hospital bedwatches, day attendance for medical treatment, compassionate home visits, etc. If an establishment exercises this option it meets the charges locally. These are not collated centrally and are not included in the above-mentioned costs.

The expiry date for each contract is shown in the table. Contracts were let initially for either five or seven year periods but are renewable up to a maximum of fourteen years.

Area	Location	Contractor	Full	Commenced 1st Phase	Expiry Date

Police Establishments

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will reintroduce the system of fixed Home Office establishments for police officer numbers. [45840]

Mr. Michael: We have no plans to re-introduce the system of Home Office approved police establishments, which was abolished by the previous Government as one of the changes introduced under the Police and Magistrates' Courts Act 1994 when the right hon. Member was Minister of State, Home Office. We are working with the police to ensure that the resources which the Government make available to them are used as effectively as possible, with a new emphasis on outputs and outcomes rather than on inputs.

Probation Services

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the extra costs incurred by probation services for every 1,000 extra added to the daily prison population; and if he will make a statement. [46259]

Ms Quin [holding answer 16 June 1998]: Increases in the prison population produce additional pressures on probation staff, whether they are seconded to prisons and funded by the Prison Service or working in area services and funded by probation grant, but there are too many variables to permit a simple translation of prisoner numbers into costs. However, we are taking workload attributable to pre- and post-release supervision requirements into account in determining what resources should be provided for the probation service.

Closed Circuit Television

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what responsibility the Metropolitan police has for the installation of closed circuit television schemes. [46369]

Mr. Michael: The Metropolitan Police has no statutory duty for the installation of closed circuit television (CCTV) schemes in public places. However, the Commissioner tells me that, in supporting such CCTV systems, the Metropolitan Police provides secondary monitoring to local CCTV initiatives. The police division in the borough covered by CCTV will have a "slave monitoring system", comprising monitors with a control function, capable of accepting pictures from a public place surveillance system. These systems are normally monitored from a local authority or other external CCTV primary monitoring control room. Where a police response may be required, information is passed to the police division for a decision on police action. This is the case for all the systems, bar those in Oxford Street where the primary monitoring is by police officers. The Metropolitan Police is currently involved in 30 systems, with a further 15 in the planning/installation phase.

To reflect a positive lead for "Partnership in CCTV", the Metropolitan Police's Community Safety and Partnership Policy Unit has developed comprehensive guidance on Public Place CCTV schemes. The policy reflects the issue of privacy for the individual by promoting accountability and supervision while ensuring flexibility to fulfil the objectives of preventing and detecting crime.

In addition, the Metropolitan Police uses video technology in a wide range of applications ranging from:

assisting the police in fighting crime e.g. Operations Bumblebee and Eagle Eye; supporting ceremonial and operational events, thus providing protection to the general public and dignitaries; support for anti-terrorist activities;

protection of victims/potential victims of violent crime;

traffic cameras, roadside/motorway video systems;

protection of the Metropolitan Police's property and personnel.

Recidivism

Sir Peter Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what evidence he has evaluated on the relative re-offending rates of those convicted of sexual offences and those convicted of other categories of offence. [46492]

Mr. Michael: Information on known re-offending, as measured by reconvictions, is derived from regular samples drawn from the Offenders Index, a database of criminal careers maintained by the Home Office. The most recently published analysis of reconviction rates of those convicted of sexual and other offences appeared in Home Office Statistical Bulletins 5/97, "Reconvictions of prisoners discharged from prison in 1993", and Home Office Bulletin 6/97, "Reconvictions of those commencing community penalties in 1993".

A fuller analysis of convictions and reconvictions for sexual offending was published in 1997 as Home Office Research Findings Number 55, "The prevalence of convictions for sexual offending".

Copies of these publications are in the Library.

Criminal Appeals

Mr. Woolas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to allow the disclosure of lost or spoiled evidence in criminal proceedings to be permitted as grounds for an appeal. [46293]

Mr. Michael: A defendant may appeal against conviction on indictment in England and Wales on grounds of law, fact or mixed fact and law. When considering such appeals, under section 23 of the Criminal Appeal Act 1968, as amended, the Court of Appeal has unfettered discretion to receive evidence connected with the proceedings, including evidence heard at the trial, evidence available at the time of the trial but not adduced and fresh evidence which has come to light since the trial.

Postal and Proxy Voting

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to change the postal and proxy vote application forms to reduce the possibilities of fraud. [46793]

Mr. George Howarth: The Working Party on Electoral Procedures, which I chair, is examining both postal and proxy voting procedures, including the application forms which are used. We will pay particular attention to the need to achieve a balance between accessibility and the prevention of abuse.

Animal Experiments

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will list the species and numbers of animals ordered to be given euthanasia by the Home Office Inspectorate in (a) 1996, (b) 1997 and (c) 1998, owing to the level of suffering to which they were subjected; [46585]

(2) on how many occasions in (a) 1996, (b) 1997 and (c) 1998 the Home Office Inspectorate has ordered animals used in scientific procedures to be given euthanasia owing to the level of suffering the animals were subjected to. [46584]

Mr. George Howarth: This information is not collected centrally.

Under section 18(3) of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986, should a member of the Inspectorate consider that a protected animal is undergoing excessive suffering he may order it to be immediately killed by an appropriate method. This power rarely needs to be exercised.

Section 10(1) of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 requires that all personal licences shall contain an inviolable termination condition: any animal which is being or has been subjected to a regulated procedure and which is in severe pain or severe distress which cannot be alleviated must be humanely killed. However, the overwhelming majority of procedures cause only mild or moderate suffering. It is extremely rare that animals experience, or are allowed by licensees to experience, anything approaching severe pain or distress.

Project licences also contain severity limits. If these are exceeded, an inspector must be notified. The inspector may ask for the animals to be humanely killed. Any such request is invariably complied with; it is extremely rare that an inspector will need to order animals to be killed.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many current project licences are in operation relating to xenotransplantation experiments within the United Kingdom. [46583]

Mr. George Howarth: In view of the wide nature of the hon. Member's question, it will take some time to formulate a reply and I will write to him in due course.

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the designated establishments authorised to conduct xenotransplantation experiments on animals within the United Kingdom. [46582]

Mr. George Howarth: I cannot provide this information: section 24 of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 prohibits the disclosure of information given, or believed to have been given, in confidence. This requirement arises from, inter alia, the need to protect the safety of the scientists and institutions.

Lewes Prison

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects the works to the windows at Lewes Prison, designed to contain noise, to be completed. [46561]

Ms Quin: Work to windows in F Wing of Lewes prison is due to be completed by the end of July.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what information his Department has obtained concerning the safety of Kurdish civilians in Northern Cyprus; and if he will make a statement on his policy towards asylum applications from them; [46780]

(2) from what sources his Department gains information on the human rights situation in Northern Cyprus in order to evaluate asylum claims. [46781]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: Every application for asylum is decided in accordance with the provisions of the 1951 United Nations Convention relating to the Status of Refugees and its 1967 Protocol. Anyone who demonstrates a well-founded fear of persecution for reasons of race, religion, nationality, membership of a particular social group or political opinion would be recognised as a refugee. Any rejected applicant has the opportunity to appeal to the Immigration Appellate Authority.

The Home Office obtains information on the human rights situation in Northern Cyprus from a variety of sources, including the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, the United States Department of State, and international organisations such as the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees and Amnesty International. A country assessment on Cyprus, prepared by the Council Information and Policy Unit of the Immigration and Nationality Directorate, has been produced and made publicly available. The assessment is one of 35 prepared to provide general background information for decision makers. Each assessment is attributed to source material and contains a bibliography. Assessments will be revised and updated approximately every six months.

The Home office country assessment reports concerns about human rights abuses in Cyprus, including northern Cyprus. At this time, we have received no evidence to show that being of Kurdish ethnic origin alone would single a person out for persecution from either the "TRNC" ("Turkish Republic of Cyprus") authorities or the Turkish troops present in northern Cyprus.

Sex Offences

Dr. Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many men have been convicted under the provisions of the Sex Offenders Act 1997, solely in respect of homosexual acts (a) with men over the age of 16 and under the age of 18 years and (b) where more than two persons were present; [46591]

(2) how many men have been convicted of an offence under section 1 of the Sexual Offences Act 1967 under the provision stipulating that privacy does not pertain where more than two people are present. [46592]

Mr. Michael: The Sex Offenders Act 1997 requires sex offenders, in the categories covered by the Act, to register details of their name and address with the police. The only offences created by the Act relate to failure to register or the supply of false registration information. These offences began to be identified separately on the Home Office Court Proceedings database from 1 January 1998, although the information recorded does not identify whether the offender had previously committed either a heterosexual or homosexual offence. Data are not available centrally prior to this date and provisional data for the first quarter of 1998 will not be available until the autumn.

Section 1 of the Sexual Offences Act 1967 provides that a homosexual act which takes place in private between consenting parties of the age of consent shall not be an offence if it takes place in private. By virtue of section 1(2)(a), however, such an act is not regarded as taking place in private if more than two persons are present. The offence information held centrally on convictions under the Act does not identify the circumstances or location in which the offence was committed.

In 1996, 112 offenders aged 18 or over were convicted of a homosexual act of buggery or indecency between males where the second party was aged 18 or over. A further 14 offenders aged 16 or over were also convicted for the same offences, where the second party was aged 16 or over.

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will list, for each of the past 10 years (a) the number of prosecutions under section 25 of the Sexual Offences Act 1956 and (b) the number of convictions obtained; [46541]

(2) if he will list, for each of the past 10 years (a) the number of prosecutions under section 1 of the Indecency with Children Act 1960 and (b) the number of convictions obtained. [46540]

Mr. Michael: Available information for 1986 to 1996 (latest available) is given in the table.

Number of persons prosecuted at magistrates' courts and convicted[1] at all courts for offences under Section 1 of the Indecency with Children Act 1960 and Sections 25 and 26 of the Sexual Offences Act 1956, England and Wales, 1986–96

Mark Darren Day

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 6 April 1998, Official Report, columns 26–27, if he will report on progress in the consideration by the Criminal Cases Review Commission of the case of Mark Darren Day, convicted of murder on 26 March 1993. [46079]

Mr. Michael: I understand that Mr. Day's application has reached the stage of a detailed review, but the Commission is unable to say when it will conclude its consideration.

Prostitution

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to amend the Street Offences Act 1959 to distinguish between offences committed by adults and offences committed by children. [46539]

Mr. Michael: The Government believe that the criminal justice system should treat children who are involved in prostitution differently from women. The Government's primary concern is to protect and deter children, both boys and girls, from becoming caught up in prostitution and to recognise that they are frequently the victims of coercion and abuse.

The Government have recently announced their intention to conduct a review of sexual offences and penalties. In the light of this, we will want to consider very carefully the laws relating to soliciting, for women and men and young boys and girls, but we do not believe that legalising child prostitution would help to protect children.

Although the Street Offences Act 1959 does not distinguish women prostitutes from girl prostitutes, the numbers of girls who have been prosecuted or cautioned for soliciting offences is small. The police, together with children's charities and others, have developed guidelines to ensure that children involved in prostitution are treated as victims in need of welfare rather than as offenders.

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidance he has issued to police forces in England and Wales on liaising with other agencies to make provision for young people to leave prostitution. [46543]

Mr. Michael: The general principles for inter-agency co-operation for the protection of children were set out in inter-departmental guidance issued under the Children Act 1989 to the police and other agencies in 1991. The Government are currently consulting on revised proposals for inter-agency co-operation to safeguard children.

The Association of Chief Police Officers has also adopted best practice guidelines for the police that emphasise that children caught up in prostitution should normally be treated as victims and in need of help, rather than criminals. These guidelines were drawn up in discussion with the Children's Society and other agencies, the Department of Health and the Home Office, and emphasise the need for multi-agency partnerships, particularly with local social services, in dealing with child prostitution.

These guidelines were piloted in Wolverhampton and Nottingham, where they are regarded as having been a success. The pilots are now being evaluated independently by the Home Office.

My noble Friend Lord Williams of Mostyn announced on 30 March 1998, Official Report, House of Lords, column 9, that new guidance on how best to deal with the problem of children involved in prostitution will be issued in the autumn. It will take account of the Association of Chief Police Officers' guidelines on dealing with children involved in prostitution, the Crime and Disorder Bill [Lords], and the response to the Government's current consultation exercise on proposals for inter-agency co-operation, together with prevention, care and rehabilitation of children involved in prostitution or those at risk of prostitution.

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to change the law to increase sentences for those convicted of living off the immoral earnings of a child under 16. [46542]

Mr. Michael: The Government want to ensure that severe penalties are available for those involved in child prostitution. I have announced a review of all sexual offences and will be considering possible changes to such penalties in the context of that review.

Protection from Harassment Act

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when sections 3, 4 and 5 of the Protection from Harassment Act 1997 will be implemented. [46230]

Mr. Hoon: I have been asked to reply.

Sections 4 and 5 of the Act are already in force. Subsections 1 and 2 of section 3 are also in force. Subsections 3–9 of section 3 will be brought into force when the work needed to finalise the relevant rules of court is complete. The final period of consultation closed on 12 June and the draft rules will very shortly be submitted to the appropriate rules committees. We expect both the rules and the commencement order for the outstanding provisions of the Act to come into force in September.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

MV Derbyshire

Maria Eagle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will place in the Library all Government documentation relating to the first formal inquiry into the loss of the MV 'Derbyshire' regardless of whether it is legally privileged, and in particular the document entitled "Derbyshire Statement of Facts Giving Rise to the Formal Investigation". [45264]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The government documentation relating to the Formal Investigation into the loss of the MV 'Derbyshire' is not for publication as it contains internal advice to Ministers and correspondence with legal counsel. The document entitled "Derbyshire Statement of Facts Giving Rise to the Formal Investigation" was circulated to the interested parties in the Master Bundle of documentation for the Formal Investigation which began in October 1987. A copy of the document has been placed in the Library.

Cleaner Fuel

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what resources he has made available to promote research into green fuel technology. [45442]

Ms Glenda Jackson: A £60,000 "Life cycle" study of alternative road transport fuels, co-funded by the former Department of Transport and the Department of Trade and Industry, was published in March 1996. A further £1.2 million three year field trial of alternative fuels, funded by DETR, MAFF and DTI, aimed at quantifying their environmental benefits and viability in comparison with conventional fuels under UK conditions, has now been completed. Publication of the report is imminent.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what statistics he has collected on the numbers of (a) local authorities and (b) transport undertakings which have converted their fleets, in whole or part, to run on compressed natural gas, LPG and electricity. [46126]

Ms Glenda Jackson: We do not collect these statistics. However, we do collect statistics on the numbers of vehicle licensed by propulsion type. In 1997, 9,100 vehicles were registered as running on gas or petrol and gas, and 17,400 on electricity. Of the registered electric vehicles, the majority fell into the special concessionary group, which consists largely of plant and agricultural vehicles, and exempt vehicles (emergency vehicles, vehicles registered to disabled drivers and vehicles over 25 years old). Of the gas vehicles, 6,700 are private and light goods vehicles. The Natural Gas Vehicles Association estimate that 50–55 local authorities have one or more compressed natural gas vehicles in their fleet. The LPG association believe that several local authorities are using LPG, along with a number of fleet operators such as bus operators and the police. The Electric Vehicles Association state that a number of local authorities have ordered electric vehicles.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what discussions he has had with companies operating depot-based vehicle fleets on the merits of converting vehicles to compressed natural gas. [46127]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Ministers have spoken about the merits of converting fleets to run on gas fuels on a number of occasions to audiences including large fleet operators and local authorities. In addition, the Government have provided £6 million of funding to the Energy Saving Trust for its three year Powershift programme which promotes the use of alternative fuels like compressed natural gas by providing grants of up to half the capital cost of converting a vehicle to run on alternative fuel, and put in place a number of fiscal incentives to encourage the use of gas fuels.

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what measures his Department has undertaken since May 1997 to encourage local authorities to provide environmentally-friendly forms of public transport. [46044]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Under the National Air Quality Strategy, through the process of local air quality management, local authorities are responsible for ensuring that National Air Quality Strategy objectives are met in their areas. The Government have introduced a number of measures to encourage the use of more environmentally friendly public transport to help with this process. At the last Budget, 17 March 1998, Official Report, columns 1097–1112, the Chancellor announced that a graduated VED scheme for buses with an incentive of up to £500 for those vehicles meeting stringent emissions standards would begin on 1 January 1999. He also announced the creation of a greater duty differential between ordinary diesel and ultra low sulphur diesel, providing a greater incentive for operators to use this cleaner fuel, and that the Government will consult on how bus fuel rebate can better be targeted to help operators who run cleaner vehicles. The duty on road fuel gases was also frozen for the second successive budget.

Millennium Dome

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if coaches will be directed to Greenwich from Central London via the Dartford Tunnel in the event of the Jubilee Line extension not being fully operational by the time the Millennium Dome opens. [45746]

Ms Glenda Jackson: London Underground Ltd. currently estimate that the Jubilee Line Extension (JLE) will be fully operational by Spring 1999. In the extremely unlikely event that the JLE is not fully operational by the end of 1999, there would be several potential alternative routes and transport modes for journeys to and from the Millennium Experience in North Greenwich. London Transport is considering such options in the context of contingency planning for any operating difficulties that may occur after it is open. The use of a direct coach service from Central London to the Dome may be an option, but it would be unlikely to be necessary to send all coaches via the M25, A2 and A102(M), although that will be the recommended route for coaches going to the Millennium Experience from outside the M25.

London Underground

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 9 June 1998, Official Report, columns 515–16, concerning London Underground, if the contracts drawn up with Price Waterhouse and Freshfields to provide, respectively, financial and legal advice are fixed price contracts; and what the value or estimated value is of these contracts. [46131]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The contracts which have been drawn up with Freshfields and Price Waterhouse to provide advice jointly to the Government and London Transport on implementing a Public/Private Partnership for London Underground are not fixed price contracts. For reasons of commercial confidentiality, it is not possible to give a figure for the estimated value of the contracts. We will, of course, report aggregate figures for the total cost of advice on implementing the Public/Private Partnership in due course.

Economic Development and Regeneration

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the Government's local economic development and regeneration policies. [45852]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 18 June 1998]: The Government are determined to join with local government, the voluntary and private sectors and local communities in a concerted attack against the multiple causes of social and economic decline—unemployment, bad housing, crime, poor health and a degraded environment.

Regeneration policies will play a key part in this. The Government are therefore undertaking a comprehensive review of regeneration policies. A discussion paper on the future of regeneration—"The Way Forward"—has been produced as a result of this review.

Regional Development Agencies (RDAs): The White Paper on Regional Development Agencies (RDAs), "Building Partnerships for Prosperity" (Cm 3814), published on 3 December 1997, set out the Government's proposals for the creation of a new Regional Development Agency in each of the English Regions. The Regional Development Agencies Bill, which had its Third Reading on 1 April 1998, Official Report, columns 1366–85, will put in place the legislative framework for RDAs' work.

RDAs will provide the means for ensuring effective, properly co-ordinated regional economic development. One of their first and most important tasks will be to draw up a regional economic strategy for their region. This will provide proper strategic direction to regional economic development work: regeneration, inward investment, business support, skills training and sustainable development.

RDAs will contribute towards the better coordination of regeneration programmes by bringing together English Partnerships, the Single Regeneration Budget Challenge Fund and the rural regeneration work of the Rural Development Commission. They will continue to work with local partnerships formed between local authorities, business and the voluntary sector.

Single Regeneration Budget (SRB): The Single Regeneration Budget (SRB) currently provides over £3.4 billion, in total, for the three years 1997–98 to 1999–2000.

Within the £3.4 billion SRB total, nearly £1.7 billion is currently allocated to some 550 partnership schemes under rounds 1 to 3 of the SRB Challenge Fund.

The balance of available SRB resources—over £1.7 billion over the 3-year period—is currently allocated to fund commitments under earlier programmes such as English Partnerships, UDCs, Housing Action Trusts, Estate Action, City Challenge etc. which all form part of the SRB.

The Government announced, on 30 March 1998, the names of the 121 successful Partnerships under Round 4 of the SRB Challenge Fund which stand to get over £300 million. Around £12 million will be available nationally for 1998–99.

Nearly all the 121 successful Round 4 schemes have multiple objectives, which include social exclusion, employment and training, education, community safety, prevention of drug misuse, health care and child care. Over half of the schemes include support for ethnic minorities as an explicit objective. This reflects local needs and priorities and the need to look across traditional boundaries in finding solutions.

The Round 4 schemes aim to attract private sector support of over £400 million and other public sector contributions, including European funding, of over £500 million over their lifetime of up to seven years. This investment will benefit over 600,000 school children, provide training for 86,000 people, provide jobs for over 50,000 target area residents and benefit over 3 million people from community safety initiatives.

During 1996–97 the SRB Challenge Fund supported schemes which attracted over £577 million of private sector leverage, created/preserved over 78,000 jobs and helped to start up over 16,000 businesses.

English Partnerships: NDPB delivering regeneration, economic development, job creation, environmental improvement and promoting inward investment through the reclamation and development of derelict, vacant and under-used land and buildings throughout England.

EP's Investment Fund provides a flexible means to tailor financial support for projects and enables EP to operate as a strategic partner and investor in regeneration. Their Community Investment Fund provides capital grants of up to £100,000 to community based projects and enables local communities to participate more effectively in the regeneration of their neighbourhoods.

Fifty-six British Coal non-operational sites, covering some 6,000 acres, have been transferred to EP who are taking forward their regeneration, reclamation and development. EP have prepared a detailed investment plan including a development strategy for each site. Paula Hay-Plumb, Managing Director (Operations) at EP has been appointed by the Deputy Prime Minister to chair a Coalfields Task Force whose purpose is to identify and develop a specific programme of action to assist coal closure areas by pooling the expertise of government departments and other partners in regeneration.

EP own the Greenwich Peninsula and are responsible for providing a serviced site for the Millennium Experience. EP have developed a master plan for the long term regeneration of the site which would provide 5,000 homes and 335,300 jobs as well as commercial, leisure, retail, community and education facilities. A competition for the first stage of the development—the Millennium Village—was launched by the Deputy Prime Minister on 10 July 1997. Four shortlisted consortiums submitted their bids on early January 1998 and the winner will be announced shortly.

Housing Action Trusts (HATs): There are 6 Housing Action Trusts regenerating severely run down housing estates, including refurbishment/redevelopment, creation of jobs and training opportunities, and other improvements. HATs are planning their programmes on the basis of a total public spend of £1,095 million on all HATs to the end of their 10 year lifetimes.

Estate Action: aims to help local authorities improve unpopular housing estates. Funding is currently for commitments only on continuing schemes approved in 1994–95 or before.

There are also several other programmes which can help in the regeneration of deprived areas. These include:

The Special Grants Programme: a small but long standing programme (1997–98 budget £1.3 million) under which grants are given to voluntary organisations undertaking national projects relevant to the Department's policy objectives in housing and regeneration. Grant is generally limited to 3 years and to about half of each project's costs, the remainder coming from private and voluntary sector sources.

Local Investment Fund (LIF): established in 1994 with £1 million grant and £2 million private sector contribution. LIF provides loans on conventional terms to voluntary organisations for economically viable projects for which conventional finance cannot be raised (e.g. owing to lack of asset base, track record, etc.).

Groundwork: established in 1985 to tackle a range of environmental problems through partnership with the community and the private sector. DETR provides funding to the Groundwork Foundation and its 41 Trusts in England, Wales and Northern Ireland (£6.675 million for 1997–98).

Environment Task Force: one of four options available under the New Deal for the young unemployed. It aims to enhance the long term employment prospects of 18–24 year olds, unemployed and claiming JSA for 6 months or more, through a combination of high quality work experience and training leading to an approved qualification. The ETF will consist of projects which deliver sustainable environmental benefits in line with DETR's policies and objectives.

Thames Gateway: a major growth opportunity with strong European connections, reinforced by stations on the Channel Tunnel Rail Link. Thames Gateway Planning Framework (RPG9a) aims to maximise the area's potential and improve its image through environmental enhancement and quality development.

Inner City Religious Council: chaired by Ministers, the ICRC provides the main faith communities with a means of working together to tackle the problems facing inner cities and deprived areas. Its members are drawn from Christian, Hindu, Jewish, Muslim and Sikh faiths. A review of the work of the ICRC has recently been carried out and its findings are being considered.

Local Authorities

Local authorities have a key role to play as catalysts for the economic development and regeneration of their areas. Under section 33 of the Local Government and Housing Act 1989 authorities have powers to promote the economic development of their area. We intend to strengthen their role further by placing a duty on local authorities to promote the economic, social and environmental well being of their area in partnership with other public, private and voluntary organisations, and with local people.

Air Traffic Control

Ms Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the role of the Private Finance Initiative in funding the new Scottish centre at Prestwick in relation to the proposed public/private partnership for funding air traffic control. [46440]

Ms Glenda Jackson [holding answer 18 June 1998]: The operational requirement of the New Scottish Centre at Prestwick remains unchanged, and the centre is an integral part of the Civil Aviation Authority's two centre strategy—which the Government have endorsed. National Air Traffic Services Ltd. are moving towards contracting with their preferred bidder for the provision of the new centre, and the Government hope that the announcement of the public/private partnership will not delay its development.

Ms Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when National Air Traffic Services will sign the contract for the new Scottish centre at Prestwick. [46443]

Ms Glenda Jackson [holding answer 18 June 1998]: National Air Traffic Services and Sky Solutions, the preferred bidder, are now well advanced in negotiations. NATS will consult with the airlines before seeking CAA Board and Government approval to a contractual commitment.

Ms Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the number of occasions in the last (a) month and (b) six months when allegations have been made of overloads of the air traffic control system; and what has been the outcome of investigations. [46439]

Ms Glenda Jackson [holding answer 18 June 1998]: From 17 May to 17 June 1998, there have been three overloads reported at the London Area Terminal Control Centre at West Drayton. For the calendar year to 17 June, there have been 22 overloads reported at that centre. There have been none at the Manchester and Scottish and Oceanic Control Centres. The Safety Regulation Group of the Civil Aviation Authority investigates the incidents. To date, reports have been made to National Air Traffic Services Limited (NATS) on 13 of the incidents. NATS implements all relevant recommendations following such incidents.

Ms Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions in relation to the proposed public/private partnership for National Air Traffic Services, what proportion of the 51 per cent. of the shares held in the private sector will be reserved for employees. [46446]

Ms Glenda Jackson [holding answer 18 June 1998]: The Government are contemplating reserving up to 10 per cent. of the shares held in the private sector for National Air Traffic Services' employees.

Ms Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of alternative options for the future funding of air traffic control services; and if he will publish the arrangements for consultation on the Government's preferred option. [46442]

Ms Glenda Jackson [holding answer 18 June 1998]: The Government considered the following options:

Establishing National Air Traffic Services Ltd as a separate public sector body: this option was not feasible without significant relaxation of Government borrowing controls, and provided no real incentive to improve efficiency or drive the business forward;

Maintaining air traffic control provision as a subsidiary of the Civil Aviation Authority: this option provided no incentives for efficiency, would not separate regulation from service provision, and could not provide assurances as to the availability of funding for future investment to cater for demand;

Setting up a private sector trust along the lines of the Canadian model: this option would not generate real commercial incentives or disciplines, it would be difficult to ensure adequate accountability, and difficult to ensure against the emergence of dominant interests;

Establishing National Air Traffic Services Ltd as a private sector body providing air traffic control services under contract to the Civil Aviation Authority (the "privatised contractor"): this option did not effect any real separation between service provision and regulation, and there were additional concerns over a possible conflict of interest in the Civil Aviation Authority's being contract manager and regulator.

The Government intend to consult interested parties on the implementation of their decision in principle, and will publish a consultation paper shortly.

RAF Northolt

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what contacts, and when, his Department has had with (a) Stagecoach Aviation Ltd and (b) other commercial interests since 2 May 1997 about (i) turning RAF Northolt into a civil airport and (ii) increasing the number of civil aircraft movements or the stipulated operating hours for civil aircraft at RAF Northolt. [45291]

Ms Glenda Jackson [holding answer 18 June 1998]: The Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions has had only once contact with commercial interests regarding RAF Northolt, notably by letter dated 20 May 1998, from Virgin Executive Jets.

Sites of Special Scientific Interest

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many sites of special scientific interest there are; and what their approximate acreage is in the United Kingdom. [46694]

Angela Eagle: As at 17 June, there were 6,526 Sites of Special Scientific Interest in the United Kingdom covering approximately 2.17 million hectares (5.37 million acres).

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list, with their approximate acreage, the sites of special scientific interest in Gloucestershire. [46695]

Angela Eagle: As at 17 June there were 119 Sites of Special Scientific Interest in Gloucestershire covering nearly 23,500 hectares (57,900 acres). I will send the hon. Member a complete site list with respective acreages.

Nuclear Materials (Transportation)

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many consignments of low enriched uranium have been air freighted on (a) passenger and (b) cargo airlines from the United Kingdom airports in each of the last 10 years; what quantities of nuclear materials were involved in (a) and (b); what safety arrangements have applied; what advance notice has been given to Ministers; and what plans there are to airfreight uranium from the United Kingdom over the next year. [46817]

Ms Glenda Jackson: My Department does not collect such data as requested. All air shipments of radioactive material to, from and within the United Kingdom must be made in accordance with the requirements of the International Civil Aviation Organisation's Technical Instructions for the Safe Transport of Dangerous Goods by Air (Class 7) which are given legal force in the United Kingdom by the Air Navigation (Dangerous Goods) Regulations 1994 (SI No 3187) and Amendments 1996 (SI No 3100) and 1997 (SI No 2666). Prior notification of such shipments would be made only where so required by the Technical Instructions.

Eurostar

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of commercial proposals to run direct regional Eurostar rail services from Scottish and English regional cities to Europe. [46741]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Regional Eurostar rail services are a matter for London and Continental Railways Ltd. (LCR). The Government have, however, asked the consortium chosen by LCR to operate Eurostar to report by the end of the year on the feasibility of such services.

Trunk Roads

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he plans to announce the list of trunk road schemes to be approved for construction simultaneously with the publication of the Integrated Transport Strategy White Paper. [46563]

Ms Glenda Jackson: No. The Roads Review will follow after the Integrated Transport White Paper.

Road Hauliers

Mr. Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to introduce a United Kingdom vignette for road hauliers. [46551]

Ms Glenda Jackson: I have no plans at present to do so.

Transport Expenditure

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is his current estimate of his Department's expenditure on (a) national roads, (b) local roads and parking, (c) transport grants and (d) public transport in (i) the current financial year and (ii) the following two financial years. [46773]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The table gives my Department's expenditure plans for the current financial year in as close to the requested format as I am able to provide. The Government will publish their expenditure plans for the rest of the Parliament in the Summer, after the completion of the Comprehensive Spending Review.

A more detailed breakdown of my Department's planned transport expenditure for 1998–99 can be found in the 1998 Annual Report (Cm 3906).

Planned transport expenditure for 1998–99

	£ million
National roads	1,349
Local transport (local roads and public transport)	[1]623
Other public transport	2,220
o/w
Support for national railways[2]	1,659
London Transport	523
Support for rural buses	38
Other transport grants[3]	42

[1] Of this total, £449m has been allocated solely for local roads and £63m for public transport. The remaining £111m can be used on either roads or public transport according to local discretion. (DETR figures)

[2] Includes Metropolitan Railway Passenger Services Grant, support for residual British Rail activities, Deeds of Assumption Ltd. and support paid by the Office of Passenger Rail Franchising

[3] To prevent double counting, only includes those transport grants not included in other sections of the table. Total comprises £40m rail freight grants and £2m grants to local authorities for pre-DVLC pensions

Note:

Unless otherwise indicated, the source of data is the DETR 1998 Annual Report

River Wye

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how much public money has been spent by the Environment Agency on (a) the River Wye Navigation Order application under the Transport and Works Act 1992 since the lodging of the application in April 1986 and (b) the River Wye Navigation Bye-Laws under the Water Resources Act 1991 application, since the lodging of the application in October 1994; and if he will make a statement. [46960]

Angela Eagle: The costs incurred by the Environment Agency and its predecessor body, the National Rivers Authority (NRA), in promoting an Order to become the navigation authority on the Rivers Wye and Lugg amount to approximately £450,000 since 1995 when the proposals were first put forward. The majority of these costs were incurred in preparing for and conducting the public inquiry following objections to the application submitted to the Secretaries of State for the Environment and for Wales in March 1996.

The costs incurred by the Agency and the NRA since the submission of the application for the confirmation of the River Wye Navigation Byelaws in September 1994 is approximately £114,000. The majority of these costs were incurred in preparing for and conducting a public inquiry into this application which ran immediately after the inquiry into the navigation authority application.

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the Government's policy regarding the use of the River Wye for leisure activities. [46958]

Angela Eagle: Subject to its environment and recreational duties, it is for the Environment Agency to draw up policies for individual rivers for which it is the responsible authority. The Government do not prepare such policies.

Low Flying

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many successful prosecutions there have been for civilian low-flying offences in the United Kingdom in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [46549]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Civil Aviation Authority's Aviation Regulation Enforcement Division has carried out the following enforcement action against low flying offences in the years 1993 to 1997. Full figures are not yet available for 1998.

Year	Successful prosecutions
1993	11
1994	5
1995	5
1996	6
1997	4
1998 (so far)	4

In addition, in the same period, the Enforcement Division issued 12 formal cautions and 37 warning letters in respect of low flying offences. One prosecution for low flying is currently pending, and four other cases of alleged low flying are currently under investigation.

London Regional Transport

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 15 June 1998, Official Report, column 59, on the chairmanship of London Regional Transport, if he will publish his proposals for the method of recruitment to the post as soon as they have been determined. [46546]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Yes.

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will publish the job specification of the Chief Executive of London Regional Transport; and when the Chief Executive's personal annual objectives will be published. [46535]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The job specification for the Chief Executive of London Transport, including the objectives he is to deliver, are as follows:

He has executive responsibility for all London Transport's activities, with the heads of each main executive arm reporting to him. His objectives for the next two years are:

1. To ensure that London Transport (Underground Operations, Underground Infrastructure, the Buses and other arms) delivers the Government's objectives;
2. Strategic planning, including the cascade of targets and funding limits to the constituent parts of LT, consistent with the Government's overall targets; and the monitoring of delivery;
3. To lead the design and implementation of the Underground PPP in accordance with the Government's policy and timetable;
4. To work with Government to pave the way for the establishment of Transport for London under the GLA;
5. To ensure high standards of safety throughout LT; and
6. To ensure that LT delivers its part in providing links to the Millennium Exhibition.

The Chief Executive is also to be directly responsible for managing London Underground until a new Managing Director is appointed, and will continue to manage the infrastructure element thereafter.

Bus Companies (Customer Service)

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 15 June 1998, Official Report, column 59, on bus companies' customer service standards, what advice he has given to London Transport on customer service standards. [46547]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Government set London Transport quality of service targets, based on service performance and measures of customer satisfaction, for the London bus network.

Sapphire

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 9 February 1998, Official Report, column 10, if he will make a statement on the discussions he has had with other Government departments concerning the consultation process he announced following the loss of the 'Sapphire'; when he expects the consultation process to be completed; and if he will make a statement. [46486]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Other Government departments have made valuable contributions to the Consultation Paper on Fishing Vessel Accidents and the Recovery of Those Lost at Sea. The Consultation Paper will be issued shortly and the results of the consultation process will be announced before the end of the year.

Houses in Multiple Occupation

Angela Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what action he proposes to take to improve standards in houses in multiple occupation. [47137]

Ms Armstrong: We are determined to ensure that houses in multiple occupation (HMOs) are safe, providing acceptable living conditions and fulfilling our commitment to introduce a national licensing scheme. Work on drawing up proposals for licensing will be given priority in our plans for reforming the existing controls over HMOs. We will consult interested parties later this summer on how a licensing system should work and the standards that it should achieve.

Our objective is to ensure that all HMOs meet the highest possible standards on fire and other health and safety risks. However, we need to set standards which are achievable and do not involve unnecessary or disproportionate burdens on HMO landlords, who might otherwise withdraw their properties from the market. We need also to ensure a consistent approach with other relevant legislation, including proposals by the Home Office for a universal fire safety duty.

We have decided against introducing an interim Approved Code of Practice. We consider that our existing powers under the Housing Act 1996 do not enable us to produce an effective and workable code that would deliver the standards we want HMOs to achieve in the longer term. We are also reluctant to introduce two major changes within a relatively short period of time.

Following consultation, we intend to publish the proposed standards for a licensing system and will issue guidance to local housing authorities on their application prior to the coming into force of the licensing requirements.

Authorities which have adopted HMO registration schemes containing control provisions are likely to have similar powers under the proposed licensing scheme. We are therefore encouraging all authorities to adopt registration schemes now to facilitate the transition to licensing.

We will be seeking views, as part of our consultation on licensing, on whether there should be a duty on landlords to maintain acceptable standards in addition to the licensing requirements. We will not be commencing section 73 of the Housing Act 1996 to place a duty on HMO landlords to keep their properties fit for the number of occupants, as we do not consider this duty to be workable in its present form.

DEFENCE

Defence Attachés

14. Mr. Soames: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many new defence attaché posts he plans to establish by 2000. [45235]

Mr. George Robertson: As with many other important issues affected by the Strategic Defence Review, we are undertaking a global review of our Defence Attaché coverage. We want to ensure that the number and location of our attachés meet our new security and defence requirements. It is too early to say at this stage what the conclusions might be.

Education and Training

15. Mrs. Gilroy: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans his Department has to improve the quality of education and training in the armed forces. [45236]

Dr. Reid: The Armed Forces already spend substantial sums to ensure high-quality training for Service Personnel. As part of the Strategic Defence Review, we are considering the scope to improve further the education and training provided, and to ensure that the qualifications Service personnel receive are fully recognised and transferable when they return to civilian life.

Royal Naval College

16. Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he next plans to visit the Royal Naval College to discuss its participation in the Greenwich millennium celebration. [45237]

Mr. George Robertson: I hope to visit the Royal Naval College soon to sign the head lease which will transfer responsibility for the site to the Greenwich Foundation. The extent of involvement in the Millennium celebrations is rightly a matter for the Foundation.

Joint Organisations

17. Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps his Department is taking to increase the use of joint organisations in the armed forces. [45238]

Dr. Reid: As my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced on 8 June 1998, Official Report, column 423, the MOD has signed a contract to build a new Joint Services' Command and Staff College at Watchfield. This reflects our commitment to joint training and to joint organisations more generally, one of the main themes of the Strategic Defence Review.

Strategic Defence Review

18. Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish the strategic defence review before the end of July. [45239]

Mr. George Robertson: A package of proposals has been submitted to the Cabinet. Once decisions have been taken, the Review's conclusions will be published in a White Paper as quickly as possible thereafter.

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the implications of the Defence Review for defence procurement. [45222]

Mr. George Robertson: I refer the hon. Member to the oral answer I gave earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for Portsmouth, North (Mr. Rapson), Official Report, columns 683–84.

RAF Finningley

19. Caroline Flint: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on arrangements for the disposal of RAF Finningley. [45240]

Mr. Spellar: The RAF Finningley site has been marketed and two bids, both of which include proposals for civil aviation use, are currently under consideration. My Department continues to work closely with the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions and the Government Office for Yorkshire and Humberside so that a decision can be made as soon as possible which takes into account all the factors affecting this important regional site.

Inoculations

20. Maria Eagle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the circumstances under which inoculation of forces personnel should be compulsory. [45241]

Dr. Reid: Immunisation is vitally important for the protection of UK Service personnel against disease, in the context of public health threats as well as defence against biological warfare agents. At present, MoD policy is that immunisation for both purposes is voluntary, on the basis of informed consent. However, the means of protecting our personnel against such threats are continually reviewed and updated in the light of current circumstances.

Guardsmen Fisher and Wright

21. Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the prospects of future service in the Scots Guards of Guardsmen Fisher and Wright. [45242]

Dr. Reid: No decision has been taken on the future in the Army of Guardsmen Fisher and Wright.

Benefits

22. Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many service personnel are currently claiming benefits. [45243]

Dr. Reid: Except in a limited number of circumstances—for example, when personnel are serving overseas—entitlement to DSS benefits is normally a matter between individual Service personnel and the DSS, to which claims are made direct. Therefore, my Department has no overview of the extent of benefits being claimed by Service personnel.

Export Licences

24. Mr. David Heath: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions he has had with other departments concerning the process of considering arms export licence applications. [45245]

Mr. Spellar: Ministry of Defence officials are in daily contact with officials in other Departments, principally the Department of Trade and Industry, the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and the Department for International Development, as part of the process of considering export licence applications. Ministers occasionally discuss various export issues, including the process of considering such applications.

Territorial Army

25. Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to (a) reorganise and (b) alter the role of the Territorial Army. [45246]

Dr. Reid: I refer the hon. Member to the oral answer I gave to the hon. Member for Buckingham (Mr. Bercow) earlier today, Official Report, column 686.

Royal Yeomanry

26. Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the annual cost of the Royal Yeomanry in its chemical defence role; and what would be the cost of giving the role to a similar-sized regular unit. [45247]

Dr. Reid: The annual cost of the Royal Yeomanry in the chemical defence role is £3.471m. Comparable costs for a similar sized regular chemical defence unit are not available. However, the costs of paying regular and TA soldiers to perform a particular role for a given period of time are broadly comparable.

Defence Diversification

27. Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he intends to publish a White Paper on defence diversification; and if he will make a statement. [45248]

29. Mr. Sutcliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the Government's plans for defence diversification. [45251]

Mr. Spellar: I refer my hon. Friends to the oral answer I gave earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for Delyn (Mr. Hanson), Official Report, column 683.

Chamber of Shipping

28. Mr. Bill O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he last met the Chamber of Shipping to discuss co-operation between his Department and the chamber on defence issues; and if he will make a statement. [45249]

Mr. Spellar: The Secretary of State for Defence has not yet met the Chamber of Shipping. However, the Ministry of Defence enjoys a close and productive relationship with the Chamber on defence issues, primarily through the auspices of the Shipping Defence Advisory Committee and its various working groups and sponsored discussions. The MOD looks forward to a continuing dialogue with the Chamber which will, I am sure, provide further opportunity to develop a better appreciation of our respective interests and concerns.

Army Operational Commitments

30. Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the capacity of the Army to sustain further indefinite operational commitments. [45252]

Dr. Reid: The Army is currently heavily committed in Northern Ireland and Bosnia. Our capacity to sustain further indefinite operational commitments would be subject to the specific circumstances pertaining at the time and the scale of the force envisaged.

Commercial Exploitation Levy Receipts

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what sums have been generated by commercial exploitation levies since 1992. [46489]

Mr. Spellar: Commercial Exploitation Levy receipts for the years 1991–92 to 1997–98 are as follows:

	£ million ex VAT
1991–92	34.5
1992–93	15.0
1993–94	39.8
1994–95	33.0
1995–96	21.9
1996–97	90.5
1997–98	54.0

Defence Exports

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which countries have benefited from (a) the Defence Military Assistance Fund, (b) the Defence Policy Fund and (c) the Defence Sales Fund since 1988; and what criteria have been used for disbursements from (i) the Defence Policy Fund and (ii) the Defence Sales Fund. [46490]

Mr. Spellar: I refer my hon. Friend to the letter from my hon. Friend the Minister for the Armed Forces, sent to my hon. Friend the Member for Cynon Valley (Ann Clwyd) on 7 May 1998, a copy of which has been placed in the Library of the House. The letter sets out those countries which have received support from the Defence Policy Fund, the Defence Sales Fund, the Defence Military Assistance Fund and other centrally administered funds in the period since 1988.

The Defence Policy Fund was an MOD-administered scheme to provide military assistance at no or a reduced cost to selected countries, generally outside the NATO area, in support of defence policy objectives. The criteria used in considering requests against the Fund included the extent to which the UK's strategic interests and defence involvement might have caused us to respond positively to a request for assistance, whether the UK either enjoyed or expected to require valuable defence facilities, whether the UK retained formal defence commitments or links, and the general state of our relations with the country.

The Defence Sales Fund was designed to assist in the promotion of defence exports by reducing or waiving charges for training related to specific sales which had been secured or were in clear prospect.

Major Eric Joyce

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what factors underlay the decision not to court-martial Major Eric Joyce, Adjutant-General's Corps. [46302]

Mr. George Robertson [holding answer 18 June 1998]: The decision on whether or not to prosecute a case referred to the Army Prosecuting Authority is made on the prospect of a realistic conviction based on the available evidence, and whether a prosecution is in the public and Service interest. These tests are essentially the same as those applied by the Crown Prosecution Service.

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on which date the resignation from the British Army of Major Eric Joyce, Adjutant-General's Corps, became effective. [46301]

Mr. George Robertson [holding answer 18 June 1998]: No application has been received from Major Eric Joyce to retire from the British Army.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Reviews

Mr. Allan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will list, for each of the last four years, the departmental inquiries and reviews instigated by Ministers which have been chaired by individuals outside her Department; and in each case if he will give the date of establishment and the name of the chairman. [44365]

Mrs. Beckett: The DTI has initiated the following Inquiries and Reviews since May 1994 which have been chaired by individuals outside the Department.

Review	Chaired by	Date established
Review of the Contribution of Scientists and Engineers to the Public Understanding of Science, Engineering and Technology	Sir Arnold Wolfendale FRS	January 1995

British Employees (Overseas Working Conditions)

Ms Kelly: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many British employees she estimates are currently working for British companies abroad under contracts signed in the United Kingdom; and how many complaints were received by her Department from such employees about working conditions in the last year for which figures are available. [45474]

Mr. Ian McCartney: My Department collects no information on this subject and receives few complaints from British workers overseas.

EU Structural Funds

Mr. Maclean: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the amount of (a) Objective 5b funding and (b) Objective 1 funding spent in the United Kingdom over the last five years, broken down by (i) counties and (ii) projects. [45670]

Mrs. Roche: Figures showing funding by counties and projects are not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

The table gives allocations for each of the United Kingdom's Objective 1 and 5b regions.

Special Advisers

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many special advisers, political advisers and other political appointees are working in her Department; at what annual cost to the public purse including recruitment costs, salaries, pensions and National Insurance contributions; and what was the position in the last full year of the last Government. [43316]

Mrs. Beckett: For details of the numbers of Special Advisers and the annual cost of employing them, I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister to the hon. Member for Woodspring (Dr. Fox) on 11 June 1998, Official Report, column 664.

National Insurance contributions are excluded from this figure but are paid under the same rules and at the same time as for other civil servants. Information on the paybill costs for Special advisers within individual departments is not provided in order to protect the privacy of the individuals concerned.

Information on the cost of employing Special Advisers in previous years was given by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster to the hon. Member for Gordon (Mr. Bruce) on 25 November 1997, Official Report, columns 472–73.

Mid Kent Holdings

Mr. Green: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when she expects to receive undertakings from General Utilities plc about its material influence over Mid Kent Holdings plc. [46552]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: On 15 May I announced my decision to accept undertakings offered by General Utilities PLC and SAUR Water Services plc following the adverse report by the Monopolies and Mergers Commission (MMC) on their proposed bid for Mid Kent Holdings plc, published in 1997.

Under the terms of the undertakings both companies have agreed not to be party, or give effect, to any joint arrangements in respect of Mid Kent which would give rise to a compulsory reference to the MMC unless the consent of the Secretary of State has been obtained.

Postal Services

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement on the future of the Post Office, with particular reference to the ownership of the Royal Mail. [46471]

Mr. Ian McCartney: As announced by my right hon. Friend, the President of the Board of Trade on 6 April 1998, Official Report, column 63, the Government are committed to the Post Office (including Royal Mail) remaining in the public sector and continuing to provide a universal postal service under a uniform tariff structure, with a nationwide network of post offices. Against that background, the Government are reviewing the Post Office's organisation, structure and financing with a view to ensuring that the Post Office can be given greater commercial freedom to enable it to compete effectively in the UK and overseas. We plan to present our proposals in the Autumn.

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement on the progress made in the consideration of liberalisation of postal services within the European Union; when a new directive is expected; and if it will be subject to unanimity or majority vote. [46466]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The Postal Services Directive (97/67/EC) was adopted on 15 December 1997, for Member States to implement by February 1999. The Directive sets a maximum monopoly area for the provider of the universal service and a programme for further liberalisation. The Commission must table a proposal before the end of 1998 and the European Parliament and the Council must decide by 1 January 2000 on the further liberalisation to take effect from 1 January 2003. We would expect the basis of any Directive to be Article 100a which is subject to qualified majority voting.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Private Members' Time

35. Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the President of the Council what representations she has received on increasing the time available for private Members' (a) debates and (b) legislation. [45257]

Mrs. Ann Taylor: I have received a number of representation asking for more time on both private Members' debates and legislation.

36. Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the President of the Council if she will increase the number of days provided for the consideration of private Members' Bills. [45258]

Mrs. Ann Taylor: I have no plans to do so in the current session. The procedure for private Members' bills will be considered by the Modernisation Committee.

Members' Allowances (Office Technology)

37. Mr. Sheerman: To ask the President of the Council if she will make a statement on the adequacy of Members' allowances in respect of office technology. [45259]

Mrs. Ann Taylor: In its 1996 Report, the Senior Salaries Review Body concluded that the element of the Office Costs Allowance intended for the provision of office equipment was set at an appropriate level. The Report also welcomed the trend towards greater central provision of office equipment. The SSRB is working with the House authorities to consider what further equipment might be provided centrally for MPs' Westminster offices.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Defence Exhibitions

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list those officials from his Department who attended (a) the Berlin Air Show in May, (b) the Eurosatory arms fair in Paris in June and (c) the COPEX exhibition in Jordan in April, indicating the costs of their attendance and breaking down the other costs incurred by his Department in connection with these events. [44508]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The following FCO officials attended:

(a) The Berlin Air Show

Minister at the British Embassy, Bonn

First Secretary (Commercial), British Embassy Office, Berlin

Counsellor (Defence Supply), Bonn—MOD Secondee

Commercial Officer, British Embassy Office, Berlin

(b) The Eurosatory Arms Fair in Paris

HM Ambassador, Paris

First Secretary (Procurement)—MOD Secondee

Counsellor (Defence Supply), Bonn—MOD Secondee

Commercial Officer

(c) The COPEX Exhibition in Jordan

HM Ambassador, Amman

Commercial Secretary, DTI Secondee.

Officials visited the events for different lengths of time and to calculate the cost of their attendance and other costs incurred would involve disproportionate cost. The costs involved were minimal. The Minister at the British Embassy, Bonn, was a guest of the German Foreign Ministry.

EU Funds

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for South-West Devon (Mr. Streeter) of 7 April 1998, Official Report, column 203, on the European Communities Budget, if he will estimate the United Kingdom share of the funding for the European Women's lobby for 1997; and if he will make a statement on his Department's policy towards the funding by the Commission of lobby groups. [45314]

Mr. Doug Henderson: The UK contributes to the EU budget as a whole, rather than to individual budget lines. Our share of total contributions to the budget in 1997 was 11.61% (after the abatement). The Government recognise that the Commission uses a proportion of its administrative budget to fund certain NGOs involved in the implementation of Community policies. Our policy on all EU spending is that it should be subject to the same principles of rigour and cost-effectiveness as we apply to the UK budget.

Foreign Policy Centre

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the role of the Foreign Policy Centre in developing the (a) ethical foreign policy and (b) European Union policy, of Her Majesty's Government. [46067]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The Foreign Policy Centre is an independent policy institute. It is established practice for Foreign Office Officials and Ministers to have contact with policy institutes and NGOs and to consider their views when developing policy. The Foreign Office welcomes ideas from outside organisations on all areas of its work, including the role of human rights in foreign policy and European Union policy.

Special Advisers

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish the names of the special advisers attached to his Department; and if he will indicate whether each of them has been positively vetted. [46063]

Mr. Robin Cook [holding answer 16 June 1998]: My Special Advisers are Mr. David Clark and Mr. Andrew Hood. Both have been security cleared to the level of "developed vetting". This term replaced the term "positive vetting" in 1994.

British Prisoners (Overseas Gaols)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the number of (a) male and (b) female United Kingdom nationals imprisoned in each country overseas for which his Department collates records; and how many are at present under the death sentence. [46517]

Mr. Fatchett: Our records show that there are currently 2,366 British nationals in prison overseas. Of these, 4 detainees are under sentence of death.

The breakdown of those detained is as follows:

Dependent Territories

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the dependent territories which (a) carry out the death penalty and (b) allow corporal punishment. [46518]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The information is as follows:

(a) Bermuda is the only Overseas Territory which has retained the death penalty for murder, though it has not been carried out there since 1977.

(b) Three Overseas Territories still have provision for judicial corporal punishment on their statute books: Anguilla, the Cayman Islands, and the British Virgin Islands. Judicial Corporal Punishment has actually been used in recent years only in the British Virgin Islands (the last occasion was in 1996).

Cambodia

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answers to the hon. and learned Member for North-East Fife (Mr. Campbell) of 20 March 1998, Official Report, columns 769–70, what reports from what sources he will take into account when determining the United Kingdom response to future UN resolutions on Cambodia. [46716]

Mr. Fatchett: We participate in drafting UN resolutions to press the Cambodian government to improve their human rights record. We gather our information from our Ambassador in Phnom Penh, from our other diplomatic missions, and from respected international organisations and NGOs.

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he proposes to take to ensure an agreed timetable is established for the start of work by United Nations experts into human rights abuses in Cambodia; and if he will make a statement. [46652]

Mr. Fatchett: I pressed Hun Sen last month on the need for a thorough investigation into human rights abuses, following the recent visit to Cambodia by UN experts. The Cambodian Government have since appointed a committee to lead the inquiries. We will continue to press for those responsible for abuses to be brought to justice.

St. Helena

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 15 June 1998, Official Report, column 17, on the Governor of St. Helena and the Government's budget proposals, if he will list the members of the Executive Council who were present at the meeting advising him on the issue, indicating in each case the basis for their membership of the Council. [46548]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: Executive Councillors present at the meeting with the Governor on 30 March, and the basis for their membership of the Council (as provided by the Schedule to the St. Helena Constitution Order 1988) were:

Hon. Michael Clancy, Chief Secretary

Hon. Matthew Young, Financial Secretary

Hon. Kurt De Freitas, Attorney General

Hon. Eric George, Chairman—Public Health Committee

Hon. Stedson George, Chairman—Public Works and Services Committee

Hon. Terrence Richards, Chairman—Agricultural and Natural Resources Committee

Hon. Robert Robertson, Chairman—Education Committee.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Mediation Network

Mr. Maginnis: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, pursuant to her answer of 23 March 1998, Official Report, column 27, if she will define the involvement of Mediation Network in matters pertaining to policing in Northern Ireland; and if she will publish the names, qualifications and affiliations, including the current and former political allegiances, of those who constitute the board of that organisation. [37821]

Mr. Ingram: The Mediation Network has worked with the Royal Ulster Constabulary Training Branch on the RUC's Community awareness programme, and is currently working with the RUC and others to develop ideas for the evolution of policing and community relations in Northern Ireland.

The Mediation Network is an independent voluntary association with charitable status formed to develop alternative, non-violent approaches to conflicts and disputes in Northern Ireland. A list of those on the Executive Committee and much of the other information sought by the hon. Member is to be found in the Annual Reports published by the Mediation Network, a copy of the most recent of which—that for 1996–97—has been placed in the Library.

I have no knowledge of the current or former political allegiances of any members of Mediation Network.

Parades Commission

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will instruct the Parades Commission, in reaching its decisions, to publish its decisions relating to each individual criterion contained in the legislation and to indicate what weighting is given to each criterion in each decision. [46997]

Mr. Ingram: The Parades Commission is an independent body and as such it would not be appropriate for the Secretary of State to instruct it in the way suggested. It is entirely a matter for the Parades Commission to decide the format in which it should publish its decisions under the Public Processions (Northern Ireland) Act 1998. In any case, the determinations published by the Parades Commission to date have, in the Government's view, set out very comprehensively the way in which the Commission has approached the particular parade in question and, in particular, have in each case clearly stated how the Commission has addressed each of the statutory factors which it is required to take into account.

Police Firearms (US Purchases)

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will list the numbers of firearms, indicating type, make and model, purchased by the Police Authority for Northern Ireland from United States of America sources in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available. [46088]

Mr. Ingram: During the last 10 years no firearms have been purchased by the Police Authority for Northern Ireland from United States of America sources.

Scheduled Offences

Mr. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people have been charged with scheduled offences in Northern Ireland since 31 August 1994 in respect of (a) offences committed prior to 31 August 1994 and (b) offences committed since 31 August 1994. [46111]

Mr. Ingram: The table shows the number of persons charged with terrorist/serious Public Order type offences during the years 1991–1997. The statistical information system in place does not collate the linking of charges with the date of the offence. To obtain this information in the form requested would incur disproportionate cost.

Persons charged with terrorist/serious public order offences 1991–1997

Year	Number
1991	404
1992	418
1993	372
1994 to 31 August	291
1994 from 1 September	58
1995	440
1996	595
1997	405

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Agricultural Land

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what estimate she has made of the loss of agricultural land since 1980. [45895]

Mr. Foulkes: The Department has made no such estimate.

We are advised that the Food and Agriculture Organisation—FAO—does not gather such data.

The United Nations Environment Programme—UNEP—has estimated that 70 per cent. of the world's drylands are suffering some degree of desertification with an estimated 900 million people worldwide at risk from problems of degradation. The 1997 United Nations Development Programme—UNDP—Human Development Report estimated that half of the world's poorest live in marginal lands.

My Department supports projects bilaterally and multilaterally to combat land degradation, desertification and drought and the implementation of the Convention to Combat Desertification.

WALES

Food Poisoning

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many cases of food poisoning were registered in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [45885]

Mr. Win Griffiths: The information is given in the table.

Reported cases of food poisoning in Wales[1]

Year	Number
1993	5,078
1994	6,163
1995	6,540
1996	5,662
1997	6,161

Cycling

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what measures he proposes to encourage (a) cycling and (b) greater use of public transport in North East Wales. [45890]

Mr. Hain: The government's proposals on cycling and the use of public transport will be dealt with in the Integrated Transport Policy White Paper which will be published shortly. At around the same time, a Welsh Transport Policy Statement will be published drawing out those issues of particular importance to Wales.

Wrexham and Deeside have recently benefited from Transport Grant funding for packages which include measures to promote cycling and to encourage greater use of public transport.

Alltami Bypass

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received on the proposed Alltami (Mold-Ewloe) Bypass; and if he will make a statement. [46290]

Mr. Hain: A number of organisations and individuals submitted representations about the A494 Trunk Road in general and the proposed Alltami Bypass (which forms part of the A494 Mold to Ewloe Improvement) in particular during the recent consultation exercise on the review of the Welsh trunk road programme. The results of the review will be published later this year.

Road Safety (Flintshire)

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on road safety in Flintshire. [46291]

Mr. Hain: The latest figures for road accident casualties in Flintshire are as follows:

	1996	1997[1]	Percentage change
Killed and serious	110	94	−15
Slight	867	862	−1
Total	977	956	−2

[1] Provisional

The Government are in the process of consulting on a new national road safety strategy. When this has been settled, specific targets for Wales (post 2000) can be considered.

A55

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will ensure that his officials undertake a full evaluation of residents' alternative proposals with regard to the proposed closure of the A55 gaps at Coed y Cra, Halkyn, Flintshire prior to any final decision. [46651]

Mr. Hain: Yes, I can assure the hon. Gentleman that Welsh Office officials will undertake a full evaluation of residents' alternative proposals with regard to the proposed closure of the A55 gaps at Coed y Cra, Halkyn, Flintshire, prior to any final decision.

Child Care Strategy

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he will launch the consultation on the national child care strategy in Wales. [47191]

Mr. Win Griffiths: I am today launching our Green Paper, The National Childcare Strategy in Wales. The principles of the National Childcare Strategy covers the whole of the UK. Our Green Paper sets out the Government's aim to ensure good quality, affordable childcare for children aged 0 to 14 in every neighbourhood, including both formal childcare and support for informal arrangements. It describes how we propose to make that aim a reality for Wales.

The Green Paper has today been laid before Parliament and copies are available in the Library and the Vote Office.

HEALTH

Theresa Braybrooke-Tucker

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on what date and where the inquest into the death of Theresa Braybrooke-Tucker will be held. [45358]

Mr. Boateng: I understand that the inquest into the death of Theresa Braybrooke-Tucker was opened and adjourned on 3 March 1998 and was held at the Town Hall, Waterloo, Bootle. We do not know when it will be reopened.

Smoking

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the expenditure on anti-tobacco advertising in each of the past 18 years; and what is his estimate of the total (a) numbers and (b) percentages of smokers in each of those years among (i) adults and (ii) children. [36255]

Ms Jowell [holding answer 26 March 1998]: Available information on expenditure by the Health Education Authority directly on anti-smoking advertising, on behalf of the Department, in each of the past 18 years is:

1980	270,000
1981	1,202,000
1982	2,052,000
1983	1,239,000
1984	1,931,000
1985	995,000
1986	747,000
1987	1,868,000
1988	480,000
1989	661,000
1990	1,459,000
1991	757,000
1992	1,122,000
1993	1,741,000
1994	3,401,000
1995	3,430,000
1996	2,783,000
1997	2,756,000

The information available on the number and percentage of smokers is given in the table:

England

Year	Prevalence of smoking among adults aged 16 and over		Prevalence of regular smoking among children aged 11–15
	Percentage	Number (000)	Percentage	Number (000)
1980	39	14,000	—	—
1982	35	12,700	11	400
1984	33	12,400	13	450
1986	32	12,200	10	320
1988	31	11,800	8	230
1990	29	11,300	10	280
1992	28	10,700	10	290
1993	—	—	10	290
1994	26	10,200	12	360
1996	28	10,800	13	390

Notes:

1. In this analysis, adult prevalence is based on those aged 16 years and over; child prevalence is based on young people aged 11–15 years

2. The percentage and number of children who are regular smokers are given (regular smokers are classified as those who smoke at least one cigarette a week)

3. Numbers of adult smokers are rounded to the nearest 100,000. Numbers of children aged 11–15 smoking regularly are rounded to the nearest 10,000

Sources:

Adult prevalence is taken from the General Household Surveys, 1976–1996, conducted by the Office for National Statistics (ONS); questions on smoking have been included biennially. Child prevalence is taken from the Smoking Among Secondary School Children Surveys, 1982–1996, conducted by the ONS on behalf of the Department of Health, these surveys have been biennial, except for the additional survey in 1993. Numbers of smokers have been obtained by combining prevalence with population estimates, supplied by ONS

Ambulance Service

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many 999 calls were made to the Ambulance Service in the last year for which figures are available. [45698]

Mr. Boateng: 3.33 million emergency calls were made in England in 1996–97. Full details are contained in "Statistical Bulletin Ambulance Services, England: 1996–97", copies of which are available in the Library.

Child Mental Health Services

Mrs. Golding: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 8 May 1998, Official Report, columns 536–37, concerning child mental health services, what reviews of child and adolescent mental health services have been undertaken; and if his Department has obtained copies of these and related local action plans. [46130]

Mr. Boateng: Reviews have been completed in the South and West, Anglia and Oxford and North West regions of the National Health Service Executive and their reports have been discussed in meetings of the Department's implementation group on child and adolescent mental health services (representing all NHS and social care regions). Reviews in the remaining five regions are being undertaken and are at various stages of progress. The Department does not expect to receive copies of local action plans stemming from the reviews which are for consideration at regional level.

Mrs. Golding: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 8 May 1998, Official Report, columns 536–37, concerning child mental health services, to what extent the non-statutory sector is involved in the commissioning and provision of comprehensive mental health services for children and adolescents. [46129]

Mr. Boateng: We are aware that the independent sector makes a significant and valuable contribution to the provision of child and adolescent mental health services. A 1994 National Review of Services for the Mental Health of Children and Young People in England (Kurtz, Thornes and Wolkind), reported in relation to the non-statutory sector that 15 per cent. of the child and adolescent psychiatry services included in the survey had made use of inpatient services at twelve private hospitals, mainly for treatment of eating disorders such as anorexia nervosa.

The same review reported that in planning, including health needs assessment, 42 per cent. of National Health Service purchasing authorities said that they had included voluntary organisations in their discussions. Several had involved particular organisations in a substantial way.

The Department currently provides grant aid worth some £472,000 per annum to 11 national voluntary bodies in the field of child and adolescent mental health, mainly to support projects having significance for the development of national services.

Skin Cancer

Mr. Kemp: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps his Department is taking to increase public awareness of the dangers of skin cancer. [45800]

Mr. Boateng: Skin cancer is largely preventable and we are working closely with a wide range of public bodies, including the Health Education Authority, the Health and Safety Executive, the National Radiological Protection Board and the Meteorological Office to raise awareness of the sun's harmful effects. Other agencies such as the fashion and leisure industries are also involved in addressing issues of sun awareness, including making clothing that protects from the sun more easily available through high street retailers. Events which took place during Sun Awareness Week, from 1–7 June 1998, helped to raise the profile of these issues more widely in the media.

Mr. Kemp: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people (a) were treated for and (b) died of skin cancer in 1997–98. [45801]

Mr. Boateng: The information for in-patient treatment (including "day cases") for the latest financial year available, 1995–96, in England, is shown in Table 1 and is based on finished consultant episodes of treatment (FCEs), which represent the number of episodes of care under individual consultants. The same person may be counted more than once if they have more than one episode of care. Some skin cancers are excised by a general practitioner or in hospital outpatients and will not be counted.

The information for the number of people who died of skin cancer, for the latest calendar year available, 1996, in England is shown in Table 2.

Table 1:
1995–96 financial year—latest available figures for England

ICD-10 codes	Primary diagnosis	FCEs

NHS (Thefts)

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his estimate of losses in the NHS due to internal theft for each of the last 10 years. [45833]

Mr. Boateng: The most recent information about losses due to theft, arson, sabotage, neglect of duty or gross carelessness is in the table. Losses due to internal theft are not separately identifiable. Comparable information is not available for earlier years.

Losses of cash and equipment in the National Health service (England)—1992–93 to 1996–97

Social Services White Paper

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he expects to publish the Social Services White Paper before the summer adjournment. [46424]

Mr. Boateng: We expect to publish the Social Services White paper in the summer. We do not yet know whether it will be possible to publish it before the summer adjournment.

Community Health Councils

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when his departmental officials last met representatives of the Association of Community Health Councils; and what matters were discussed. [46523]

Mr. Milburn: Departmental officials last met with representatives of the Association of Community Health Councils for England and Wales (ACHCEW) on 18 February 1998 and discussed consultation processes. On a more regular basis, there is an ongoing arrangement for the National Health Service Executive Community Health Council Policy and Liaison Group to meet the ACHCEW and the Society of Community Health Council staff twice yearly. All items discussed at these meetings are raised by the ACHCEW and the Society on a confidential basis and are not for public disclosure. The next meeting is scheduled for 23 June 1998.

Chiropody and Podiatric Services

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the statistics that are held centrally concerning chiropody and podiatric services. [46310]

Mr. Boateng: The Department collects three categories of statistics.

Information is collected from National Health Service trusts about patient contacts with their chiropody services on Department of Health annual return KT23. Information is published each year and the most recent summary is "Chiropody services, summary information for 1996–97, England".

The Department collects annual statistics about the number of chiropody staff employed by the hospital and community health services (HCHS) and in the general medical services. Information about the age, sex and ethnic origin of chiropody staff employed by the HCHS is also collected. Information is published annually, the latest is included in the Department's Statistical Bulletins: "NHS Hospital and Community Health Services non-medical staff in England 1987–1997" and "Statistics for General Medical Practitioners in England: 1987–1997" and reference volume "NHS Hospital and Community Health Services non-medical workforce census: England 1996, detailed results".

National Health Service trusts provide figures for total expenditure on community chiropody services in the annual financial returns. Analysis of these data by individual trusts in England for the years 1994–95 to 1996–97 is available, as is the other information detailed, in the Library.

Lee Bosley

Mr. Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his oral statement of 16 June 1998, Official Report, columns 149–50, if the rescheduling of the operation on Lee Bosley to 17 June resulted in an operation planned for another person on that day being cancelled or postponed. [46782]

Mr. Milburn: No operation was cancelled or postponed as a direct result of Lee Bosley's operation at St. Thomas' Hospital on 17 June 1998.

Complaints Procedures

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to review the guidance given to NHS trusts on communicating the results of an independent professional review to a complainant. [46536]

Mr. Milburn: Independent professional review was the third stage of the hospital clinical complaints procedure which was in place prior to April 1996. From 1 April 1996 new National Health Service complaints procedures were introduced which do not feature the same process of independent professional review.

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will instruct NHS trusts, following an independent professional review, to communicate all of the assessors' findings to the complainant. [46537]

Mr. Milburn: Independent professional review was the final stage of the hospital clinical complaints procedures which were replaced in April 1996. Assessors' reports were prepared in confidence for the regional director of public health, who subsequently advised the National Health Service hospital trust or health authority on any comment which would be appropriate on the clinical aspects of its reply to the complainant. This system has now been replaced.

Under the new procedures, clinical assessors are appointed to independent review panels to advise the panel on those aspects of the complaint involving clinical judgment. Assessors' reports are attached to the final panel report and distribution is the responsibility of the panel chairman within guidelines. The chairman has the right to withhold any part of the panel's report, and any or all of the assessors' reports to ensure confidentiality of clinical information. The procedures will be subject to a formal evaluation beginning this autumn.

Suicide Prevention

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance he has given to NHS trusts on the surveillance policies they should operate for patients deemed to be a suicide risk. [46538]

Mr. Boateng: The Department has not given specific guidance to trusts on this issue but has published advice in the following documents: 'The Prevention of Suicide' and the Health Advisory Service manual 'Suicide Prevention—The Challenge Confronted', commissioned by the Department.

Birth Weights

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what statistics his Department holds on the causes of low birth weight. [46990]

Mr. Boateng: There are a number of factors that may be associated with low birth weight. These include prematurity, foetal abnormality, multiple pregnancy, maternal health and nutritional status, maternal smoking or alcohol/drug misuse, geographical and social class associations. Additionally some ethnic groups have smaller babies irrespective of any other factors.

The Department's statistical bulletin "NHS Maternity Statistics, England: 1989–90 to 1994–95", has statistics on birth weight in relation to gestational age.

The Office for National Statistics publication "Mortality statistics—Childhood, infant and perinatal (1995 Series DH3/28)", has statistics on birth weight in relation to mother's country of birth, parity, marital status and father's social class.

The Office for National Statistics publication "Infant and Perinatal Mortality 1997 (Monitor 98/1)", has statistics on birth weight by health authority.

Copies of these publications are in the Library.

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research he has commissioned into the causes of low birth weight. [46989]

Mr. Boateng: The National Health Service Executive South Thames Regional Office is funding a project examining the relationship between maternal chronic periodontal disease and birth weight.

The main agency through which the Government support bio-medical and clinical research is the Medical Research Council (MRC) which is the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade. The MRC has a portfolio of research into the causes of low birth weight.

We are considering what further research into low birth weight may be required.

TREASURY

Millennium Compliance

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what research has been undertaken to determine the consequences of the need for those computer systems that are required to be euro compliant also to be millennium compliant; and if he will make a statement on the outcome. [43940]

Mrs. Liddell: Any systems that are date sensitive are required to be millennium compliant regardless of whether or not adaptations might be required for that system to deal with the introduction of the euro. The Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster carries out quarterly reviews across Government on the state of preparedness for the century date change. Copies of the returns from departments have been placed in the Library.

Mr. Evans: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what research the Government have carried out on the adequacy of the resources available within Government to tackle the millennium bug at the same time as reprogramming computers to deal with the introduction of the euro. [45454]

Mrs. Liddell: The United Kingdom will not be joining the single currency on 1 January 1999. The Millennium and the euro therefore have very different implications with regard to resources and timing. The Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster carries out quarterly reviews across Government on the state of preparedness for the century date change. Copies of the returns from departments have been placed in the Library.

Charity Taxation Review

Mr. Reed: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he expects to make an announcement about the Charity Taxation Review; and if he will make a statement. [44969]

Dawn Primarolo: We expect to publish a consultation document shortly.

Small Businesses (VAT Arrears)

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his policy towards small businesses which are in arrears with VAT; and on what grounds he is prepared to accept a schedule of repayments. [45406]

Dawn Primarolo: Whenever businesses experience genuine short-term difficulties with their VAT, it is normal practice for Customs to encourage them to contact their local office with a view to agreeing settlements. Customs review each time-to-pay proposal on its merits but give careful consideration to any reasonable proposal for settlement. However, agreement to payment of a debt by instalments cannot be regarded in any way as a normal business expectation: Customs expect a business to explore alternative sources of finance first and to put forward realistic proposals for meeting their legal requirements.

Diesel Duties

Ms Lawrence: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received from oil companies concerning duties on ultra-low sulphur diesel since his Budget on 17 March. [45299]

Dawn Primarolo: Representations were received from three oil companies and one oil industry association concerning the changes to the ultra-low sulphur diesel (ULSD) definition in the Finance Bill. These representations concerned both the new definition of ULSD and the new restrictions on mixing of ULSD with conventional diesel after the duty point.

The Government changed the definition of ULSD because the previous sole criteria of 50 ppm sulphur content did not produce sufficient emissions benefits to justify the duty incentive. The new definition produces more significant emissions benefits, mainly of particulates and nitrogen oxide, and the duty incentive of 2 pence per litre recognises that the new specification is more difficult to produce. The duty incentive is to increase to 3 pence per litre in the next Budget.

The new mixing restrictions were introduced to prevent ULSD, which has had the benefit of the duty incentive, being mixed with conventional diesel after the duty point and then being sold as conventional diesel. These mixtures do not generate much by way of emissions gains in return for the duty incentive and they do not encourage motorists to switch to the cleaner fuel. Similar provisions already existed to prevent mixing of different qualities of petrol.

Working Families Tax Credit

Ms Stuart: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what plans are in place to enable the self-employed to claim working families tax credit; [46265]

(2) what arrangements have been made to enable the Inland Revenue to deal with the anticipated increased caseload in the wake of the introduction of working families tax credit. [46264]

Dawn Primarolo: The Inland Revenue is leading a joint project team with Benefits Agency which is developing the detailed administrative arrangements for the WFTC. It is envisaged that the self employed will claim the WFTC in broadly the same way that they claim Family Credit currently.

Mr. Maude: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of take-up rates for (a) the working families tax credit and (b) the childcare tax credit. [46460]

Dawn Primarolo: By 2001, about 1½ million working families will be receiving the Working Families Tax Credit, around 400,000 more than would have received Family Credit. The Government believe that, as a tax credit rather than a benefit, the WFTC will have a higher take-up rate than Family Credit.

Income Tax

Mr. Amess: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proportion of income is paid in income tax and national insurance, net of child benefit and family credit, in the current tax year by (a) a single person with no children, (b) a sole earner in a married two parent, two child family, in each case on earnings of (i) half of average earnings, (ii) three quarters of average earnings, (iii) average earnings and (iv) twice average earnings. [46007]

Dawn Primarolo: The data requested are given in the table.

Percentage of income paid in income tax and employee national insurance less child benefit and family credit at multiples of median full-time earnings of £337 per week (1998–99)

	Single person	Married, sole earner 2 children
50%	17.4	–21.1
75%	22.7	20.5
100%	25.2	23.6
200%	28.1	27.3

Notes:

1. Income tax payments are calculated on the basis that the households receive no tax reliefs other than the standard allowances and only have income from employment. National insurance contributions are assumed to be Class 1 at the contracted-in rate
2. A family with 2 children is assumed to have both children aged under 11

Heavily Indebted Poor Countries

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate for each heavily indebted poor country of debt write off (a) in 1997–98 and (b) expected in the current year from (i) public and (ii) private sources; and if he will publish all the conditions attached to agreements to which the Government are party. [45382]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 15 June 1998]: (a) The table shows the value (in millions of pounds) of the principal of export credit loans to Heavily Indebted Poor Countries (HIPCs) which has been written off by the UK government in 1997–98. The Government do not have figures for the debt write off granted by other governments.

£ million

HIPC	Debt relief granted by UK in 1997–8
Ethiopia	2.32
Guyana	72.25
Mozambique	0.79
Niger	0.13
Tanzania	0.76
Togo	0.49
Zambia	0.28
Total	77.02

(b) (i) The value of debt relief to be granted to HIPCs in the current year depends on which countries successfully agree IMF programmes and the level of debt relief that is required to finance those programmes. It is likely that debt relief will be granted to at least Rwanda, Guinea-Bissau, Mali and Bolivia in the current year.

(ii) The Government cannot estimate the debt relief likely to be granted to HIPCs by private sources. However, official creditors grant debt relief at the Paris Club on the assumption that private creditors will provide at least equivalent terms of debt relief.

Public Records

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to amend the Public Records Act 1958 to allow free public access to the records of births, deaths and marriages. [46693]

Mrs. Liddell: None.

Economic and Monetary Union

Mr. Denzil Davies: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate over the latest available period of the broad money growth (a) on average in the eleven countries which will join EMU and (b) in the United Kingdom. [46647]

Mrs. Liddell: Most recent data show that UK M4 grew by 9.1 per cent. in the year to May. The European Central Bank will be producing statistics for euro area monetary aggregates in due course.

Budgets (Environmental Assessments)

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to publish, in future Budgets, accounts including environmental factors; and if he will make a statement. [46398]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 18 June 1998]: I refer to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Lewes (Mr. Baker) on 22 April 1998, Official Report, column 624.

Financial Supervision

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the regulatory framework for the supervision of financial institutions in each of the Crown dependencies. [46493]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: I have been asked to reply.

A review of the financial legislation and regulatory systems in the Channel Islands and the Isle of Man is currently taking place. The review is being conducted by Mr. Andrew Edwards, formerly of Her Majesty's Treasury. His report is expected later this year.

Indonesia

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer to the right hon. Member for Hitchin and Harpenden (Mr. Lilley) on 9 June 1998, Official Report, columns 494–95, on the value of aid loans written off since 1979, if he will list the loans written off for Indonesia, in each case stating (a) the nature of the project, (b) the date on which the loan was written off and (c) the reason for the write-off. [46128]

Clare Short: I have been asked to reply. The balances of all existing Indonesian loans were written off on 11 July 1979, and were waived in accordance with the statement on Retrospective Terms Adjustment (RTA) made in the House of Commons on 31 July 1978, Official Report, column 25. Details of the individual loans are not available without incurring disproportionate costs.

SCOTLAND

Further and Higher Education

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what factors underlay the requirements that (a) further education institutions should make efficiency savings of five per cent. and (b) higher education institutions should make efficiency savings of one per cent. [46138]

Mr. Wilson: Targets for efficiency savings have not been set centrally for the further education institutions separately or for the sector as a whole.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will conduct an investigation of the successes and failures of the Private Finance Initiative in further education; and what plans he has for the capital funding of further education over the next three years. [46137]

Mr. Wilson: A national review of the Private Finance Initiative was conducted a year ago and was followed by the introduction of a range of improvements in its operation. The progress of the Private Finance Initiative continues to be kept under general review, but my right hon. Friend has no plans at this stage to initiate another investigation, either of the Private Finance Initiative per se or focused specifically on Further Education, where experience of the Private Finance Initiative so far is limited.

Capital funding of Further Education in future years is being considered as part of the Comprehensive Spending Review.

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what net change the introduction of fees will make in the funding of Scottish higher and further education institutions in total and individually in (a) 1998–99, (b) 1999–2000, (c) 2000–1, and (d) 2001–2. [46244]

Mr. Wilson: Overall funding for higher education institutions, including tuition fees and grant allocations from the Scottish Higher Education Funding Council, is the same in 1998–99 as it was in 1997–98. Tuition fees received by higher and further education institutions in 1998–99 are not directly comparable with previous years because of the abolition of banded fees for full-time education undergraduate courses. The level of funding allocated to higher education institutions in 1998–99, individually and in total, is contained in the Scottish Higher Education Funding Council's grant letters, copies of which I have placed in the House of Commons Library. The estimated net change in respect of further education colleges for 1998–99 is a £5 million increase in available funds, falling to individual colleges according to their share of full-time higher education courses.

Funding for higher and further education institutions for years 1999–2000 and beyond has not yet been determined and is a matter for the Comprehensive Spending Review.

Primary Schools

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many and what percentage of primary school children were in classes of 31 or more in 1997 (a) in each authority and (b) in Scotland as a whole. [45971]

Mr. Wilson: The information requested is as follows:

Autistic Children

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what arrangements are in place to assist autistic children in Scotland; and what further proposals he has for autistic children. [46242]

Mr. Wilson: Local authorities have a statutory duty to safeguard and promote the welfare of children in need by providing a range and level of services appropriate to the children's needs. They are also under a statutory duty to assess the needs of individual children with a disability when requested to do so by a child's parent and any services provided should be designed to give such children the opportunity to lead lives which are as normal as possible.

Local authorities also have a statutory duty to secure the adequate and efficient provision of education for the children in their respective areas. The means by which any particular authority choose to provide for their area and the nature of educational provision deemed suitable for any particular child, including a child with autism, is a matter for them to decide in the first instance.

Teacher Training

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many people applied for B.Ed. teacher training courses in Scotland in each year from 1993 to 1997, broken down by country of origin of application. [45970]

Mr. Wilson: Information on domicile of applicants to BEd teacher training courses is not held centrally. The information which is available is given in the table:

Applications to BEd teacher education courses in Scotland, 1993–1997 by sector of teaching

Year	Primary	Secondary	Total
1993–94	3,234	1,035	4,269

[1] From 1995–96, BEd applications come through UCAS. Under these new arrangements, all applications are counted in the figures, rather than just an applicants first choice

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many people applied for post-graduate teacher training in Scotland in each year from 1993 to 1997 broken down (a) by sector of application, primary and secondary, and (b) by country of origin of application. [45969]

Mr. Wilson: Information on domicile of applicants to postgraduate teacher training is not held centrally. Information on applicants by sector of application is given in the table:

Applications to postgraduate teacher education courses in Scotland, 1993–1997 by sector of teaching

Year	Primary	Secondary	Total

Cardonald College

Mr. Gorrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what percentage increase or decrease the allocation of grants to Cardonald College for the current financial year represents (a) in cash terms and (b) in real terms allowing for inflation and pay awards. [46243]

Mr. Wilson: Total Government grant-in-aid to Cardonald College in 1998–99 amounts to £6,787,000, compared with £6,505,300 in 1997–98. This represents an increase of 4.33 per cent. in cash terms or 1.39 per cent. in real terms, allowing for inflation.

Decisions on pay awards to college staff are a matter for the college's Board of Management.

Voluntary Organisations

Mr. Moore: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list by district council the percentage of each district council budget in Scotland allocated to voluntary organisations for each financial year since 1992–93. [46228]

Mr. Macdonald [holding answer 18 June 1998]: The table shows net grants and payments to voluntary bodies, as reported by each district council expressed as a percentage of total net expenditure.

SOCIAL SECURITY

State Pension

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the cost of the administration of contribution records in order to determine basic state pension entitlement in the last year for which figures are available. [46962]

Mr. Denham: There are 47 million active National Insurance Accounts that are maintained to enable determination of future benefit entitlement, including the State Retirement Pension. It is not possible to breakdown the overall cost of records maintenance in relation to a specific benefit.

The overall cost of record maintenance for 1997/98 was £48,659,344 (a unit cost of £1.04).

Mr. Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what discussions she has had since 1 May 1997 regarding means-testing of the basic state pension. [46004]

Mr. Denham: All discussions on the basic State pension have taken as their starting point our manifesto commitment to maintain the basic State pension as the foundation of pension provision and to uprate it at least in line with prices. We will honour that commitment.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is (a) the total cost to the Exchequer and (b) the cost per recipient of administering housing benefit. [46953]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The amount of Central Government subsidy paid to local authorities for administering Housing benefit in 1996/97 was £185 million. Administration costs quoted by local authorities in the same year were £312 million, giving an average weekly cost per beneficiary of £1.25. Related Department of Social Security administration costs are not available separately since they form part of the cost of administering Income Support.

Mr. Roy: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will publish for each Scottish local authority for each of the last two years, the number of housing benefit overpayments and the number and percentage of those which were fraudulent errors. [45267]

Mr. Field: Information for 1996/97, the first year of Scottish local government reorganisation, is set out in the table. Information for 1997/98 is not yet available.

Vaccine Damage (Compensation)

Dr. Tony Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many vaccine-damaged children have received a payment of £10,000 in compensation. [45131]

Mr. Denham: 795 payments of £10,000 have been made since the scheme began. The amount increased to £20,000 for new claims on or after 16 August 1985, and 51 payments have been made at this rate. The current rate of £30,000 was introduced for new claims made on or after 15 April 1991, and so far 44 payments have been made at this rate. On 19 May 1998 it was announced that as soon as the necessary Parliamentary approval has been obtained the intention is to increase new awards to £40,000.

The payment is not compensation but is designed to ease the present and future burdens of those suffering from vaccine damage, and their families.

Special Advisers

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many special advisers, political advisers and other political appointees are working in her Department; at what annual cost to the public purse including recruitment costs, salaries, pensions and National Insurance contributions; and what was the position in the last full year of the last Government. [43317]

Mr. Field: For details of the numbers of Special Advisers and the annual cost of employing them, I refer the hon. Member to the Written Answer my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister gave to the hon. Member for Woodspring (Dr. Fox) on 11 June 1998, Official Report, column 664.

National Insurance contributions are excluded from the figure but are paid under the same rules and at the same rates as for other civil servants. Information on the paybill costs for Special Advisers within individual Departments is not provided in order to protect the privacy of the individuals concerned.

Information on the costs of employing Special Advisers in previous years was given by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster to the hon. Member for Gordon (Mr. Bruce) on 25 November 1997, Official Report, columns 472–73.

Attendance Allowance

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans she has to amend the Social Security Attendance Allowance Regulations 1991, to allow attendance allowance to be paid to people paying the full cost of their care in local authority homes; and if she will make a statement. [45276]

Mr. Denham: There are currently no plans to change the rules relating to the payment of Attendance Allowance to people being cared for in local authority homes.

Benefit Expenditure

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the amount in billions of pounds at 1997–98 prices, of social security benefit spending from 1979–80 to 1997–98, broken down into the client groups (a) elderly people, including pensions, (b) the sick and disabled, not including pensioners, (c) family support, (d) unemployment and (e) widows. For example, Attendance Allowance paid to an elderly person is allocated to the sick and disabled group rather than to the elderly group.

Disallowed Benefits

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what proportion of claims for (a) extended council tax benefit and (b) child maintenance bonus have been disallowed for being submitted out of time in the current year. [45477]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The information on extended payments is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is in the table. The information for 1997–98 will not be available until July 1998.

Regular payments of maintenance can transform the lives of lone mothers and their children, providing a stable income that can help them off Income Support and into work. In the current financial year to date, 9.8 per cent. of Child Maintenance Bonus claims have been disallowed for being submitted out of time.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Legal Aid

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Attorney-General, pursuant to the answer of 28 April 1998, Official Report, column 65–67, if he will list the cost to public funds of each of the top 20 barristers' earnings from prosecution work. [46588]

The Attorney-General: The information requested is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Roger Levitt Case (Costs)

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Attorney-General, pursuant to the answer given by Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department on 19 May 1998, Official Report, column 342, on the Roger Levitt case costs, how many prosecution preparation hours were claimed; and how they were assessed. [46590]

The Attorney-General: Fees paid to the three prosecuting counsel briefed by the Serious Fraud Office in the case of Roger Levitt were assessed by a combination of hourly and daily rates. The records necessary to ascertain the exact number of hours claimed in preparation cannot be accessed save at disproportionate cost, but I refer my hon. Friend to the answer of 28 June 1995, Official Report, columns 702–03, given by the then Attorney-General to my hon. Friend the Member for Warwickshire, North (Mr. O'Brien) which shows the fees paid to counsel and sets out the hourly and daily rates.

Prosecution Counsel

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Attorney-General what records his Department collates on the amounts prosecution counsel are paid from public funds. [46589]

The Attorney-General: The two relevant Departments for which hold ministerial responsibility are the Crown Prosecution Service and the Serious Fraud Office.

The CPS holds management information centrally which analyses the payments made to external advocates, whether barristers or solicitors, by class of case, type of proceedings, classification of counsel, and other similar categorisations. In addition, the CPS accounting system records payments made to individuals. No collation of CPS payments with those made by other prosecuting agencies from public funds is performed.

The SFO records payments to counsel on individual case files. This information is not collated.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Scottish Universities (Students from Cumbria)

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many students from Cumbria currently attend Scottish universities. [45678]

Dr. Howells: Data from the Higher Education Statistics Agency for the academic year 1997–98 showed that there were 607 students from Cumbria studying in higher education institutions in Scotland, of whom 496 were on full-time undergraduate courses.

Further and Higher Education Statistics

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list by socio-economic group (a) the numbers and (b) the percentages of (i) under 21 and (ii) over 21 year olds who were accepted into full-time or sandwich undergraduate study in (1) 1995 and (2) the most recent year for which figures are available. [45749]

Dr. Howells: The available data on students accepted into full-time and sandwich undergraduate courses by socio-economic group are provided in the table. It shows the number of accepted applicants to full-time and sandwich courses in 1995 and 1997 who applied through the Universities and Colleges Admissions Service (UCAS). However, not all full-time and sandwich undergraduate students enter higher education through UCAS. Information on the socio-economic groups of students who did not apply through UCAS is currently unavailable.

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to his answer of 27 March 1998, Official Report, column 342, when he expects the Higher Education Statistics Agency to analyse the information it collects on the home postcode of higher education students; and what form the analysis will take. [45782]

Dr. Howells: The Higher Education Statistics Agency is an independent body. It has in the past used postcode information to analyse student numbers at region and county/unitary authority level but it has no current plans to carry out any analysis based on parliamentary constituency. The Higher Education Funding Council for England is, however, carrying out an analysis of entrants to higher education using postcode information and will report in due course.

School Inspections

Mr. Efford: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) if he will make a statement on the procedure for dealing with complaints from schools regarding (a) Ofsted inspections, and (b) individual Ofsted inspectors; [45704]

(2) how many Ofsted inspections were carried out during the last period for which figures are available; and how many complaints were received from schools or governing bodies regarding Ofsted inspections or inspectors in that period; [45705]

(3) what procedures exist for monitoring the performance of (a) Ofsted inspection terms and (b) individual inspectors. [45706]

Mr. Byers: HM Chief Inspector of Schools is responsible for monitoring the performance of school inspectors and handling complaints arising from school inspections. We announced on 10 March that Ofsted's complaints procedures are being strengthened, including the introduction of an independent element through the appointment of an external complaints adjudicator. I have asked the Chief Inspector to write to my hon. Friend and to place a copy of his letter in the Library.

Special Educational Needs

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the average length of time taken to statement a child, and how many statements are currently outstanding in each local education authority. [46438]

Ms Estelle Morris: Information is not available in the form requested. Figures published by the Audit Commission this year showed that in 1996–97 48 per cent. of draft statements were served on parents by LEAs within the statutory 18 week time-limit. This level of performance is unacceptable, and the Department has asked LEAs with poor records what action they propose to take to improve.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when the National Advisory Group on Special Educational Needs first met to consider the results of the consultation on the Green Paper, "Excellence for All Children". [46668]

Ms Estelle Morris [holding answer 19 June 1998]: Consultation on the Green Paper closed formally on 9 January 1998, although responses continued to be received until March. The National Advisory Group considered a preliminary analysis of the responses on 11 February, and met again to consider a full assessment on 29 April.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what guidance his Department has issued to local education authorities on the needs of children with ADD/ADHD. [46428]

Ms Estelle Morris: The Department has not issued guidance on attention deficit disorder/attention deficit hyperactivity disorder (ADD/ADHD). Identifying and meeting children's special educational needs, including needs which arise from ADD/ADHD, is a matter for local education authorities and schools, having regard to the Department's Code of Practice on the Identification and Assessment of Special Educational Needs. Together with the Department of Health, we are considering how best to disseminate factual information on ADD/ADHD and to make available information on good practice in meeting the educational needs of children with this disorder.

Disabled Access Symbols

Mr. Levitt: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will take steps to promote the (a) standardisation and (b) greater use of readily understandable iconic symbols denoting accessible facilities for people with different disabilities. [46506]

Mr. Alan Howarth: The British Standards Institution's sub-committee on disabled people (B/209/8) is, at present, developing proposals for a new British Standard covering access for disabled people. I understand that, as part of its remit, the sub-committee will be considering guidance on the provision of the international symbol for access and signs for help for hearing impaired people and partially sighted people. This Department, along with several others, is represented on the sub-committee.

Remploy

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he proposes to appoint a disabled person to the Board of the Remploy Group; and if he will make a statement. [46751]

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to appoint to the board of Remploy people with disabilities. [46995]

Mr. Alan Howarth: An advertisement was recently placed in Disability Times seeking a non-executive director for Remploy who has personal experience of disability and can contribute to the commercial development and overall good governance of the company. It made clear that applications from people with disabilities would be particularly welcome.

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what has been the Government subsidy to Remploy for each of the past 10 years expressed (a) in cash terms and (b) at April 1998 prices. [46993]

Mr. Alan Howarth: The table shows Remploy's grant over the last 10 years in (a) cash prices and (b) April 1998 prices.

£ million

Year	(a) cash prices	(b) April 1998 prices
1997–98	94.2	96.5

1990–91	72.0	92.8
1989–90	67.0	93.1
1988–89	62.7	93.3

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what has been the ratio of able bodied to disabled workers at Remploy for each of the last five years. [46992]

Mr. Alan Howarth: The table shows both the number of disabled employees at Remploy and that the proportion of the total workforce who are disabled has increased over the past five years:

Year	Total workers (disabled and non-disabled)	Number of disabled workers	Number of non-disabled workers	Ratio of non-disabled to disabled
1993–94	10,229	8,654	1,575	1 to 5.5

1997–98	11,351	10,021	1,330	1 to 7.5

Education Action Zones

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when he will announce the 25 successful applications for education action zones. [47335]

Mr. Byers: Tomorrow. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State will place the relevant details in the Library.

Further Education (East Sussex)

Mr. Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on his Department's plans for the further education sector in East Sussex. [43781]

Dr. Howells [Pursuant to his reply, 11 June 1998, Official Report, c. 694]: The reply should have been as follows:

I have no specific plans for the further education sector in East Sussex.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Bees

Dr. Cable: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer of 9 June 1998, Official Report, column 530, what has been the cost to his Department of research into bee disease in each year since 1990. [46093]

Mr. Rooker: The information requested is set out in the table. The figure for 1990–91 is not readily available.

Year	£000
1991–92	20
1992–93	61
1993–94	140

Seed Listings

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer of 21 May 1998, Official Report, column 483, if he will indicate whether any tests and trials are being or have been conducted in respect of each of the national seed list applications under Regulation 11(1) of the Seeds (National Lists of Varieties) Regulations 1982, indicating the names of the persons conducting the tests and the dates thereof. [46209]

Mr. Rooker: National List tests to establish distinctness, uniformity and stability (DUS) and trials for value, cultivation and use (VCU) have been or are being carried out as shown. For reasons of personal confidentiality, only the corporate identities of trialling agents is released into the public domain.

[1] DUS test plots were not sown for this variety as a Deliberate Release Consent was not granted until 1 April 1998. The variety has been sown in 1998 VCU trials only

[2] A proposed decision on whether these varieties should be added to the UK National List will not be taken until the necessary marketing consent has been promulgated by the French Competent Authority to whom the marketing application under Council Directive 90/220/EEC was submitted

Notes:
DUS: Tests to establish Distinctness, Uniformity and Stability
VCU: Trials to establish Value for Cultivation and Use in the UK
NIAB: National Institute of Agricultural Botany, Cambridge
SAC: Scottish Agricultural College, Aberdeen
BSBSPA: British Sugar Beet Seed Producers Association
BSPB: British Society of Plant Breeders

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer of 14 May 1998, Official Report, column 200, for what reasons he will not make available to the public the results which are held by him of seed tests and trials to establish value for cultivation and use until a proposed decision on whether the seeds should be added to the national list has been published in the "Plant Varieties and Seeds Gazette". [46205]

Mr. Rooker: Proposed decisions about addition to the national list are published after careful consideration of the data resulting from tests and trials, and subject to the necessary marketing consent being in place under directive 90/220/EEC. Addition to the national list is a statutory pre-requisite to marketing, and it is only when proposed decisions are published that the formal representations procedures at sections 21 and 22 of the Seeds (National Lists of Varieties) Regulations 1982 (as amended) apply. Any person with a sufficient interest can obtain the results of tests and trials when considering whether to make representations against proposed decisions.

Mr. Alan Simpson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer of 14 May 1998, Official Report, column 198, if he will list the agricultural species which are not trialled or tested for national list purposes to establish whether they have value for cultivation and use. [46204]

Mr. Rooker: Schedule 1, Part 1 of the Seeds (National Lists of Varieties) Regulations 1982 (as amended) lists the agricultural species that are subject to national list tests and trials, and the common names of these species are given in the following schedule for information. Schedule 2, Section 5, of the same regulations exempts varieties of grasses not intended for fodder production, and any variety intended for ultimate sale in a Member State which has already accepted it for value for cultivation and use (VCU) purposes, from the VCU requirements that are specified at Schedule 2. Tests and trials and addition to the UK National List are not a requirement for varieties of species that are not subject to the National List regulations. But any genetically modified varieties falling into these latter categories would still require a marketing consent under the Environmental Protection Act 1990 which implements Directive 90/220/EEC.

Poultry

Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many head of poultry have been compulsorily slaughtered under the Zoonoses orders; and at what cost to public funds. [46033]

Mr. Rooker: Between 1 March 1989 when the Zoonoses Order 1989 came into force and 31 March this year, 3,751,707 birds have been sent for compulsory slaughter in Great Britain following confirmed infection with Salmonella enteritidis or Salmonella typhimurium. The total amount paid in compensation is £8,660,931.

BSE

Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many cattle have been compulsorily slaughtered under BSE regulations; and at what cost to public funds. [46061]

Mr. Rooker: Between 1988, when BSE became a notifiable disease, and 12 June 1998, 203,283 cattle had been compulsorily slaughtered in Great Britain as BSE suspects. Total BSE payments in respect of these slaughterings for the period from 1988 to the end of 1997/98 amount to over £191 million. This figure comprises BSE compensation payments, ex gratia payments and miscellaneous expenditure.

In addition, certain cattle have been slaughtered under the selective cull. This covers cattle born 1 July 1989–30 June 1993 which are believed to have shared the same infected feed as BSE cases. Cattle born before 15 October 1990 are slaughtered only if the owner offers them voluntarily, as there was no legal requirement to keep birth records before that date. Such animals represent around 50 per cent. of the total slaughtered under the cull.

The selective cull commenced on 21 March 1997. Total expenditure on the cull for the 1997/98 financial year was £114 million, including compensation for 65,540 animals, and disposal and valuation costs. By 12 June 1998, 70,428 animals had been slaughtered under the selective cull.

Bats (Rabies)

Mr. Lepper: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps are taken to ensure that all dead and grounded bats are examined for rabies. [46199]

Mr. Rooker: Members of the public and volunteer bat enthusiast groups in the UK are encouraged to submit dead bats to Veterinary Investigation Centres to be tested for the presence of rabies and rabies-related viruses.

Mr. Lepper: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the status of rabies in bats as a notifiable disease. [46197]

Mr. Rooker: Rabies, whether in a bat or in any other mammal, is a notifiable disease in accordance with the Rabies (Control) Order 1974.

Mr. Lepper: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many bats have been examined for rabies since June 1996. [46198]

Mr. Rooker: Between June 1996 and May 1998, 507 bats were examined for rabies.

Live Animal Exports

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he plans to amend the law to require all live sheep and goats exported from the United Kingdom to be ear-tagged or tattooed to show the holding of birth; and if he will make a statement. [46118]

Mr. Rooker: Work on a draft Order which would require sheep and goats in Great Britain to be identified with the holding of birth is currently in hand. The Government hope it will be possible to consult on this draft in late summer. In Northern Ireland, legislation is in place which requires all sheep and goats moving off the holding of birth to be identified with an eartag or tattoo, making it possible to identify the holding of birth.

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) when he plans to introduce the new arrangements for live animal exports whereby certifying veterinarians will be nominated by the Government; and if he will make a statement; [46116]

(2) when he plans to announce the results of the review which he initiated in May 1997 of the arrangements for enforcing the rules on the welfare of farm animals exported live to the Continent; and if he will make a statement. [46117]

Mr. Morley: The results of the review, including the principles of the proposed changes, were announced last Autumn. We are currently working up the final details for public consultation. When the consultation document is issued, which I hope will be next month, I will arrange to have a copy placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the result of the inquiry by the French Government into the failure of a number of live British calves exported to France in 1995 to reach the destinations declared in the route plans submitted to his Department; and if he will make a statement. [46119]

Mr. Morley: A judicial investigation by the French Government is still under way and the Department continues to assist the French authorities in this matter.

Whales

Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the current pressures on the stock of each species of whale. [46192]

Mr. Morley: The Government contribute to assessments of whale stocks through their membership of the International Whaling Commission. The IWC's Scientific Committee is continuing its programme of intensive assessments of great whale stocks, and is also developing long term research programmes to assess the effects of pollution and climate change on cetaceans.

Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the likely impact of a lifting of the moratorium on commercial whaling. [46196]

Mr. Morley: The Government remain strongly opposed to lifting the existing moratorium on commercial whaling, since we believe that such an action would harm whale conservation.

Coastal Fishing Limits

Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his Department's definition of coastal fisheries limits. [46032]

Mr. Morley: British fishery limits generally extend, by virtue of the Fishery Limits Act 1976, to 200 nautical miles from baselines. As laid down in the Territorial Sea Act 1987, the UK's territorial sea generally extends to 12 nautical miles from baselines. Sea Fisheries Committee districts for the management of inshore fisheries extend to 6 nautical miles from baselines.

Coastal Zone Management

Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what discussions on the question of coastal zone management were held at the Council of Ministers on 8 June; and what were the opinions expressed by the other ministers. [46040]

Mr. Morley: This subject was not discussed at the Fisheries Council on 8 June.

Spanish Distant Water Fleet

Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what the tonnage of the Spanish distant water fleet has been in each year since 1985. [46035]

Mr. Morley: Information about the fishing fleets of other Member States is contained in the EU Commission's annual reports on progress under the Multi-Annual Guidance Programme (MAGP), which sets national objectives for the capacity of different fleet segments. The Report in July 1997 provided the following information for Spain covering the period 1991 to 1996.

The Spanish fishing fleet: Segments comprising vessels fishing in third country and in international waters: gross registered tonnage

Year	Trawlers and polyvalent	Pelagic seiners, netters	Tuna fleet
1991	264,695	31,859	58,648
1992	239,699	36,018	59,612
1993	214,682	36,349	56,136
1994	198,780	34,775	56,136
1995	173,745	27,824	55,286
1996	148,759	28,283	54,907

Fishing Vessels

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much grant aid from the Fishing Vessels (Safety Improvements) (Grants) Scheme 1995 and the Fisheries and Aquaculture Structures (Grants) Regulations 1995 has been paid to fishing vessels over 12 metres in length in each year since 1995. [46476]

Mr. Morley: Total grant paid to fishing vessels in the UK under these schemes is:

1995–96: £2.861 million

1996–97: £1.958 million

1997–98: £1.796 million.

These figures include grant awarded under similar vessel grant schemes in operation prior to the introduction of the Fishing Vessels (Safety Improvements) (Grants) Scheme 1995 and the Fisheries and Aquaculture Structures (Grants) Regulations 1995, but paid during the relevant financial years. Under the safety grant, scheme aid is available only to fishing vessels of 12 metres or more in length. In Objective 1 areas some payments are made under the Fisheries and Aquaculture Structures (Grants) Regulations to smaller vessels. These amounts are also included in the above figures as separate information is not readily available.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the total amount of levies collected in each of the last five years by the Sea Fish Industry Authority from landings from fishing vessels (a) over 12 metres and (b) under 12 metres in length. [46475]

Mr. Morley: This information is not available in the form requested. Levies collected by the Sea Fish Industry Authority are based on the value of fish landed and records do not distinguish between vessels over or under 12 metres in length. The total amount collected in each of the last five years from landings from all fishing vessels is as follows:

Year	£ million
1993–94	3.015
1994–95	3.118
1995–96	3.156
1996–97	3.407
1997–98	3.114

Bakery Training (Russia)

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much has been spent by his Department through ADAS or similar organisations in establishing bakery training facilities in Russia; how many Russians have so far been trained as a result of this initiative; and what plans he has for further spending on such projects. [46713]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 19 June 1998]: The Department has had no involvement in projects of this nature and has spent no money on them either through ADAS or any other commercial organisation.

Organic Farming

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Montgomeryshire (Mr. Öpik) of 2 April 1998, Official Report, columns 655–56, in respect of the research into the implications for organic forms of cross contamination with pollen from genetically modified crops (a) who is undertaking the research, (b) when he expects the research to be completed and (c) if the results will be published in full. [46560]

Mr. Rooker: The contract for the research has not yet been awarded. Once work has started, it is expected that the research will take between 3 to 6 months to complete. The results of this research will be disseminated widely.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Departmental Vehicles (Fuel Consumption)

Mr. Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Scarborough and Whitby (Mr. Quinn) on 16 June 1998, Official Report, column 152, what percentage of (a) all vehicles currently held and (b) vehicles used by Ministers have on average fuel consumption of less than 26 miles per gallon; what steps he is taking to replace them; and if he will make a statement. [46970]

Mr. Kilfoyle: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated under the terms of its Framework Document to the Government Car and Despatch Agency. I have asked its Chief Executive, Mr. Nick Matheson, to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Nick Matheson to Mr. Norman Baker, dated 22 June 1998:

The Parliamentary Secretary, Office of Public Service, has asked me in my capacity as Chief Executive of the Government Car and Despatch Agency to reply to your Parliamentary Question about the fuel consumption of vehicles used by the Agency.

We are not in a position to extract fuel consumption figures for individual vehicles within the GCDA fleet at the present time. However, based on official published combined urban cycle fuel consumption figures for the cars involved:-

a) 14.1% of the total GCDA fleet has an estimated fuel consumption below 26.0 mpg.

b) 11.5% of cars allocated to Ministers have a fuel consumption below 26.0 mpg. All of these are scheduled for replacement or conversion to use alternative gas fuels within the next 18 months.

I am not satisfied with the current method of measuring fuel consumption and as part of my management reforms for the Agency I have recently changed the method of recording fuel consumption so that I can begin to make performance comparisons between individual vehicles under normal operating conditions. This work will be completed in the next week or so and if the results indicate a material change in the figures I have given above, I will write again to provide that information.

Freedom of Information

Mr. Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if it remains his policy to publish a freedom of information bill; and if he will make a statement. [46846]

Dr. David Clark: It does remain my policy to publish a freedom of information Bill.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Sierra Leone

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much was spent on aid to Sierra Leone by her Department in 1997–98; and if she will make a statement. [46733]

Clare Short: My Department provided £3.439 million to Sierra Leone in the 1997–98 financial year.

Of this, £250,000 was spent on Sierra Leone refugees in neighbouring countries and £250,000 for Government and civil society outside Sierra Leone.

Departmental Cash Limits

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what changes have been made to the 1998–99 cash and running costs limits for expenditure by her Department. [47538]

Clare Short: Subject to Parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimate, the cash limit for Class III, Vote 1 will be increased by £2,261,000 from £1,618,439,000 to £1,620,700,000 and the Department for International Development running cost limit by £2,261,000 from £59,874,000 to £62,135,000.

The increase is in respect of a running cost transfer of £2,261,000 from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (Class II, Vote) for the costs of development staff in London and abroad.

The increase will be offset by a reduction in the FCO's Vote and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Departmental Reviews

Mr. Allan: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list, for each of the last four years, all departmental inquiries and reviews instigated by ministers which have been chaired by individuals outside her Department; and in each case if she will give the date of establishment and the name of the chairman. [46835]

Clare Short: My Department has not undertaken any departmental inquiries or reviews instigated by ministers which have been chaired by individuals outside the department in the last four years.

Jubilee 2000

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what is her Department's policy in relation to the Jubilee 2000 coalition campaign to cancel debt. [46734]

Clare Short: Both the Government and the Jubilee 2000 Coalition recognise the important part debt relief can play in the eradication of poverty. We seek the same overall objective—the remission of the unpayable debts of the world's poorest countries. Her Majesty's Government welcome the work that Jubilee 2000 and its associates have been doing to raise public awareness of these issues, and thus keep debt relief firmly on the international political agenda. This has helped us to get agreement at last month's G8 Summit in Birmingham to one of the main aims of the Government's Mauritius Mandate—to ensure that by the year 2000 all eligible highly indebted poor countries will have at least begun the process which will lead to debt relief.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Audit Commission

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will publish the terms upon which media and public affairs consultants have been appointed by the Audit Commission over the last five years, and the total amounts spent each year with each consultant. [46109]

Mr. Raynsford: The Audit Commission's press and public affairs functions have been provided externally for more than nine years. These services are market tested every three years in accordance with relevant EC Directives and, following the last market test, two companies—Citigate Westminster and Lawson, Lucas and Mendelsohn—were appointed. Whilst details of the contractual terms are commercially confidential between the Audit Commission and individual contractors, the Commission has incurred the following expenditure on these services in each of the last five years:

£174,145: 1 April 1997 to 31 October 1997 (new financial period)

£311,998: year to 31 March 1997

£315,255: year to 31 March 1996

£236,747: year to 31 March 1995

£172,107: year to 31 March 1994.

Businesses (Environmental Practice)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what proposals he has to encourage businesses to improve their environmental practices. [46226]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 16 June 1998]: This Government's long term goal is sustainable development. Under the legally binding targets agreed at Kyoto, the European Union agreed to reduce emissions of greenhouse gases, on average, by 8 per cent. Under the UK Presidency, we have secured agreement with other Member States on how to meet this European Union target. The UK contribution is to reduce emissions by 12.5 per cent. This, together with the Government's own manifesto commitment to reduce carbon dioxide emissions by 20 per cent., has to be planned for. These are challenging targets and all sectors—business, domestic and transport—need to play their part in meeting them.

The Government currently have a wide range of existing programmes and initiatives to encourage business to improve its environment practices beyond the minimum standards set by regulation. These include: the Best Practice Programmes for Energy Efficiency and Environmental Technology; the promotion of environmental management within business; energy and environmental labelling schemes; codes of practice covering environmental claims on products and services; producer responsibility for the recovery and recycling of waste; promoting waste minimisation; voluntary agreements with industry sectors; and promoting the wider take up of environmental reporting.

As part of the wide ranging Opportunities for Change consultation on a revised UK Sustainable Development Strategy, we have just launched a Sustainable Business consultation paper. This sets out and seeks views on the particular challenges posed by sustainable development for business. A further element of the strategy, the Government's recently issued consultation paper on the waste strategy for England and Wales, Less Waste: More Value, stresses the importance of industry action to reduce the environmental impact of their waste, and seeks views on what further action is needed to encourage this.

Business is taking these matters seriously. In their Climate Change report, the Advisory Committee on Business and the Environment suggested that some form of tax on industrial energy may be necessary. In response the Government have set up a task force, chaired by the President of the CBI, Lord Marshall, to examine the role of economic instruments, such as an energy tax.

In the light of these various developments the Government will be looking across the array of measures they can deploy—regulation, voluntary agreements and economic instruments—to see what else they can do to encourage better environmental performance from business.

Air Quality

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what proposals he has to improve air quality. [46225]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 16 June 1998]: The UK National Air Quality Strategy sets out national air quality objectives for eight key air pollutants to be achieved by 2005. These objectives have been set with reference to air quality standards which represent no or minimal risk of health effects to the public. The Strategy also describes a range of policy options for achieving the objectives and the contribution to be made at international, national and local levels. We announced last year that we would review the Strategy urgently to look at the options for delivering improved air quality more quickly. The review is due to be completed by the end of this year.

The Government are also taking action on a number of other fronts to improve air quality. At the European level we reached agreement at the Environment Council earlier this month on tough new air quality limit values under the Air Quality Daughter Directive and improved fuel quality standards under the Sulphur Content of Liquid Fuels Directive. We have also made significant progress in negotiating tighter fuel quality and emission standards under the Auto-Oil programme. At the national level we are implementing the Industrial Pollution Prevention and Control Directive and taking forward fiscal incentives for low emission buses/lorries, alternative fuels and legislation on vehicle emissions. At the local level we have introduced a system of local air quality management and are piloting a scheme for local transport emissions enforcement.

Environment Agency

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what conditions the Highways Agency required to be placed on the planning application for the new Environment Agency offices in Cumbria; what was the cost of complying with them; and which organisation paid. [46371]

Mr. Raynsford: Conditions were attached to the planning permission granted by Eden District Council requiring the provision of new traffic signals at the junction of the M6 and A66, together with additional road markings. With regard to the cost of complying with the conditions and which organisation paid, the information is not readily available but I will provide a written response with details as and when they become available.

US-UK Air Services Agreement

Ms Osborne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when talks will resume on the United States of America-United Kingdom Air Services agreement. [46429]

Ms Glenda Jackson: No UK/US air services talks are currently planned. We would expect to resume talks when the outcome of the examination of the British Airways/American Airlines alliance by the competition authorities is known.

Channel Tunnel Rail Link

Mr. Ottaway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when LCR expects to complete the Channel Tunnel Rail Link if Railtrack fails to exercise its option relating to the second phase of construction of the Channel Tunnel Rail Link. [46470]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Any such assessment would depend on when Railtrack chose not to exercise its option in respect of the second phase of construction. Railtrack, however, has made clear its expectation to commit to the second phase and LCR expects work to be completed in 2007.

Mr. Ottaway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions within what timescale LCR will have to find a third party or complete phase two itself if Railtrack does not exercise its option relating to the second phase of construction of the Channel Tunnel Rail Link. [46469]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Railtrack has an option until July 2003 to construct and purchase Phase 2, but should it decide not to exercise that option, LCR remains, in any event, contractually obliged to complete the second phase to St. Pancras. LCR's current expectation is that the second phase of construction should be completed by 2007.

National Air Traffic Services

Mr. Ottaway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 11 June 1998, Official Report, column 637, relating to the future of NATS, if he will make a statement on the powers attaching to the golden share. [46474]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The precise details of the golden share are for consideration as the proposal is developed, but it will provide additional rights to the Government to maintain the public interest while allowing the private sector freedom to run the business.

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement about the future of the Scottish and Oceanic Air Traffic Control Centre at Prestwick. [45592]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Contract negotiations for a new air traffic control centre at Prestwick to replace the existing Scottish and Oceanic Air Traffic Control Centre are underway between National Air Traffic Services (NATS) and Sky Solutions, the preferred bidder. NATS will consult with the airlines before seeking CAA Board and Government approval to a contractual commitment. NATS currently envisage that operations will transfer from the existing Prestwick centre to a new one (the New Scottish Centre) during the winter of 2004/2005.

Private Hospitals (Business Rates)

Mr. Plaskitt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what was the total sum paid in business rates by private hospitals in England in the last year for which figures are available. [46362]

Mr. Raynsford: I estimate that the amount of business rates payable by private hospitals in England was £9.9 million in 1997–98.

Marine Safety

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the area marine safety sub-committees established by his Department and the former Department of Transport. [45777]

Ms Glenda Jackson [holding answer 17 June 1998]: There are 8 District Marine Safety Committees: East Scotland, West Scotland, Northern Ireland, North East and East England, North West England, Wales, London, and South and South West England; and 26 sub-committees which include: Highland/Moray Firth, Orkney/Caithness, and Shetland. A brochure explaining the work of the District Marine Safety Committees and providing details of all sub-centres will be placed in the Libraries of both Houses shortly.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what issues have been referred by his Department to marine safety sub-committees since 1 May 1997. [45778]

Ms Glenda Jackson [holding answer 17 June 1998]: No specific issues have been referred by the Department to the District Marine Safety Committees since 1 May 1997. The main role of the committees is to keep local marine safety and pollution prevention issues under review. Where an important issue of more than local significance is identified, this may be brought to the Department's attention.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions which marine safety sub-committees were sent a copy of the Coastguard Agency's Five Year Strategy Plan consultation document; in each case when the document was sent out; and which sub-committees have responded to the consultation document. [45779]

Ms Glenda Jackson [holding answer 17 June 1998]: The document for consultation was published on 20 January. District Marine Safety Committees were not directly sent copies of the document, however copies were sent to the then Marine Safety Agency (under whose aegis the District Marine Safety Committees operate) and those organisations or individuals who had registered an interest. Whilst no District Marine Safety Committees responded, some replies have been received from individual committee members.

Fishing Vessels

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what was the number of registered British fishing vessels (a) under 12 metres and (b) over 12 metres in length and the number of fishermen's lives lost from each in each of the last five years. [46477]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The number of registered British fishing vessels both under 12 metres and over 12 metres in length and the number of fishermen's lives lost from each in the last five years as recorded by the Registry of Shipping and Seamen are as follows:

Year	12 metres and under	Number of deaths	12 metres and over	Number of deaths
1993–94	5,376	16	1,273	4
1994–95	5,529	2	1,296	4
1995–96	5,752	3	1,321	3
1996–97	6,030	3	1,347	5
1997–98	6,271	0	1,373	7

Gipsy Sites

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what proportion of applications for planning permission for gipsy caravan sites were granted by local planning authorities in (a) 1993–94, (b) 1994–95, (c) 1995–96, (d) 1996–97 and (e) 1997–98. [46566]

Mr. Raynsford: This information is not held centrally. My Department is part-funding a two year research project by the Advisory Council for the Education of Romany and other Travellers (ACERT), to look at the success rate of Gipsy planning applications and appeals. The research is due to be completed next year.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to review sections 77 to 80 of the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994. [46569]

Mr. Raynsford: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Watford (Ms Ward) on 10 June 1998, Official Report, column 574.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what guidance his Department has issued to local authorities in respect of the provision and development of gipsy sites. [46570]

Mr. Raynsford: Guidance to local authorities on gipsy sites and planning is given in the Department's Circular 1/94. It aims to provide that the planning system recognises the need for accommodation consistent with gipsies' nomadic lifestyle and to reflect the importance of the plan-led nature of the planning system in relation to gipsy site provision.

Wandsworth

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what grants from public funds were paid to the London Borough of Wandsworth for the year 1998–99. [46497]

Mr. Raynsford: The London Borough of Wandsworth will receive Revenue Support Grant of £126,826,149, redistributed Non Domestic Rates of £60,589,879 and Standard Spending Assessment reduction grant of £7,498,940. In addition, the borough is reporting that it expects to receive grants into its General Fund Revenue Account totalling £72,042,000 outside Aggregate External Finance (AEF) and £10,091,000 with AEF; and capital grant totalling about £3.9 million. No comprehensive record of grants disbursed from public funds is maintained by the Department; such grants may be made by Government Departments or other bodies.

Extinct Species

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list the species which have become extinct in the UK over the past decade. [46700]

Angela Eagle: There is only one confirmed extinction of a species within the UK during the last ten years. This is of the Greater mouse-eared bat (Myotis myotis), which has been extinct since 1990.

Freight

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what steps the Government will take to encourage the movement of freight within the United Kingdom by coastal shipping. [46709]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Government will be setting out their proposals for encouraging the movement of freight within the United Kingdom by coastal shipping in the White Paper on Integrated Transport to be published shortly.

Road Traffic Reduction Legislation

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when sufficient data will be available to enable an assessment to be made of the success or otherwise of recent road traffic reduction legislation; and if he will make a statement. [46708]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Road Traffic Reduction Act 1997 is not yet in force. However, guidance to local authorities on implementing the Act was issued in draft earlier this year for consultation. This stated that local traffic authorities would be expected to produce, by 31 July 1999, reports containing assessments of levels of local road traffic in their area and forecast growth in those levels, together with targets for reducing those levels or their rate of growth. The draft guidance also stresses the importance of local authorities monitoring traffic levels in order to determine whether they are on course to achieve any such targets. It is too soon to judge when it will be possible to assess the likely impact of the Act on traffic levels.

Unauthorised Camping

Mr. White: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has received about problems with unauthorised camping. [46498]

Mr. Raynsford: My Department receives representations from Members of Parliament, members of the public, and from local authorities about unauthorised camping on a regular basis.

Mr. White: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many prosecutions (a) have been made and (b) have been successful under the Police and Criminal Justice Act 1994 broken down by the relevant authority against unauthorised camping. [46499]

Mr. Raynsford: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Road Accidents (Costs)

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what estimate he has made of the average cost to public funds of road accidents involving a single fatality. [46519]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The value attributed to the avoidance of a fatal road accident in 1996 was £983,700. This takes account of medical costs, lost production, human costs based on willingness to pay, the costs of police and courts, insurance administration, and property damage. Included in this value is a sum of £5,200 for the cost to public funds for medical costs and the costs of police and courts. The lost production element includes social security costs but these are not separately estimated.

Local Authority Development Plans

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, pursuant to his oral answer of 9 June 1998, Official Report, column 859, if he will list the local authority development plans in respect of which he has confirmed the housing requirements put forward by local planning authorities since 23 February. [46965]

Mr. Raynsford: The following development plans, or alterations to existing development plans, have been adopted by local authorities since 23 February this year:

Richmondshire Local Plan
City of Derby Local Plan
West Lindsey Local Plan
High Peak Local Plan
South Derbyshire Local Plan
Lichfield Local Plan
City of Worcester Local Plan
Carrick Local Plan
Thanet Local Plan
East Hampshire Local Plan
Winchester Local Plan
Basildon Local Plan
St. Edmundsbury Local Plan
North Norfolk Local Plan
Welwyn Hatfield Local Plan
Tendring Local Plan
Sheffield Unitary Development Plan
Haringey Unitary Development Plan
Hertfordshire Structure Plan.

In all cases the plans reached adoption without the Secretary of State having to use his reserve powers of direction in respect of the housing provision proposed by local planning authorities.

M6

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what extra funding will be provided for increasing the capacity of the M6 following the decision to proceed with the Birmingham Northern Relief Road. [46945]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Decisions on increasing the capacity of the M6 are independent of the decision to proceed with the Birmingham Northern Relief Road. More generally, funding for investment in trunk roads is being considered in the Roads Review and in the Comprehensive Spending Review. I cannot anticipate decisions in either of these Reviews.

Carbon Dioxide Emissions

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will estimate the quantity of carbon dioxide emitted annually by a representative sample of 1.5 million cars. [47075]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The total car fleet in the UK emitted 19.33 million tonnes of Carbon in 1996. Given that the total car fleet was made up of 22.24 million cars, this translates into an average of 0.87 tonnes of Carbon per car in that year.

The quantity of Carbon emitted by each car in practice will depend on a number of factors, including: the type of fuel used, the size of the engine, the driving conditions, driving behaviour and the maintenance of the vehicle.

Bathing Water (Cliftonville)

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions for what reason the Environment Agency has not adopted (a) Palm Bay and (b) Kingsgate Bay in Cliftonville as designated areas for Beachwater Microbiological Assays of Pathogens. [47248]

Angela Eagle: No applications have been received by my Department for Palm Bay and Kingsgate Bay to be identified as bathing waters under the Bathing Water Directive, which would in turn require regular water quality sampling by the Environment Agency. I understand that neither bay is likely to fulfil the Directive's definition of a bathing water, which is where bathing is traditionally practised by a large number of bathers, nor do they possess facilities associated with popular bathing areas.

Rail Safety

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) if any trains operating on the Virgin West Coast Mainline are of the same design as the Great North Eastern Railway trains recently found to have faults in their wheels; [47313]

(2) what safety checks will be made on West Coast Mainline trains to ensure that they do not possess flaws in design similar to that recently identified in the wheels of the Great North Eastern Railway trains. [47314]

Ms Glenda Jackson: None of the trains operating on the West Coast Main Line is of the same design as the Great North Eastern Railway train which was derailed on 16 June. The immediate cause of the incident appears to have been a fractured wheel, although the Health and Safety Executive's (HSE's) Railway Inspectorate's investigation is still on-going.

Immediately after the derailment on 16 June, in which the last coach of a high speed train operated by Great North Eastern Railway (GNER) was derailed at Sandy, Bedfordshire, Railtrack sent out notices to all other train operating companies giving details of the nature of the failure and advising them what action should be taken.

In addition, the Railway Inspectorate has written to all the train operating companies reminding them of their duties under the relevant health and safety legislation. These require them to identify whether there are similar features on their rolling stock and take appropriate action to ensure safety.

I am informed that Virgin Trains are inspecting all their vehicles. The bogies and wheelsets involved in this accident are unique to Mark 4 rolling stock which, in the UK, is used only by Great North Eastern Railways (GNER).

English Partnerships

Mr. Ennis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what are his plans for English Partnerships following the creation of regional development agencies. [47438]

Mr. Caborn: The work of English Partnerships (EP) is to be carried forward in the main by the Regional Development Agencies (RDAs) as part of the Government's commitment to put decision-making on regeneration and economic development at the regional level. Regeneration will be part of the RDAs' integrated regional strategies. The roles and functions of EP are to move to the RDAs as they are established; the assets will transfer from EP to the RDAs; and regional EP staff will transfer to the RDAs in April 1999 (and the following year for London).

This is a major organisational change and it will take time for the RDAs to get to grips with their new tasks and establish themselves as influential and credible organisations on the regional, national and international scene. Ministers envisage that there will be a transitional period of about five years when the experience and expertise of EP's remaining national capability will be critical in providing the continuity on some major projects and should also prove useful to RDAs as they bed in.

I am placing a copy of a note in the Library which sets out the background to the changes, the work remaining with EP, and the merger of EP and the Commission for the New Towns in 2000, which I have already announced. The note has been issued today to the Government Offices for the Regions and to EP staff.

Departmental Cash Limits

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what proposals he has to change his Department's cash limits for 1998–99. [47508]

Mr. Prescott: My Department's cash limit for class VI, vote 1 (Housing, construction, regeneration, countryside and wildlife, England), will be increased by £1,395,000 from £1,800,144,000 to £1,801,539,000 to reflect a transfer of non-voted provision from the Department for Education and Employment in order to fund European Regional Development Fund expenditure in advance of European Commission receipts on the Liverpool Institute for the Performing Arts. The increase is offset by the transfer and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Local Government Reorganisation (Basildon)

Angela Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he will announce his decision on the Local Government Commission's recommendations for the reorganisation of the district of Basildon; and if he will make a statement. [47142]

Ms Armstrong: I am today announcing that we have decided not to accept the outstanding recommendations on the reorganisation of the district of Basildon which the Local Government Commission have made. I do not believe that the recommendations offer a satisfactory way forward for Basildon in terms of efficient and convenient local government. We have also decided not to direct a further review by the Commission. This decision should end a period of uncertainty and enable the authorities concerned to plan more confidently for the future.

Nuclear Discharges

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what will be the Government's policy at the Portuguese conference on nuclear discharges, with particular reference to Sellafield and Dounreay discharges into the sea. [46358]

Mr. Meacher: We are looking to make real further progress in protecting the marine environment, and in particular to reach agreement on a strategy that aims to continue reducing sea discharges of radioactive substances.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is the Government's policy towards nuclear discharges into the sea. [46359]

Mr. Meacher: All radioactive waste disposals, including discharges into the sea, are closely regulated under the Radioactive Substances Act 1993. Government departments and the environment agencies carry out monitoring of marine environmental media and foodstuffs around nuclear licensed sites that discharge radioactive waste into the sea. This ensures that any doses to the public are well below internationally agreed limits and that such discharges pose no risk to the environment.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Social Exclusion (Coventry)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proposals he has to encourage local communities in Coventry to tackle social exclusion. [46593]

Mr. Michael: A number of Home Office policies and programmes contribute to tackling aspects of social exclusion. These include, within local communities, its work to promote voluntary and community activity and to support a healthy and cost effective voluntary sector.

The Home Office has been working closely with the Social Exclusion Unit on the Unit's first three priorities of rough sleeping, school exclusions and truancy, and worst estates. In its recent report to the Prime Minister, the Social Exclusion Unit recognised that rough sleeping and related problems such as begging might be identified as local issues of concern by the crime and disorder audits required under the Crime and Disorder Bill [Lords]. They would therefore need to be addressed within the local crime reduction strategy.

The approach required by the Bill of local agencies and the local community working in partnership to address identified local problems with clear priorities and targets is particularly appropriate for tackling issues of social exclusion. I commend the way it has already been adopted by Coventry in production of the Coventry Community Plan.

Football Hooligans

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will assess the advantages of withdrawing the passports of convicted football hooligans during the period of the football tournaments involving British teams abroad. [46553]

Mr. Michael: The withdrawal of passport facilities to persons convicted of football-related offences would be a very serious step. But we will give consideration to it and to other possible steps that might be required for the future.

The Football Spectators Act 1989 already allows the courts to impose restriction orders on persons convicted of football related offences. These require them to report to a police station on the day of a football match abroad involving a team from England or Wales.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many restriction orders under the Football Spectators Act 1989 have been made since 1 May 1997. [46567]

Mr. Michael: Sixty-nine.

Drug-related Offences

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the total number of drug-related offences in each of the past 10 years in (a) London and (b) the rest of the United Kingdom. [47123]

Mr. Michael: The information requested is not collected centrally. However, the Home Office has a research programme designed to shed further light on the links between drugs and crime. A study conducted by the University of Cambridge of drug use by samples of people arrested by the police in various English cities was published recently (Home Office Research Study 183—Drugs and Crime: the results of research on drug testing and interviewing arrestees). This research found that, in those places surveyed, around one third of property crime was drug-driven.

Police (Out-of-court Settlements)

Mr. Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what sums have been paid out of public funds and in respect of how many cases, for out-of-court settlement of claims made by former and serving police officers against the Police Service. [47085]

Mr. Michael: This information is not collected centrally. Claims are a matter for the police authority and the individuals concerned. The Home Office has no role to play in their resolution.

Lloyd Report

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the White Paper on the Future Law on Terrorism based on the report of Lord Lloyd will be published. [47002]

Mr. Straw: The consultation paper on permanent, United Kingdom-wide counter-terrorism legislation will be published shortly.

International Criminal Court

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received from Professor Paul Wilkinson of the University of St. Andrews on the suitability of the proposed International Criminal Court for hearing cases involving the aut dedere aut judicare principle. [41122]

Mr. Michael: None. Representations have been received recently from Professor Wilkinson proposing that the International Criminal Court should have jurisdiction in relation to terrorist crimes. The United Kingdom Government's position is that the Court should not have such jurisdiction. The policy was revisited in the light of Professor Wilkinson's comments but confirmed.

There are several reasons for the view that the Court should not be able to deal with terrorism. Paramount among them is the need to protect confidential sources, which would be compromised if an international body were to investigate and prosecute terrorist incidents. In practical terms it would be very difficult for the Court to act in terrorist cases, countries naturally having a predilection not to volunteer sensitive national security information.

In any event, the jurisdiction of the International Criminal Court in this area is unnecessary given the range of terrorist conventions in place, including the recently concluded United Nations Terrorist Bombing Convention. These require their parties to co-operate against terrorism and, in some cases, to take extraterritorial jurisdiction over terrorist crimes. Indeed, the involvement of the Court could even undermine or set back progress in combating terrorism, on which there is increasingly effective international co-operation.

Prisoners (Incentives and Earned Privileges Scheme)

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 11 June 1998, Official Report, column 640, how many new in-cell television sets his Department proposes to procure under the present procurement; and what estimate he has made of future numbers required. [46514]

Ms Quin: The invitation to tender stage has not yet been reached, but the Official Journal of the European Communities Notice issued on 1 June was for approximately 20,000 sets over a contract period of three to five years. Extension of in-cell television will be gradual over this period.

Road Traffic Offences

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proposals he has to allow the police to retain a proportion of fines resulting from offences detected by cameras. [46528]

Mr. Michael: Hypothecating the revenue from fines resulting from road traffic offences detected by cameras would result in expenditure on traffic enforcement being determined by the income generated rather than the relative priority of the activity. We are examining the current funding arrangements for the cameras to see what more might be done.

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will review the approvals process relating to the use of enforcement equipment for prosecutions in the United Kingdom. [46527]

Mr. Michael: Section 20 of the Road Traffic Offenders Act 1988 provides for the admissibility of evidence from prescribed devices for speeding and other road traffic offences. Section 20(4)(a) requires the prescribed device to be of a type approved by the Secretary of State.

The Government have no plans to amend or review the current legislation. The type approval process ensures that devices used to provide evidence for prosecutions in the courts are both accurate and reliable. The rigorous testing procedures necessary for the type approval process are kept under review.

Ballot Papers

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will change the ballot paper for local, parliamentary and European elections (a) to give greater prominence to party identification and (b) to ensure that candidates' names are listed in a random manner. [46792]

Mr. George Howarth: The Registration of Political Parties Bill, which is currently before the House, will enable candidates from registered political parties to have their parties' emblems against their names on the ballot paper.

We have no present plans to provide for candidates to be listed in random order on the ballot paper; but this issue will be considered by the Working Party on Electoral Procedures, which I chair. Under the new electoral system to be introduced for European Parliamentary elections, candidates from registered political parties will appear on the ballot paper on a party list in the order determined by the party.

Road Safety

Ms Hewitt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will develop a pilot scheme based on the road safety policing and education techniques used in the state of Victoria, Australia. [46923]

Mr. Michael: The Government have no plans at present to develop such a pilot scheme, but we are committed to promoting road safety in innovative ways and will carefully consider any proposals which are put to us.

Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what plans he has to review the rights to compensation of victims where the offence took place before 1 October 1979 and the offender and victim lived together as members of the same family; [46578]

(2) how many claims under the criminal injuries compensation scheme have been rejected because the offence took place before 1 October 1979 and the victim and the offender lived together as members of the same family. [46579]

Mr. Michael: Under the tariff-based scheme, effective for all claims received on or after 1 April 1996, 190 claims had been refused by 31 March 1998 by reason of their exclusion from the scope of that scheme under paragraph 7(b). Precise data for the identical exclusion applied in the former scheme based on common law damages are not available. However, I understand from the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board that between 1,000 and 2,000 claims in this category would have been refused in the period 1 April 1980 to 31 March 1996. The number of victims who have never made any application in recognition of the exclusion is unquantifiable.

The question of allowing claims arising from intra-family violence before 1 October 1979 has been considered on a number of occasions over the years. Change has been rejected on grounds of cost, and because it would represent a departure from the general principle that changes in the law, rules and procedures are not normally made retrospective. We believe those arguments remain compelling, and have no plans to review further this aspect of the compensation scheme.

Cumbria Police

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police constables were employed by the Cumbria Constabulary between 1979 and 1998; and what was the total police strength in each of those years. [46949]

Mr. Michael: The information available is set out in the table. It is not possible to provide information on the number of police constables prior to 1990.

Cumbria constabulary

Year[1]	Total constable strength	Total officer strength
1979	n/a	1,071

Police Grant (Kent)

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what account is taken in the allocation of police grant to Kent of its proximity to mainland Europe and of the Channel Tunnel. [46924]

Mr. Michael: None directly. However, police grant is allocated by means of a formula which predicts police authorities' relative need to spend. Formula components are weighted to take account of both resident and daytime population in a force's area. Any increase in Kent's population as a result of its geographical situation would in time be reflected in its police grant allocation.

Kent Police Authority received an increase of 4.4 per cent. in its spending power in 1998–99, significantly above the national average of 3.7 per cent. for police authorities.

Community Policing

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if she will conduct research into the effectiveness of community policing in the United Kingdom relative to such policing in (a) the USA, (b) South Africa, and (c) other EU countries. [47214]

Mr. Michael: We have no current plans for formal research on the effectiveness of community policing in the United Kingdom in comparison with the United States, South Africa or other European Union countries. We do, however, have regular contacts with the police and others covering a wide range of jurisdictions, including those listed.

Unlawful Sexual Intercourse

Mr. Nicholls: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list for each of the last 10 years for which figures are available the number of men prosecuted for having unlawful sexual intercourse with a female; what information is available about the age of the girls involved in these offences; what guidelines have been given to (a) police forces and (b) the Crown Prosecution Service about such prosecutions in relation to offences with girls aged (i) 15, (ii) 14 and (iii) 13 years of age; and if he will make a statement. [46141]

Mr. Michael: Home Office Court Proceedings information on the number of prosecutions for two offences of unlawful sexual intercourse with a girl under 13 and unlawful sexual intercourse with a girl under 16 from 1986 to 1996 (latest available) is given in the table. No more detail is held about the age of the victim.

No formal guidelines have been given to the police relating to prosecutions in cases of unlawful sexual intercourse. In deciding whether to initiate criminal proceedings and to refer a case to the Crown Prosecution Service, the police will look carefully at the circumstances surrounding each case and will take into account the Code for Crown Prosecutors. However, the police have a duty under the Children Act 1989 to place the welfare of the child as their first priority, and this is detailed in the guidance "Working Together Under The Children Act" which sets out the arrangements for child protection in England and Wales. The Government are consulting on proposals for drawing up revised guidance.

All cases referred to the Crown Prosecution Service by the police are reviewed and prosecuted where appropriate, in accordance with the Code for Crown Prosecutors.

TREASURY

Mutual Building Societies

Ms Drown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps he will take to (a) protect the position of mutual building societies and (b) ensure real competition in the financial services sector. [47086]

Mrs. Liddell: Building societies are competing strongly in the savings and loans markets, and continuing to show the benefits that mutuality can offer their members. The Government believe societies should be accountable to their members and therefore increased the proportion of members who must vote in order for any conversion from a mutual society to a bank to succeed from 20 to 50 per cent. last year.

Sierra Leone

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he expects to reply to the Question from the hon. Member for Wells for answer on 14 May relating to the UN arms embargo on Sierra Leone (reference 41883). [47246]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Sevenoaks (Mr. Fallon) on 15 June 1998, Official Report, column 106.

Royal Mint

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate how much Exchequer revenue will be lost as a result of the sale of the Royal Mint in each of the financial years (a) 1999–2000, (b) 2000–2001 and (c) 2001–2002. [47312]

Mrs. Liddell: The impact on Exchequer revenue of selling the Royal Mint would depend entirely on how this were effected. No decisions have yet been made on the form that a public/private partnership for the Mint might take.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what funds are generated from producing coins for other countries by the Royal Mint; and how many countries the Royal Mint produces coins for. [47310]

Mrs. Liddell: The Royal Mint produced coins or blanks for 64 other countries in 1997/98. Overseas sales revenue in that year was £63 million.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer with which Commonwealth countries the Royal Mint has contracts for production of their coins. [47311]

Mrs. Liddell: The Royal Mint produced coins or blanks for 41 Commonwealth countries in 1997–98. Information about individual contracts, obtained in a competitive international market, are commercially confidential.

Contingency Reserves

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on his policy on the level of the Contingency Reserve. [46388]

Mr. Darling [holding answer 18 June 1998]: The policy on the Reserve is to set it at a level that allows for emergencies and genuine contingencies, as well as reasonable expectations of take-up of End Year Flexibility.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the level of contingency reserves for (a) departmental expenditure limits, and (b) annually managed expenditure for (i) 1999–2000, (ii) 2000–2001 and (iii) 2001–2002; and if he will make a statement. [46393]

Mr. Darling [holding answer 18 June 1998]: The Reserves for the period 1999–2000 to 2001–02 will be published in the CSR White Paper.

Departmental Underspending

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer in which areas he intends departments to spend the £1.5 billion carried forward from last year as an underspend, in 1998–99; and if he will make a statement. [46441]

Mr. Darling [holding answer 18 June 1998]: £1 billion of the £1.5 billion underspend in 1997–98 identified in the March 1998 "Financial Statement and Budget Report" was allocated to programmes in 1998–99 as described in paragraphs 4.9 and 4.10 of the "Public Expenditure Statistical Analyses 1998–99" (Cm 3901). The remaining £0.5 billion was allocated to the Reserve for 1998–99.

Public Sector Spending

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the public sector net cash requirement, including windfall tax receipts and associated spending, for (a) 1997–98, (b) 1998–99, (c) 1999–2000, (d) 2000–01, (e) 2001–02 and (f) 2002–03. [46374]

Mr. Darling [holding answer 18 June 1998]: Forecasts of the public sector net cash requirement including the windfall tax and associated spending were published in Tables 4.4 and 4.5 of the Economic and Fiscal Strategy Report.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the effect on the public sector net cash requirement for (a) 1998–99, (b) 1999–00, (c) 2000–01, (d) 2001–02, and (e) 2002–03, of the new accounting treatment of student financial support, as indicated in the Economic and Fiscal Strategy report of June 1998; and if he will make a statement. [46389]

Mr. Darling [holding answer 18 June 1998]: The new accounting treatment for student loans in Departmental Expenditure Limits will have no effect on the Public Sector Net Cash Requirement, which is a cash measure.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what changes to the gross Contingency Reserve for Public Spending have taken place between the publication of the Financial Statement and Budget report of March 1998 and the Economic and Fiscal Strategy report of June 1998; and if he will make a statement. [46377]

Mr. Darling [holding answer 18 June 1998]: The reduction of £0.3 billion in the Reserve from £3 billion in the March 1998 "Financial Statement and Budget Report" to £2.7 billion in the Economic and Fiscal Strategy Report 1998 reflects the transfer of £0.75 billion unspent in 1997–98 and a rephasing of sales of student loans.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the increase in real public expenditure for each year from 1998–99 to 2001–02, in terms of the previously defined, Control Total for Public Expenditure; and if he will make a statement. [46381]

Mr. Darling [holding answer 18 June 1998]: It would not be possible to produce these figures until full spending plans for each year from 1998–99 to 2001–02 are published at the time of the Comprehensive Spending Review announcement.

Stability and Growth Pact

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what implications the Stability and Growth Pact has for the conduct of UK fiscal policy; and if he will make a statement. [46400]

Mr. Darling [holding answer 18 June 1998]: The Stability and Growth Pact does not place any new legal obligations on UK fiscal policy. UK fiscal policy is conducted with a view to ensuring economic stability which is in the best interests of the UK economy.

Local Authority Budgets

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on his proposals to relax the capping regime for local authority budgets, in the Economic and Fiscal Strategy report June 1998, page 27. [46394]

Mr. Darling [holding answer 18 June 1998]: The Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions recently undertook a public consultation on possible reforms to the local government finance system. The Government are considering responses to that consultation and the result will be published in due course.

Economic and Fiscal Strategy

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will restate Table 4.6 in the Economic and Fiscal Strategy report (June 1998) to show figures in cash terms. [46396]

Mr. Darling [holding answer 18 June 1998]: Forecasts of the current budget, net borrowing and net cash requirement in cash terms were published in Table 4.4 of the Economic and Fiscal Strategy Report (EFSR). Forecasts of the cyclically adjusted budget balances in Table 4.6 can be converted onto a cash basis using the money GDP figures in Table 4.1.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will extend (i) Table 4.A.1, page 49, and (ii) Table 4.A.2, page 50 of the Economic and Fiscal Strategy report (June 1998) to show the series given for the years 1999–2000 to 2002–03. [46397]

Mr. Darling [holding answer 18 June 1998]: Forecasts of the public sector finances were published in Tables 4.4 and 4.5 of the Economic and Fiscal Strategy Report.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will recalculate tables 4.4, 4.5, 4.6 and 4.7 in the Economic and Fiscal Strategy report on the assumption that the retail prices index excluding mortgage interest payments averages (a) 3.0 per cent. in 1998–99 and 2.75 per cent. in 1999–2000 and (b) 3.25 per cent. in 1998–99 and 3.0 per cent. in 1999–2000. [46848]

Mr. Darling [holding answer 22 June 1998]: The implications for the public finances of inflation higher than assumed in the Economic and Fiscal Strategy Report will depend on the reasons why inflation was higher, and the impact of such inflation on the economy.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will recalculate tables 4.4, 4.5, 4.6 and 4.7 in the Economic and Fiscal Strategy report on the assumption that total managed expenditure grows in real terms by (a) 0.75 per cent., (b) 1.5 per cent. and (c) 2.25 per cent. in 1999–2000, 2000–01 and 2001–02. [46851]

Mr. Darling [holding answer 22 June 1998]: Full information contained in tables 4.4, 4.5, 4.6 and 4.7 of the Economic and Fiscal Strategy Report (EFSR) cannot be recalculated for different assumptions about the growth of Total Managed Expenditure without information on the composition of that expenditure, in particular the allocation of expenditure between current and capital.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what action he will take if the cost of social security benefits in 1998–99 exceeds £95.8 billion, in order to ensure that total managed expenditure rises no higher than the figure cited in table 3A.1 in his Economic and Fiscal Strategy report. [46855]

Mr. Darling [holding answer 22 June 1998]: Table 3A.1 sets out figures for 1998–99 in terms of the new aggregates to illustrate how the new control regime announced in the Economic and Fiscal Strategy Report would work. That regime does not apply in 1998–99.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will reproduce tables 4.2, 4.3, 4.4, 4.5, 4.6 and 4.7 in the Economic and Fiscal Strategy report for each of the years from 1991–92 to 1996–97. [46847]

Mr. Darling [holding answer 22 June 1998]: Many of the series contained in tables 4.2, 4.3, 4.4, 4.5, 4.6, 4.7 can be found in Annex 4A of the Economic and Fiscal Strategy Report. Apart from assets sales, the remaining information can be derived from Table 10.1A of Financial Statistics and Table 2.1 of "Economic Trends" (which gives money gross domestic product). These publications can be found in the House of Commons Library. Information on assets sales can be found in Table B17 of the "Financial Statement and Budget Report" (March 1998).

Inflation

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what adjustment mechanism will be available to the Treasury for public expenditure in circumstances when inflation outturns diverge substantially from Treasury planning assumptions; and if he will make a statement. [46382]

Mr. Darling [holding answer 18 June 1998]: I refer the hon. Gentleman to Section 3.4 of the EFSR (CM 3978).

Capital Gains Tax

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will estimate the cost of introducing taper relief for capital gains tax for each year up to 2009–10; what margin of error is associated with such estimates; what assumptions underlie such estimates; and if he will make a statement; [46768]

(2) if he will estimate the reduction in Exchequer revenues which will result from the introduction of his policy of a taper relief on capital gains tax; and if he will make a statement. [46771]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 22 June 1998]: The available information on the effect on Exchequer revenues of the capital gains tax package of reforms is as follows:

Year	£ million (+) yield/(−) cost
1998–99	Negligible
1999–2000	25
2000–2001	+25

For later years, the Exchequer effects will depend to a considerable extent upon movements in future asset prices, any behavioural changes and other factors. In the long term the aim is for the changes to be broadly revenue neutral. It is inappropriate to estimate the cost of taper relief in isolation from other elements of the reform package.

The assumptions for inflation and asset price growth used in calculating the revenue effects of these measures are consistent with the economic assumptions referred to on pages 108 and 109 of the March 1998 "Financial Statement and Budget Report" (FSBR, HC620 published on 17 March 1998). Equity prices are assumed to grow at the same rate as gross domestic product (GDP) at current market prices—"money GDP".

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will delay the implementation of capital gains tax taper relief for a period of one year to allow for further consultations on its effects and implications; and if he will make a statement. [46770]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 22 June 1998]: No. It is important that the benefits of the reforms flow through as early as possible.

The hon. Gentleman's amendments to the Finance Bill on this matter was discussed by a Committee of the Whole House on 29 April and rejected in a vote.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which Ministers were involved prior to the March 1998 Budget in formulating the new policies on capital gains tax, including the taper relief on capital gains tax; and if he will make a statement. [46769]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 22 June 1998]: The Chancellor is responsible for all Budget measures. He receives advice from his Ministerial team and officials as appropriate.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many written representations he has received on his 1998 Budget proposals on taper relief for capital gains tax; how many of such representations were (a) favourable and (b) unfavourable; and if he will make a statement. [46767]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 22 June 1998]: Around 200 comments were received on the Budget proposals, of which approximately 80 mentioned taper relief. Seventy per cent. supported the principle of taper relief. There were varying comments on the detail.

Tax (Hypothecation)

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to extend hypothecation of tax revenue beyond Welfare to Work. [46774]

Mr. Darling [holding answer 22 June 1998]: We look at each case on its merits. The Economic and Fiscal Strategy Report (Cm 3798) announced (on Page 28) that departments would be able to keep some levies and similar taxes, netting them off the Departmental Expenditure Limits where this would further the Government's economic objectives and not prejudice spending plans and priorities.

Current and Capital Expenditure

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what criteria he will use to distinguish between current and capital expenditure. [46850]

Mr. Darling [holding answer 22 June 1998]: For the purpose of assessing the surplus on the current budget, the Government use national accounts definitions of current and capital expenditure except, as set out in paragraph B53 of the March 1998 "Financial Statement and Budget Report" (FSBR), that depreciation is treated as current expenditure.

When the new European System of Accounts (ESA95) is brought into effect later this year, national accounts will treat depreciation as current expenditure and so these expenditure measures will align.

Vehicle Excise Duty

Mr. Green: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to bring vehicle excise duty on heavy goods vehicles into line with average levels in other European Union countries. [46550]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 22 June 1998]: None. In the last Budget, 17 March 1998, Official Report, column 1109, the Chancellor announced a review of the system for setting vehicle excise duty rates for lorries to ensure that the environmental damage caused by lorries is reflected in their vehicle excise duty rates.

Vehicle Taxation

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his latest forecast of the revenue from (a) VED, (b) fuel duties on petrol and derv and (c) the total of VED and fuel duties in (i) the current financial year and (ii) each of the subsequent two years. [46772]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 22 June 1998]: The table gives the figures requested. The forecasts are consistent with the figures for total tax receipts published in the Economic and Fiscal Strategy Report.

Forecasts of receipts from vehicle excise duty and hydrocarbon oil products

£ billion

	1998–99	1999–2000	2000–01
Vehicle excise duty	4.6	4.7	4.8
Hydrocarbon oil products	21.4	23.3	25.6
Total	26.0	28.0	30.4

Education Spending

Mr. Maude: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the average annual real terms percentage increase in public spending on education in the UK between 1979–80 and 1997–98. [46461]

Mr. Darling: 1.6 per cent.

Pensions Mis-selling

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the possibility that the form of the phase 2 pensions mis-selling inquiries proposed by the Financial Services Authority will invalidate independent financial advisers' professional indemnity insurance. [46804]

Mrs. Liddell: That is a matter for the Financial Services Authority.

Diesel Duty

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the impact of divergence in diesel duty rates across the EU on United Kingdom competitiveness. [46576]

Dawn Primarolo: Diesel duty rates in other Member States are one of many factors assessed in determining the level of UK rates. This assessment has resulted, in the last Budget, in a package of measures which reflects the Government's commitment to the environment and to promoting a more dynamic business sector.

The Government are committed to achieving their share of the EU target, to reduce greenhouse gas emissions by 8 per cent. by 2008–2012. The commitment to increase road fuel rates by at least 6 per cent. on average in real terms each year reflects this. In addition, the Government intend, over time, to adjust the structure of duties on road fuels to move towards a fairer treatment of unleaded petrol and diesel, when calculated on an energy or carbon basis, and to encourage diesel users to switch to cleaner ultra-low sulphur diesel.

Heavily Indebted Poor Countries

Mr. Cash: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer to the right hon. Member for Hitchen and Harpenden (Mr. Lilley) of 18 May 1998, Official Report, column 291, if he will list by country the value of the outstanding debts on (a) United Kingdom aid loans and (b) loans guaranteed by the British Government through the Export Credits Guarantee Department, for each of the countries defined by the World Bank as severely or moderately indebted; and if he will give equivalent figures for (i) Afghanistan, (ii) Cuba, (iii) Gibraltar and (iv) Iraq. [44998]

Mrs. Liddell: The values of the outstanding claims held by ECGD and DFID, on all of the countries identified by the World Bank in Global Development Finance 1998 as moderately or severely indebted low income countries, are listed in the table. The table also includes the figures for Afghanistan, Cuba, Gibraltar and Iraq. The figures for ECGD's claims give the value of the outstanding principal of the loans at end-1997. The figures for DFID's claims give outstanding principal and interest and are current at end May 1997.

Local Authorities (Asset Sales)

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer on what basis he made his assessment of the amount that local authorities will be able to realise in annual asset sales; and over what period he expects these to be realised. [47038]

Mr. Darling: Local authorities are projected to realise £2¼ billion in asset sales in each of the next three years and in line with recent experience.

Income Tax

Mr. Amess: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer at what proportion of average earnings (a) a sole earner in a married two-parent, two-child family and (b) a single person with no children would start paying income tax in (i) April 1998, (ii) October 1998 and (iii) October 1999 taking into account family credit and the proposed working family tax credit; and how these figures compare with the position taking account of the equivalent benefits in 1968–69. [45994]

Dawn Primarolo: In 1998–99 a single person will start paying income tax at earnings of £81 per week, 24 per cent. of median full-time earnings (£337 per week). A married couple with one earner and 2 children under 11 will start to pay income tax at earnings of £108 per week, 32 per cent. of median full-time earnings. With the introduction of WFTC a married couple with one earner and 2 children under 11 will start to pay income tax at earnings of £245 per week. Additional help with child care is available to working families through the child care tax credit within WFTC. For example, a 2 earner couple on median earnings with 2 children and child care costs of £80 per week will gain £46 per week to this cost.

VAT (Safety Helmets)

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will remove VAT from safety helmets worn by (a) cyclists and (b) motorcyclists. [46702]

Dawn Primarolo: There is no VAT on safety helmets worn by motorcyclists. There is also no VAT on pedal cycle helmets designed for young children and not suitable for older persons.

Millennium Compliance

Mr. Evans: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what action (a) the Government and (b) the Bank of England are taking to assess whether they will be able to make their computers millennium compliant at the same time as making them euro compliant. [45453]

Mrs. Liddell: Government Departments have investigated the impact of the introduction of the euro on their operations. Where these occur steps are in hand to make the necessary preparations. The Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster carries out quarterly reviews across Government on the state of preparedness for the century date change. Copies of the returns from Departments have been placed in the Library. The Bank of England has been undertaking IT preparations necessary for both EMU and Year 2000 for over 2 years. It was decided at an early stage that where there was an overlap in EMU and Year 2000 work and, where it was practical to do so, the Bank would address both issues at the same time.

HIPC Initiative

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what action his Department is taking after the G8 summit and the Foreign Ministers' Meeting regarding the HIPC initiative. [43725]

Mrs. Liddell: The Government will continue to work with other bilateral creditors and the International Financial Institutions to take forward the G8 decisions and to ensure that progress is made towards the Mauritius Mandate targets.

Rating and Council Tax

Mr. Caplin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the outcome of the experiment involving the private sector undertaking work in the rating and council tax fields. [47413]

Dawn Primarolo: The 1995 Next Steps Review of the Valuation Office Agency recommended that experiments be held to establish the feasibility and capability of the private sector to undertake work in the rating and council tax fields. Experiments were held during a 12 month period beginning 1 July 1996 involving contractors in four locations (two performing functions related to council tax and two to non-domestic rating). The results were compared with control offices in the Valuation Office Agency. The experiments have now been evaluated and the conclusions are:

that it is feasible for private firms to meet particular operational requirements of valuation for rating and council tax; but that there is no clear financial or operational advantage in the permanent use of the private sector in the work concerned.

The Government have therefore decided not to take any steps at this stage to contract out rating and council tax valuation work. But if at any time they require valuation work which cannot easily or quickly be delivered within the capacity of the Valuation Office Agency they will look positively at involving the private sector.

I am very grateful to the private sector firms involved in the experiments for an effective example of public sector/private sector partnership.

Departmental Cash Limits

Mr. Derek Twigg: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what changes are proposed to the cash and running costs limits for Her Majesty's Treasury in 1998–99. [47550]

Mr. Darling: Subject to Parliamentary approval of the necessary summer Supplementary Estimate, the running costs limit for Class XVI, Vote 1 will be increased by £6,400,000 from £59,930,000 to £66,330,000 and the cash limit will be increased by £6,400,000 from £56,665,000 to £63,065,000. The increase will be charged to the Reserve and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

The increases are necessary to provide for the costs of a new service providing information to business about the introduction of the euro in January 1999 and will be offset by foregoing the equivalent amount of unused end year flexibility carryover.

Pending Parliamentary approval of the Supplementary Estimate, urgent expenditure estimated at £1,400,000 will be met by a repayable advance from the Contingencies Fund.

WALES

Local Deprivation

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will prepare an Index of Local Deprivation, similar to the one introduced by the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions. [44967]

Mr. Hain: Welsh Office officials are working with the Welsh Local Government Association and other agencies to set up a joint project board to oversee the development of a new Index of socio-economic conditions for Wales. I expect this work, which will take into account the results of the review of the Index of Local Conditions in England, to be completed in about a year.

Further Education Funding Council

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to make changes in the membership of the Further Education Funding Council for Wales prior to the establishment of the National Assembly. [46701]

Mr. Ron Davies: On 14 April I appointed 6 new members and re-appointed two existing members to the FEFCW. I am currently considering appointing one further member and will shortly advertise for a new Chairman to replace the existing incumbent, whose term of office expires next Spring.

Departmental Cash Limits

Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what changes he is proposing to make to the voted cash limits for his Department in the current financial year. [47440]

Mr. Ron Davies: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimates, I intend to increase the cash limit on class XIV, vote 2 by £4,300,000 from £828,763,000 to £833,063,000 as a result of changes resulting from the Dearing review. The increase will be offset by a transfer from the Department for Education and Employment, class IX, vote 1 and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Welsh Assembly

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what educational publicity campaign he plans to undertake, at what estimated cost, to inform electors of the new proportional voting system to be used for the election of the Welsh Assembly. [47140]

Mr. Ron Davies: I regret this information is not yet available. My Department will be undertaking an educational publicity campaign to explain the proportional voting system but the extent and cost of this campaign have yet to be decided.

DEFENCE

Royal Yeomanry and Queen's Own Yeomanry

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the Royal Yeomanry and Queen's Own Yeomanry last underwent the periodic REME examination of their vehicles; and if they passed. [45848]

Dr. Reid [holding answer 18 June 1998]: The most recent Royal Yeomanry Periodic REME Examination was conducted between August 1997 and February 1998. The last Queen's Own Yeomanry Periodic REME Examination was conducted between February and March 1998. The vehicles of both units were graded Satisfactory overall.

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the Queen's Own Yeomanry last carried out their annual gunnery grading, what result they got; and what were the comparable figures for regular armoured reconnaissance units. [45849]

Dr. Reid [holding answer 18 June 1998]: The Queen's Own Yeomanry last conducted a Gunnery Firing Period at Warcop over the period 16–20 April 1997. They carried out all the assessed firing exercises for Territorial Army Yeomanry and achieved a satisfactory standard. The standards laid down for regular armoured reconnaissance units are different from those set for the Territorial Army and therefore it is not possible to make objective comparisons.

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the manning levels for officers and soldiers in (a) the Royal Yeomanry and (b) the Queen's Own Yeomanry. [45850]

Dr. Reid [holding answer 18 June 1998]: The manning level of the Royal Yeomanry as a percentage of its own establishment is 89 per cent. for officers and 82 per cent. for soldiers. The Queen's Own Yeomanry has manning levels of 100 per cent. for officer and 92 per cent. for soldiers.

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the total annual budget for personnel costs, including permanent staff, man training days and bounty, for (a) the Royal Yeomanry and (b) the Queen's Own Yeomanry; and what would be the equivalent cost of manning regiments of similar size and roles with regular soldiers. [45853]

Dr. Reid [holding answer 18 June 1998]: The total annual budgets for personnel costs for the Royal Yeomanry and the Queen's Own Yeomanry are £2.976M and £1.418M respectively. Comparable costs for regular regiments of a similar size and role are not available. However, the costs of paying regular and TA soldiers to perform a particular role for a given period of time are broadly comparable.

Conscientious Objection

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what policy is operated by the armed forces if serving personnel declaré they can no longer, for reasons of conscience, undertake military duties. [46777]

Dr. Reid [holding answer 22 June 1998]: My Department has a well established appeal procedure for Service personnel who, for reasons of conscience, feel unable to continue service. These cases are first considered by the individual's chain of command, and if the conscientious objection is considered to be genuine, arrangements are made for the applicant to be administratively discharged on compassionate grounds

If, after consideration, a conscientious objection is not assessed to be genuine, it will be rejected. Unsuccessful applicants are, however, advised that they may appeal to the Advisory Committee on Conscientious Objectors. This Committee is independent of the MOD and its members are appointed by the Lord Chancellor. It conducts its hearings in public and tenders its advice to the Secretary of State for Defence's representative. A successful appeal to the Advisory Committee is invariably accepted by the Department and the applicant will immediately be granted a release from the Service.

Chemical and Biological Weapons

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what studies he is currently undertaking with the United States military on systems for the detection of chemical and biological weapons. [46545]

Dr. Reid [holding answer 22 June 1998]: The UK is already party to a trilateral Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) with the United States and Canada on chemical and biological defence. Under the auspices of this MOU, my Department embarked upon a programme to develop a joint approach to chemical and biological defence and collaboration across a full range of defensive measures, including systems for the detection of chemical and biological agents. As part of this programme, we have undertaken joint tests and field trials with both the US and Canada to establish the effectiveness of available technology for the detection of chemical and biological agents.

I have recently agreed with the US Defence Secretary that we should increase co-operation to combat chemical and biological weapons. This will further deepen the existing close collaboration in this area.

Dundrennan Test Range

Mr. Alasdair Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library the most recent environmental and radiological survey undertaken at and around the Dundrennan, Kirkcudbrightshire, test range. [46783]

Mr. Spellar: The survey to which the hon. Member refers was conducted by the Radiation Protection Services section (DRPS) of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency. Arrangements were made last June, through the Parliamentary Branch of the Ministry of Defence, for an updated list of all unclassified DRPS reports to be placed in the House of Commons Library. The list includes details of published reports of the most recent environmental and radiological survey undertaken at and around the Dundrennan test range in Kirkcudbrightshire. These are DRPS Report No 6/97, "1996 Environmental Depleted Uranium Baseline Survey Report DTEO Kirkcudbright" and DRPS Report No 10/97, "1996 Marine Environmental Survey Report DTEO Kirkcudbright". It was decided at the time that it was not a practical option to place reports (including DRPS Reports 6 and 10/97) themselves in the House Library but that copies would be available on a case by case basis on request. I understand the hon. Member has made such a request and that arrangements are in hand for him to receive copies of the reports in question.

Berlin Airlift

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps the Ministry of Defence Postal and Courier Services are taking to commemorate the Berlin Airlift; and if he will make a statement. [47076]

Mr. Spellar: The British Forces Post Office, BFPO, a part of the Defence Postal and Courier Services, is issuing a philatelic cover bearing a special handstamp on 26 June 1998 to commemorate the 50th Anniversary of the start of the Berlin Airlift. These special commemorative philatelic covers will be available from the BFPO on that date.

Air Transport Procurement

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will make a statement on the leasing of four Boeing C-17 transport aircraft; and what effect this will have on the Future Large Aircraft; [47309]

(2) how many jobs will be created in the UK in the production of those C-17s to be leased by his Department. [46964]

Mr. Spellar: Our air transport requirement has been scrutinised closely in the Strategic Defence Review. Any decision on future air transport procurement will be made in light of the conclusions of the Review and of the responses to the Requests for Proposals.

Defence Exports

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps he has taken to protect British (a) public funds and (b) exporters where defence exports on a Government to Government basis are paid for in oil and gas; and how he seeks to protect the volume and value of such exports from falling oil and gas prices. [46468]

Mr. Spellar: There are no Government to Government defence projects which involve Her Majesty's Government taking oil or gas as payment.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Creative Industries

Mrs. Ellman: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment he has made of the economic impact of the creative industries in (a) the North West Region, (b) Liverpool and (c) Merseyside in terms of (i) jobs, (ii) turnover, (iii) company formation and (iv) tourism. [46233]

Mr. Tom Clarke: The creative industries can be a powerful economic driving force in local and regional economies, but detailed statistics on the scale of their economic impact in particular parts of the country are not currently available. The Creative Industries Task Force has collated data which show that the creative industries nationally generate revenues of around £55 billion, contributing 4 per cent. to GDP, and employ some 1.5 million people. The Task Force is now turning its attention to assessing the position in different regions.

Tourism

Mr. Soames: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what are the aims and objectives of his policy on tourism; and what the achievements of these policies have been since 1 May 1997. [46663]

Mr. Tom Clarke [holding answer 19 June 1998]: We are in the process of developing a comprehensive strategy for tourism. We want to see quality tourism development which is economically, environmentally and socially sustainable, and which supports the Government's employment objectives and their wish to see a more inclusive society. Our aims and objectives for tourism will be set out in more detail when we publish the new strategy later this year.

Achievements since last May include the establishment of an expanded, fully representative Tourism Forum; and the establishment of new Working Groups on Strategic Planning, Widening Access and Domestic Tourism, with sub groups on Quality, Distribution and Sustainability. These have now reported, as have the Working Groups on Communications, Business Tourism, People and Visitor Attractions. In addition, we have launched Tourism—Towards Sustainability, a nationwide consultation exercise on sustainable tourism and have held the first sectoral conference on New Deal for the tourism, hospitality and leisure industry, which has led to a very positive response from the industry.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Public Trust Office

34. Mr. Faber: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will review the operation of the Public Trust Office. [45605]

39. Mr. Hammond: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what plans he has to review the operation of the Public Trust Office. [45610]

Mr. Hoon: As the hon. Members are aware the Office will be subject to the usual five yearly review in 1999. This will be a comprehensive examination of all aspects of the Office's performance.

Community Disputes

36. Ms Rosie Winterton: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many times he has met local authority representatives to discuss uniformity of decision making in community disputes. [45607]

Mr. Hoon: I have not met local authorities to discuss this subject.

Barristers' Earnings

37. Mr. Winnick: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make a statement on the level of legal aid fees paid to senior Queen's Counsels. [45608]

Mr. Hoon: Criminal higher expenditure on QCs rose by 167 per cent. between 1991/92 and 1994/95, from £15m to around £40m. In the last three years total expenditure under this head has remained more or less at that level in real terms. Figures for civil legal aid are not available.

Litigation (Offshore Companies)

38. Dr. Whitehead: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what steps he is taking to ensure that litigants in civil disputes with companies are not denied redress as a result of company registrations in the Channel Islands. [45609]

Mr. Hoon: If a company is registered in the Channel Islands enforcement action can still be taken against assets held by it in England and Wales.

Women Judges

40. Jackie Ballard: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many women judges have been appointed since 2 May 1997; and what percentage this is of the total number of appointments. [45611]

Mr. Hoon: Since 2 May 1997, six women Circuit Judges have been appointed out of a total of 34 (18 per cent.); seven women District Judges out of a total of 26 (27 per cent.); and one woman Stipendiary Magistrate out of a total of four (25 per cent.). During the same period nine High Court Judges, five Lord Justices of Appeal and one Lord of Appeal in Ordinary were also appointed. None of those was a woman.

Personal Injury Claims

41. Mr. Dismore: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what plans he has to regulate the activities of unqualified claims assessors in personal injury claims. [45612]

Mr. Hoon: I am considering representations made to me by the Association of Personal Injury Lawyers when I met them recently to discuss their concerns about claims assessors.

Magistrates Courts

42. Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will (a) meet a deputation from the Association of Essex Councils over the closure of magistrates courts in Essex and (b) halt the closures pending a policy review involving the association. [45613]

Mr. Hoon: (a) During the course of this appeal I have already met with both parties and three local MPs. Essex County Council and Braintree and Uttlesford District Councils have been fully involved throughout. (b) Closures cannot be halted for any reason other than a successful appeal in accordance with section 56 of the Justices of the Peace Act 1997 from a magistrates' courts committee's determination or by the rescinding of such a determination by the magistrates' courts committee. The Lord Chancellor has no plans to conduct a policy review.

Legal Aid (Divorce Proceedings)

43. Mr. Swayne: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what plans he has to review the availability of legal aid for divorce proceedings. [45614]

Mr. Hoon: The Government have announced their plans for modernising the delivery of publicly funded legal services for all types of proceedings including divorce.

Family Law

Yvette Cooper: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department when the Advisory Board on Family Law intends to publish its first annual report. [47388]

Mr. Hoon: The Advisory Board on Family Law has today published its first annual report and copies have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Teacher Training

Mr. Sawford: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many places were available for teacher training in each year since 1990; and how many were filled in each year. [46844]

Ms Estelle Morris: The table shows the target and actual intake to initial teacher training for the years 1990–91 to 1997–98.

Target and actual recruitment to initial teacher training (ITT) courses in England: 1990–91 to 1997–98

Further Education (Hampshire)

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many further education colleges in Hampshire had a budget deficit in (a) 1995–96, (b) 1996–97 and (c) 1997–98. [46005]

Dr. Howells: The following table shows the number of colleges in Hampshire which had operating deficits for the academic years ended 31 July 1996 and 1997 and forecast an operating deficit for the academic year ended 31 July 1998.

Colleges in Hampshire with operating deficits

Year ended	Number of colleges with budgeted deficits
1995–96	14
1996–97	11
1997–98 (forecast)	13

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what were the average efficiency savings made by further education colleges in Hampshire in 1997–98. [46002]

Dr. Howells: The Department calculates efficiency gains for the FE sector on a national basis only. The expected efficiency gain for the financial year 1997–98 is 3.0 per cent.

National Vocational Qualifications

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on progress in the transfer of responsibilities for setting NVQ standards from his Department to the Qualifications and Curriculum Authority. [47287]

Dr. Howells: From 1 April 1998, the Qualifications and Curriculum Authority, acting jointly with the Scottish Qualifications Authority, and in consultation with the Qualifications, Curriculum and Assessment Authority for Wales, and the Training and Education Agency for Northern Ireland, became responsible for the procurement and approval of the national occupational standards which form the basis of National Vocational Qualifications and Scottish Vocational Qualifications.

Universities

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to provide funding for the updating of facilities in universities. [46595]

Dr. Howells: For 1998–99 my right hon. Friend has provided a funding package which will allow an extra £165 million to be spent on higher education. This includes an additional £125 million for universities and colleges in England to maintain and improve quality and standards, and to make a start on the backlog of maintenance and equipment replacement.

Decisions on funding for higher education for 1999–2000 and beyond will depend on the outcome of the Comprehensive Spending Review, due to be announced next month.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what statistics his Department collects on the staff to student ratio in universities. [46596]

Dr. Howells: The Department uses data on staff and students collected by the Higher Education Statistics Agency in order to calculate a sector level student to staff ratio in higher education institutions in England.

The latest available student to staff ratios, as published in the 1998 Departmental Report, are 16.5 in 1994–95 and 16.6 in 1995–96.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to review the curricula taught in universities (a) nationally and (b) the West Midlands. [46598]

Dr. Howells: The Secretary of State has no plans to review the curricula taught in universities either nationally or in the West Midlands.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what statistics his Department collects on the ratio of students to faculty in universities (a) nationally and (b) in the West Midlands. [46597]

Dr. Howells: The available statistics on enrolments as at 1 December 1997 are analysed by subject of course rather than faculty.

In 1997–98, the latest year for which information is available, the number and proportion of full-time and part-time students by course subject in higher education institutions in the UK and in the West Midlands were as given in the following table:

Higher education enrolments in UK higher education institutions and those in the West Midlands analysed by subject, 1997–98

Collective Acts of Worship

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will make a statement on the Government's policy on collective acts of worship in schools. [47285]

Ms Estelle Morris: The Government are committed to the current statutory requirements: the School Standards and Framework Bill is applying these requirements to the new school framework with minimal adjustments.

Sixth Form Education

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many pupils have entered secondary school sixth forms to study A-levels (a) in the West Midlands and (b) Staffordshire in each of the last five years; and what was each figure as a percentage change on the previous year. [45856]

Dr. Howells: The available information is shown in the table.

Number of 16 year old pupils studying A levels in maintained secondary schools
West Midlands and Staffordshire LEA area

	Position in January each year
	1994	1995	1996	1997	1998[1]

[1] Provisional

[2] Stoke became a unitary authority separate from Staffordshire in April 1997; the provisional figures for Staffordshire (excluding Stoke) and Stoke LEA areas in January 1998 were 2,897 and 153 respectively

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many students entered the further education sector to study A-levels (a) in the West Midlands and (b) Staffordshire in each of the last five years; and what was each figure as a percentage change on the previous year. [45857]

Dr. Howells: The following table contains the available figures on the number of students in the further education sector in England studying A/AS levels, and the percentage change from the previous year.

	1994-95	1995-96	1996-97
West Midlands
Number of students	31,261	30,511	30,670
Percentage change from previous year	-	-2.40	+0.52
Staffordshire
Number of students	5,718	5,533	5,696
Percentage change from previous year	-	-3.34	+2.85

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans he has to (a) encourage and (b) aid schools to create consortia to provide a range of A-level courses in their area. [45855]

Dr. Howells: We are working with the Local Government Association (LGA), Further Education Funding Council (FEFC) and TEC National Council (TNC) to promote greater collaboration in post-16 education. This may include partnerships between schools or between schools, colleges and other parties, building on existing arrangements where appropriate. We expect this collaborative activity to improve the quality of educational opportunities, breadth of curriculum and choice for young people. We support the efforts of existing partnerships, the Tamworth Opportunities Post-16 collaboration being one example.

Music

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what representations he has received on the role of music in the curriculum. [47284]

Ms Estelle Morris: The Department has received a number of representations from organisations and individuals about the contribution which music can make to every child's education and its importance in supporting their cultural, spiritual and social development. Music remains a National Curriculum foundation subject and will continue to be taught in schools.

Departmental Cash Limits

Mr. Hope: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what changes he plans to announce to cash limits and running costs limits within his responsibility for 1998-99. [47412]

Dr. Howells: Subject to Parliamentary approval of the necessary Revised Estimate, the cash limit for Class IX, Vote 1, Department for Education and Employment: programmes and central services will be amended as follows:

Class	Vote	Existing cash limit	Change	New cash limit
IX	1	10,359,290,000	-2,870,000	10,356,420,000

The reduction is the net effect of a machinery of government change in policy responsibility whereby £1,130,000 of provision for early years is being transferred from Class XI, Vote 2 (the Department of Health), offset by a transfer of £4,000,000 to Class XI, Vote 1 (the Department of Health) to take account of changes arising from the Dearing Review. The transfer is part of an overall transfer of £6,600,000 to the Department of Health, the remainder of which is being found from the Department's non-cash limited expenditure. £4,300,000 is also being transferred from our non-cash limited provision to Class XIV, Vote 2 (the Welsh Office) as a result of the Dearing changes.

The running costs provision within the Control Total will be increased by £715,000 from £249,833,000 to £250,548,000. £75,000 of this increase is due to the machinery of government change and the remaining £640,000 is as a result of a virement from Section B of the Vote to cover increased administration costs in connection with the Skills Programme.

The non-voted cash limit, DfEE/ERDF, will be decreased by £1,395,000 from £26,912,000 to £25,517,000 as a result of a transfer to the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions (Class VI, Vote 2) in connection with the Liverpool institute of Performing Arts.

The control total elements of the increases will be offset by transfers or charged to the Reserve and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

School Performance

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what criteria he applied in compiling the list of the top 100 schools. [46496]

Mr. Byers: In order to be included in the list, schools had to show sustained improvement in the proportion of pupils achieving 5 or more GCSE grades A*-C or the GNVQ equivalent in each of the years from 1994 to 1997.

School Inspections

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what procedures he has instituted to ensure that Ofsted inspectors and their teams meet the minimum standard laid down by him. [46501]

Mr. Byers: HM Chief Inspector of Schools is responsible for monitoring standards in the school inspection system. I have asked him to write to my hon. Friend and to place a copy of his letter in the Library.

Local Management of Schools

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many (a) headteachers and governing bodies and (b) other organisations and individuals have so far responded (i) favourably and (ii) unfavourably to his proposals for further delegation under the Local Management of Schools initiative. [46719]

Mr. Byers: The Government's consultation paper "Fair Funding: Improving Delegation to Schools" was issued on 29 May, with a request for responses by 31 July. No detailed analysis of responses has yet been undertaken.

Special Schools

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if he will list the maintained special schools in the United Kingdom, by local education authority, and indicate the special educational needs for which each school caters. [46427]

Ms Estelle Morris: The special schools maintained by each local education authority in England have been listed in a table, copies of which have been placed in the Library.

The list is drawn from schools' returns to the Department in January 1998. These returns include updated information about schools' specialisms; this has not yet been analysed, but I will write to the hon. Member with further information as soon as possible.

Information about special schools in Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland is the responsibility of my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Scotland, for Wales and for Northern Ireland.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Sierra Leone

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) which Ministers in (a) his Department and (b) other departments received copies of the information on alleged United Nations sanctions breaking by Sandline International prepared for Baroness Symons on 10 March; and on what date it was received by each private office; [46019]

(2) Ministers in (a) his Department and (b) other departments were provided with or informed of the information on alleged United Nations sanctions breaking by Sandline International prepared for Baroness Symons on 10 March; and on what date and by what means the information was transmitted to the Ministers; [46018]

(3) if the information on alleged United Nations sanctions breaking by Sandline International provided for Baroness Symons on 10 March was copied to (a) his Private Office (b) the office of another Minister in his Department and (c) any other Minister of Her Majesty's Government. [46020]

Mr. Robin Cook [holding answer 16 June 1998]: A side-copy of briefing provided for my noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for her answer to a Parliamentary question on 10 March 1998, Official Report, House of Lords, columns 99–101, was marked to the office of the Minister of State, my hon. Friend the Member for Manchester, Central (Mr. Lloyd), but, as would generally be the case for briefing prepared for another Minister, he was not shown it. The briefing was copied to no other Minister.

Departmental Reviews

Mr. Allan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list, for each of the last four years, all departmental inquiries and reviews instigated by ministers which have been chaired by individuals outside his Department; and in each case if he will give the date of establishment and the name of the chairman. [46832]

Mr. Fatchett: I list in the table those inquiries and reviews set up by Ministers in the last four years and chaired by someone from outside Government. The list excludes advisory committees established to provide on-going advice (such as those advisory Non-Departmental Public Bodies listed in "Public Bodies 1997") and inquiries set up routinely in pursuance of responsibilities under statutory requirement.

Pakistan

Mr. McNulty: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the persecution of Christians in Pakistan. [46920]

Mr. Fatchett: Although the rights of religious minorities are protected by Pakistan's Constitution, there are reports of abuses against minorities by groups and individuals, and concerns about the implementation of the blasphemy laws.

Our High Commission in Islamabad led an EU demarche to the Pakistan authorities on 14 May about the situation of religious minorities. We made clear the EU's concern about the death penalty imposed on Ayub Masih, a Christian, for blasphemy, and the negative effect such cases can have on inter-faith relations in Pakistan.

Departmental Cash Limits

Mr. Woolas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what changes he proposes to make in his Department's cash limits and running costs limits for 1998–99. [47551]

Mr. Fatchett: Subject to Parliamentary approval of the necessary Revised Estimate, the cash limit for Class II, Vote 1 (Overseas Representation) will be reduced by £2,261,000 from £590,265,000 to £588,004,000. This reduction takes account of transfers of responsibility to the newly established Department for International Development (Class III, Vote 1). It also reflects the movement of the Wilton Park executive agency from a net running cost regime to a gross running cost regime. This does not change the overall cash limit.

The gross running costs limit on Class II, Vote 1 will be reduced by £509,000 from £511,044,000 to £510,535,000.

The changes will not add to the planned total of public expenditure.

International Criminal Court

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on Her Majesty's Government's policy towards the creation of the International Criminal Court, indicating those areas of jurisdiction for such a Court which it is the policy of Her Majesty's Government to support. [45780]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: We continue to support the establishment of an effective International Criminal Court, and will do all we can to ensure a successful outcome to the Diplomatic Conference which is currently taking place in Rome. In my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Nuneaton (Mr. Olner) of 24 February 1998, Official Report, column 191, I drew attention to a paper on Government policy towards the proposed Court which we had placed in the Libraries of the House. My noble Friend Lord Whitty also made a detailed statement of our policy on the Court in a debate in another place on 11 June 1998, Official Report, House of Lords, columns 947–62. We believe that the Court should have jurisdiction over genocide, crimes against humanity and war crimes. We also believe that the Court should have jurisdiction over the crime of aggression where the UN Security Council has determined that an act of aggression has taken place, and provided that the crime is properly defined in the Statute.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is Her Majesty's Government's policy on the appointment of an international prosecutor to investigate independently crime within the jurisdiction of the International Criminal Court in circumstances where (a) the UN Security Council and (b) individual members of the national Government have not given their consent. [45781]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: We have reserved our position on whether the Prosecutor of the International Criminal Court should have the power to initiate investigations on his or her own authority in circumstances in which a situation has not been referred either by the UN Security Council or by a State Party to the Court. Irrespective of how an investigation is initiated, however, we believe that the Prosecutor should be independent of Governments in the conduct of his investigations. The consent of the State where an alleged crime had taken place should not be required before an investigation or prosecution in respect of that crime can take place, if that State is a Party to the Treaty establishing the Court. Nor should the approval of the Security Council be necessary for an investigation or a prosecution to take place.

Cyprus

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what proposals he has for the granting of full civil rights to inhabitants of the sovereign bases in Cyprus. [45818]

Dr. Reid: I have been asked to reply.

There are no plans to change the arrangements for the administration of the Sovereign Base Areas.

The Sovereign Base Areas are administered in accordance with the "Declaration by Her Majesty's Government regarding the Administration of the Sovereign Base Areas", included as Appendix O to Command 1093, in which HMG published the Treaty of Establishment and other documents concerning the 1960 Cyprus settlement. In accordance with Appendix O, the "main objects to be achieved" in the administration of the Areas are:

1. Effective use of the Sovereign Base Areas as military bases.
2. Full cooperation with the Republic of Cyprus.
3. Protection of the interest of those resident in the Sovereign Base Areas.

Appendix O makes provision for freedom of access and communications to and through the Sovereign Base Areas; freedom of employment and cultivation in the Sovereign Base Areas; full protection of the rights of Cypriots (and others resident in the Republic) and Cypriot communities and corporations in regard to property; arrangements for legal proceedings concerning civil rights and obligations in which all parties are Cypriots to take place in the Courts of the Republic; and for the enforcement within the Sovereign Base Areas of the judgments and orders of such Courts in such proceedings.

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what arrests have been made of civilians in the sovereign bases in Cyprus in the last year; and if he will make a statement. [45819]

Dr. Reid: I have been asked to reply.

The Sovereign Base Areas are a British Overseas Territory of 98 square miles on the island of Cyprus and operate under British civil law. The laws of the Sovereign Base Areas are as far as possible the same as the laws of the Republic of Cyprus. SBA laws are enforced by the SBA Police, a civilian force comprising mainly of Cypriot officers. The Areas have their own properly constituted civilian court, with an independent civil judiciary.

Some seven thousand Cypriot civilians live in the Areas, and many other civilians travel through them by road, especially during the summer tourist season.

In the year to 31 March 1998, the number of arrests of civilians in the Sovereign Base Areas was 236.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Schools (Capital Works)

Mr. Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland which schools are under consideration for major capital works; what the estimated cost is of each project; on what dates the Department of Education recognised that each school satisfied categories 1, 2 or 3 of the school capital priorities schedule or equivalent; and on what dates her Department approved in principle the appointment of an architect to put in place a suitable scheme. [46282]

Mr. Worthington: There are over 200 major works projects in the Schools Capital Priorities Planning List and I will write to the hon. Member giving details of these schemes. Estimated costs are not available for many of the schemes which are at a very early stage of planning or where planning has been suspended.

There are 125 projects in priority Categories 1, 2 and 3. All projects in these categories have received approval to take forward detailed planning. Information is not readily available about the dates each project entered the Planning List or when approval was given to the appointment of consultant architects in each case, and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Ms Rita O'Hare

Mr. Donaldson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans she has to pursue extradition proceedings against Ms Rita O'Hare. [46283]

Mr. Ingram: The High Court in the Republic of Ireland ruled in 1978 that Rita O'Hare should not be extradited to Northern Ireland, on the ground that the offences that she was alleged to have committed fell within political offence exemption. That does not preclude the possibility of the Government seeking Ms O'Hare's extradition if she were to travel to another jurisdiction with which extradition arrangements exist. However, as to the future, it is not the Government's practice to disclose whether or not extradition proceedings are planned.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

National Minimum Wage

Mr. Baldry: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to her oral statement of 18 June 1998, Official Report, columns 507–19, if she will list the range of estimates her Department has produced relating to the impact of a minimum wage on employment levels. [47141]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The Government share the Low Pay Commission's view that the national minimum wage set at the level proposed should have no significant impact on employment.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will estimate the net cost or benefit to (a) Government, (b) employers and (c) employees of the minimum wage proposals in the first 12 months of its operation. [47235]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The national minimum wage will bring benefits to all. It will encourage people to move from dependence on state benefits into work; employers' productivity will improve as the morale of their workforces rises and staff turnover falls. The minimum wage set at the level proposed will help some 2 million low paid workers escape from poverty pay.

Patent Office

Dr. Cable: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many complaints her Department has received about the cost of lodging an objection with the Patent Office in the last 12 months for which figures are available. [47046]

Mr. Ian McCartney: There are two routes available under the Trade Marks Act 1994 to anyone who wishes to object to an application to register a trade mark. Section 38(2) provides for any person to lodge opposition. The present fee for this is £200, and the opponent then becomes a party to proceedings before the Registrar. However, under section 38(3), a person may make written observations without payment of any fee, and without becoming a party to proceedings.

In the 12 month period to the end of May 1998, over 1,600 oppositions and more than 130 observations were filed. The Registrar is aware of only one formal complaint in that period about the cost of filing opposition.

Seafarers

Helen Jackson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if United Kingdom seafarers are covered by the proposed fairness at work legislation. [47132]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The proposals in the White Paper will apply to seamen to the same extent as they are covered by existing legislation in the areas dealt with by the White Paper.

EU Structural Funds

Mr. Keetch: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement on the use of EU structural funds for the recreational uses of inland waterways as part of rural employment policy. [46957]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 22 June 1998]: The uses to which the Structural Funds can be put are determined by programme documents agreed between the Government and the Commission. They concentrate on activities which will increase employability and competitiveness in the regions concerned.

In rural areas eligible under the Funds these programme documents will include tourism as one of their priorities. Projects which increase tourism potential, including those for recreational uses of inland waterways, will be eligible. In all cases, projects will be selected on the basis of criteria which will seek to maximise value for money.

Maternity Leave

Mr. Rooney: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what estimate he has made of how many women will benefit from the proposed extension of maternity leave from 14 weeks to 18 weeks. [46991]

Mr. Ian McCartney [holding answer 22 June 1998]: The extension of statutory maternity leave from 14 weeks to 18 weeks will improve the statutory right to leave for the 2.3 million women employees with less than one year's service who could choose to exercise it in the event that they become pregnant.

Mr. Rooney: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what estimate he has made of how many women will benefit from the proposed reduction from two years to one year in the qualifying period for extended maternity leave. [46996]

Mr. Ian McCartney [holding answer 22 June 1998]: The reduction in the qualifying period for extended maternity absence will extend this statutory right to a further 1.4 million women employees who could choose to exercise it in the event that they become pregnant. This is one of a package of family friendly policies which will also benefit families, including children, and the labour market.

Export Credit Loans

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will list the dates on which export credit loans to Governments and Government agencies have been rescheduled since 1990, indicating in each case for what values and with which countries. [46487]

Mrs. Roche: The Government do not provide export credit loans direct to other governments. Official export credits are those guaranteed or insured by the Export Credits Guarantee Department. ECGD has negotiated over 100 debt rescheduling agreements with 45 countries since January 1990. It should be noted that many debts originated in the seventies and eighties and have been rescheduled several times. Consequently details of debt rescheduled for the first time under each agreement are not readily available. To aggregate the debt under all agreements with each debtor country would result in a high degree multiple counting. The figure shown in the third column of the table is the approximate amount of debt treated under the latest signed agreements only.

[1] In neg. 1998

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade which countries have asked for the cancellation or rescheduling of export credit loans since 1 May 1997 which have not yet been agreed. [46488]

Mrs. Roche: None. Jordan, Cameroon, Cote d'Ivoire, Nicaragua, Uganda and Senegal have approached the Paris Club for debt reduction and/or rescheduling since 1 May 1997. Agreement has been reached in all cases. No other debtor countries have formally sought rescheduling through the Paris Club during this period.

Renewable Energy

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what (a) amount and (b) percentage of the United Kingdom's electricity supply were supplied by renewable sources in each year since the non-fossil fuel obligation was introduced in 1989. [43224]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 3 June 1998]: The following table shows information on electricity from renewable sources for the years since 1989. Generation from all renewable sources is included, not just those sources supported by the non-fossil fuel obligation. The amount of electricity available from hydro sources in a particular year depends on rainfall in the preceding period. Dry weather affected output from hydro stations in 1991, 1993 and 1996. When hydro electricity is excluded, other renewable sources are shown to be providing an increasing proportion of generation in the UK, and their contribution in 1997 was 4½ times that in 1989.

Since coming into office I have repeatedly stressed my commitment to renewable energies. Indeed within weeks of the election I announced a review of renewable energy policy including consideration of what would be necessary and practicable for the UK to achieve a 10 per cent. contribution from renewable resources towards electricity generation by 2010. I can confirm that we remain committed to the 10 per cent. target and expect to make a further announcement in due course. The announcement of policy proposals for the fifth non-fossil fuel obligation round which I made on 25 November 1997, Official Report, columns 507–10, will be the first step in our new and strong drive for renewables and I expect NFFO-5 will contribute substantially to reducing greenhouse gases and encouraging internationally competitive industries. I expect to make this Order later this year.

Buried Ordnance

Mr. Key: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if Her Majesty's Government have made a declaration to The Hague in accordance with its obligations under the Chemical Weapons Convention in connection with buried ordnance at East Gomeldon in Wiltshire; and if she will make a statement. [46025]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 17 June 1998]: In May 1997 the United Kingdom submitted to the Organisation for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons in The Hague an initial declaration of old chemical weapons, predating 1 January 1946, unearthed on its territory. This information is updated as necessary. The Convention does not require the declaration of chemical weapons buried before 1 January 1977 and which remain buried.

Mr. Key: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if sections 5 and 6 of the Chemical Weapons Act 1996 apply to the land adjacent to the Nuclear, Chemical and Biological Centre at Winterbourne Gunner where buried ordnance has been identified; and if she will make a statement. [46024]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 17 June 1998]: The Chemical Weapons Act 1996 provides the legislative framework to implement the Chemical Weapons Convention in the United Kingdom. All areas of the United Kingdom are covered by sections 5 and 6 of the Act.

Working Time Directive

Mr. Pike: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment she has made of the implications for the duties of The Health and Safety Executive of the EU Directive on the organisation of working time and the protection of young people at work; and if she will make a statement. [46754]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The recent Government proposals outlined in the consultation on draft Working Time Regulations proposed an enforcement role for the HSE. The details of this and an estimate of the costs of enforcement are set out in a consultation document published on 8 April. A copy is available in the Library of the House.

Small Businesses

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will estimate the percentage of companies in the United Kingdom which employ fewer than 20 persons. [46731]

Mrs. Roche: At the start of 1996, the latest date for which data are available, 97.7 per cent. of enterprises in the UK (including sole traders) employed fewer than 20 people.

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will estimate the number of employees in the United Kingdom who work for companies that employ fewer than 20 persons. [46732]

Mrs. Roche: At the start of 1996, the latest date for which data are available, there were 4.3 million employees in enterprises in the UK employing fewer than 20 persons.

SCOTLAND

Celtic Heritage

9. Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will introduce measures to improve cultural links relating to Celtic heritage between Scotland and (a) Wales, (b) Cornwall, (c) the Isle of Man, (d) Brittany and (e) Ireland. [45579]

Mr. McLeish: Cultural links between Scotland and the other peoples of the Celtic heritage are being made by a variety of organisations, including the Scottish Arts Council and the Gaelic National Arts Agency. I expect that these bodies will continue to develop their links.

Agenda 2000

10. Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the Agenda 2000 proposals for EU structural funding. [45580]

Mr. Dewar: As I said when I spoke for the UK at the Informal Council of Ministers meeting on Regional Policy in Glasgow on 9 June, the reform of the Structural Funds must be affordable, durable and transparent. The reform must also be fair to all Member states whether acceding or established.

Textile Industry

11. Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions he has had with Scottish Enterprise on the development of a strategy for the textile industry in Scotland. [45581]

Mr. Wilson: My right hon. Friend and I frequently meet representatives of Scottish Enterprise and the local enterprise companies. As the hon. Member is aware, I met the Chairman and Chief Executive of Scottish Borders Enterprise, in his company, on 18 June. I also plan to pay a further visit to the Borders next month.

Trunk Roads

13. Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the progress of his review of plans for investment in improvements to the trunk road network. [45583]

Mr. McLeish: We will consult shortly on a draft revised appraisal framework for prioritising investment on the trunk road network and intend to complete the strategic roads review later this year.

Exchange Rate

14. Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement about the effects of the current exchange rate on Scottish manufacturing industry. [45584]

Mr. Wilson: Although the current level of sterling is a concern to many businesses, Scottish firms retain an impressive ability to compete successfully in both domestic and overseas markets.

The latest official data show that Scottish manufactured output rose by 7.7 per cent. in 1997.

Breast Cancer Services

15. Mr. Sarwar: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to improve breast cancer services for women in Scotland. [45585]

Mr. Dewar: Cancer, including breast cancer, remains one of the priority areas for the NHS in Scotland. We are therefore doing a great deal, all of it geared to providing the best possible service for those suffering from this devastating disease.

Direct Labour Organisations

16. Mr. Forth: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement about the future of direct labour organisations in Scotland. [45586]

Mr. Dewar: I refer the right hon. Gentleman to the oral answer I gave to the hon. Member for Faversham and Mid-Kent (Mr. Rowe) today, Official Report, column 831.

Local Government Finance

17. Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he next intends to meet Glasgow city council to discuss local government finance. [45587]

Mr. Dewar: I consult the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities on local government finance and am also in regular contact with Glasgow City Council.

Public Sector Housing

18. Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the level of investment in public sector housing in Scotland since 1990. [45588]

Mr. McLeish: We are already tackling the legacy of under-investment in housing which we inherited. We have committed an extra £66 million, including £45 million for New Housing Partnerships. We are also looking at housing investment within the Comprehensive Spending Review.

Higher Education

19. Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will meet Ministers in the Department for Education and Employment to discuss entry qualifications for higher education. [45589]

Mr. Wilson: I have no plans to do so; entry qualifications are primarily a matter for individual higher education providers.

Interest Rates

20. Mr. Swinney: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has made to the Chancellor of the Exchequer regarding the impact of interest rates on the Scottish economy. [45590]

Mr. Wilson: I am in regular contact with the Chancellor of the Exchequer about the Scottish economy.

We are agreed that low inflation is in the interests of every part of the United Kingdom. Interest rates are set by the Monetary Policy Committee of the Bank of England to meet the Government's inflation target of 2½ per cent.

Schools (Early Intervention and Literacy Programmes)

21. Mr. Connarty: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what progress has been made in introducing the early intervention and literacy programmes to Scottish schools; and if he will make a statement. [45591]

Mr. Wilson: Early intervention schemes are under way in all education authority areas in Scotland.

Minimum Wage

22. Mr. Alasdair Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met the Scottish Trades Union Congress to discuss the minimum wage in Scotland. [45593]

Mr. Wilson: My right hon. Friend addressed the STUC Annual Congress on 20 April 1998 on a range of issues, including the proposed National Minimum Wage.

North Lanarkshire

23. Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on (a) the number of electors and (b) the amount of council tax raised per household in 1997–98 in the North Lanarkshire local authority. [45594]

Mr. Dewar: There were 246,452 persons on the electoral roll of North Lanarkshire at 16 February 1997.

The number of chargeable dwellings, on 7 October 1996, was 128,980. North Lanarkshire budgeted to raise £71.8 million in council tax in 1997–98, an average of £556.30 per chargeable dwelling.

25. Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland which committee of North Lanarkshire council is responsible for the direct labour organisation. [45596]

Mr. Dewar: The Construction Services Committee is responsible for the Direct Labour Organisation within North Lanarkshire.

Health Service

26. Mr. Chisholm: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he will issue guidelines concerning primary care trusts and local healthcare co-operatives. [45597]

Mr. Dewar: I have no immediate plans to issue guidelines. Development of primary care trusts and local healthcare co-operatives is being taken forward through local discussion and meetings. I do not wish to impose any central blueprint on that process but we have set up a central organisational development team, with a £1 million budget, to help Health Boards develop LHCCs.

27. Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the future configuration of national health service trusts in Scotland; and when he expects to introduce proposed legislation. [45598]

Mr. Dewar: Detailed proposals for new NHS Trust configurations are currently the subject of public consultation in each Health Board area. Subject to the outcome of public consultation, I expect to be in a position to take decisions about the new configurations in late summer. No new primary legislation is required to establish NHS Trusts in Scotland to a new configuration. Legislation required to implement some of the proposals set out in "Designed to Care: Renewing the National Health Service in Scotland" (Cm 3811) will be introduced when a suitable opportunity arises.

North Sea Oil and Gas

28. Sir Robert Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made of the economic impact on Scotland of the Government's proposed changes in the North sea oil and gas tax regime. [45599]

Mr. Wilson: Any assessment will depend on the North Sea fiscal regime consultation document, which has yet to be issued. I am well informed on the importance of the oil and gas industry to the Scottish economy.

Export Initiatives

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met representatives of the Scottish Council Development and Industry to discuss export initiatives. [45595]

Mr. Wilson: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland and I meet the Scottish Council Development and Industry from time to time to discuss a range of economic development issues. The Scottish Council is also represented on the Scottish Export Forum, which I chair and which met only the other week.

Skye Toll Bridge

Mr. Charles Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what account he took of Schedule 1 to the Skye Bridge Crossing Toll Order in allowing the sale of books of 20 discounted tickets for the Skye Toll Bridge. [46717]

Mr. McLeish: The Invergarry-Kyle of Lochalsh Trunk Road (A87) Extension (Skye Bridge Crossing) Toll Order (Variation) Order 1997 (S.I.1997/2941) was laid on 11 December 1997 and came into force on 1 January 1998. Under the terms of this Order, Schedule 1 to The Invergarry-Kyle of Lochalsh Trunk Road (A87) Extension (Skye Bridge Crossing) Toll Order 1992 (S.I.1992/1501) was varied to set lower base tolls for all categories of vehicles eligible for discounts and to provide for the sale of books of 20 non-transferable discount vouchers for motorcycles and cars. These variations implement the toll reductions announced by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State on 4 July 1997, Official Report, columns 288–90.

Ayrshire and Arran Health Board

Mr. Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will estimate the amount of additional funding which will be allocated to Ayrshire and Arran Health Board in 1998–99. [47080]

Mr. Galbraith: Ayrshire and Arran Health Board received a base general revenue allocation in October 1997 of £229.344 million for 1998–99. Subsequent allocations totalling £12.393 million have since issued, of which £1.482 million is attributable to the extra resources made available for tackling waiting lists. Further allocations will issue in-year as appropriate.

NHS Workers

Mr. Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what proposals he has for the timetable to establish a uniform rate of terms and conditions for NHS workers. [47079]

Mr. Galbraith: We have a UK-wide approach to reviewing conditions of service. The Government are considering the overall picture and the options for the way forward.

Dounreay

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland on what date the Nuclear Installations Inspectorate memorandum, a Summary of the Dounreay FCA Inspection Findings, was brought to his attention; what assurances he (a) sought and (b) received from the HSE that Dounreay was a suitable destination for the waste from Georgia; what action he took in response to the document; and if he will make a statement. [46784]

Mr. Dewar: The memorandum was brought to my attention by way of a letter dated 11 June 1998 from the Health and Safety Executive (HSE). I advised that the full report should be published and this was done on 15 June. The report highlighted a number of concerns in respect of the Fuel Cycle Area which led to a programme of improvements. The independent regulators are currently conducting a comprehensive audit of the management of safety, which inter alia will examine the effectiveness of the improvement programme.

The report of the audit will be made public later this year. The recommendations emerging from that audit will be considered fully by Ministers in due course.

The HSE was consulted before it was decided to accept the Georgian consignment and was satisfied that the material could be stored safely at Dounreay.

Small Business Loan Scheme

Mr. Alasdair Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer of 20 May 1998, Official Report, column 380, if he will place a copy of the independent evaluation of the Small Business Loan Scheme in the Library. [47077]

Mr. Wilson: Yes. I have arranged for a copy to be placed in the Library.

Reconditioned Diesel Engines

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received from the recycling industry about SRO3 in so far as it prevents the use of reconditioned diesel engines to produce bio-oil. [46806]

Mr. Wilson: Officials in The Scottish Office received a recent representation about this issue from Ormrod Diesels, Skelmersdale, Lancashire. The company was advised to raise their concerns again in any consultation following the Government review of renewables policy.

Health Service Review Panel (Neonatal Deaths)

Ms Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) when the report by the independent review panel into neonatal deaths and disabilities at the Forth Park Hospital, Kirkcaldy, was passed to the Kirkcaldy Acute Hospital NHS Trust; [46789]

(2) when the findings of the independent review panel into neonatal deaths and disabilities at the Forth Park Hospital, Kirkcaldy, will be published; [46790]

(3) if the full report by the independent review panel into neonatal deaths and disabilities at the Forth Park Hospital, Kirkcaldy, will be released to the families directly concerned. [46791]

Mr. Galbraith: A draft of the Independent Audit Panel report commissioned by Kirkcaldy Acute Hospital NHS Trust and Fife Health Board was received by them on 9 February 1998. I understand that the final report is likely to be published within the next 2–3 weeks. The Trust and Board have indicated that all 34 families who submitted written complaints will receive a copy of the report.

Further Education

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the Further Education Funding Council, with particular reference to (a) its membership, (b) its policy remit, (c) the openness and transparency of its operation and (d) its relationship with the colleges as regards long-term funding commitments. [47252]

Mr. Wilson: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State intends to establish the Scottish Further Education Funding Council on 1 January 1999, or as soon as possible thereafter.

The post of chairman of the new Council was advertised earlier this month. Advertisements relating to membership will appear shortly.

The precise range of functions to be delegated to the new Council, and therefore its policy remit, are still under consideration. The new council will be expected to conform to the highest standards of openness and accountability which the Government require of all non-departmental public bodies and, in carrying out its functions, to establish effective working relations with the FE colleges.

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will ensure that no staff member at a college or university in Scotland is made redundant or forced to take early retirement for purely financial reasons. [47250]

Mr. Wilson: Decisions on employment of staff are entirely a matter for colleges and universities.

Freshwater Fishing

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps he is taking to improve access to freshwater fishing. [45577]

Mr. Macdonald: The Government will continue to encourage the provision of greater access for public angling consistent with sound management and conservation. We have also made it clear that action will be taken when access proposed as part of Protection Orders granted under the Freshwater and Salmon Fisheries (Scotland) Act 1976 fails to materialise or is withdrawn.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Pesticides

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food which approved pesticides are considered (a) systemic and (b) non-systemic. [46699]

Mr. Rooker: To classify all approved pesticides as systemic or non-systemic pesticides would incur disproportionate cost. Pesticides are approved only if they can be used safely and any resulting residues in crops are at an acceptably low level.

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list all pesticides containing organophosphates currently approved in the UK. [46698]

Mr. Rooker: I have placed a list of the organophosphate-based pesticide products currently approved by the Department for use in the United Kingdom in the Library of the House.

Dairy Farming

Mr. Healey: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what factors underlie the compensation rates paid to (a) dairy farmers and (b) lowland suckler producers. [46458]

Mr. Rooker: Dairy farmers and lowland suckler producers may benefit from payments under a range of Schemes. Most of the terms and conditions of these Schemes are determined at the EU level.

If my hon. Friend has queries relating to a particular Scheme, I would be happy to address them.

Live Animal Exports

Mr. Baker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Broxtowe (Dr. Palmer) of 5 May 1998, Official Report, columns 303–04, concerning live animal exports, if, in the case of pigs, he has received all the completed route plans certifying that the journeys took place in accordance with the statutory requirements. [44296]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 8 June 1998]: Central records are not kept which show the numbers of route plans returned. The arrangements in place are designed to follow up instances of non-return of route plans, so that either the returned plan is held at the Animal Health Divisional Office that issued it in case queries subsequently arise, or the failure to return the plan is logged against the record of the transporter concerned to enable enforcement action to be considered. We attach importance to making these arrangements as effective as possible and have recruited a local authority enforcement officer to assist us in this.

Bovine Tuberculosis

Mr. Paice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he expects to receive the report and advice from the Expert Group under Professor Bourne's chairmanship regarding the implementation of the report by Professor Krebs on badgers and bovine tuberculosis. [47256]

Mr. Rooker: I expect to receive the Expert Group's first report, on the design of the culling experiment recommended by Professor Krebs, shortly.

Mr. Paice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he will announce the results of his consultation following the publication of Professor Kreb's report on badgers and bovine tuberculosis. [47257]

Mr. Rooker: I am hoping to make an announcement before the House rises for the summer recess.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will report on the results of the Thornbury experiment. [46763]

Mr. Rooker: The policy employed in the area around Thornbury was not conceived as a scientific experiment but as a means of controlling the spread of tuberculosis from badgers to cattle. This involved the systematic removal of badgers from a defined geographical area around Thornbury, Gloucestershire during the period from 1975 to 1981, after which re-colonisation was allowed. The average incidence of TB in cattle herds fell from 5.6 per cent. in the 10 years prior to the clearance, to 0.45 per cent. in the 15 years following the clearance.

Professor Krebs' recent report on Bovine Tuberculosis in Cattle and Badgers concludes that, whilst the policy applied in the Thornbury area provides strong circumstantial evidence to suggest that badgers represent a significant source of Mycobacterium bovis infection in cattle, it does not prove a causal link, nor does it constitute a proper experimental basis to enable conclusions to be drawn about the effectiveness, or cost-effectiveness, of different badger culling strategies.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what validated results might be expected, and when, from the experiment proposed in the Krebs report. [46759]

Mr. Rooker: The purpose of the experiment proposed by Professor Krebs is to provide the data needed to evaluate the efficacy and cost-effectiveness of badger culling as a means of controlling TB in cattle. I am awaiting advice from the Expert Group which is working on the detailed design of the experiment, including the data which must be collected.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will meet Professor Stephen Harris of the University of Bristol School of Biological Sciences. [46764]

Mr. Rooker: I have no plans to meet Professor Harris in the near future. However, I met him last year with the Parliamentary Secretary, my hon. Friend the Member for Scunthorpe (Mr. Morley), who meets and corresponds with him regularly.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the scientific, methodological and humane objections which he has received to the proposed Krebs experiment. [46762]

Mr. Rooker: A number of such objections have been raised, and have been referred to the Expert Group to be taken into account during the work of designing the experiment. The objections featuring most frequently in correspondence have concerned the risks that denial of access to private land, or interference by badger rights activists or farmers illegally culling badgers, could undermine the statistical validity of the experiment; the numbers of badgers which could be killed; the possibility that lactating sows might be culled; and the fear that snares could be used to trap badgers. There have also been claims that the experiment is unnecessary both because badger culling has been shown not to work, and because it has been proved effective.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will estimate the range of increase expected in TB herd breakdowns in 1999. [46758]

Mr. Rooker: It is too early to make informed estimates of the number of TB herd breakdowns likely in 1999.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list and summarise each of the major reports on badgers and bovine TB considered by his Department since 1970. [46756]

Mr. Rooker: There have been three major reports on badgers and bovine TB commissioned and considered by this Department since 1970:

The report from Lord Zuckerman in 1980 (Badgers, Cattle and Tuberculosis);

The report from Professor Dunnet in 1986 (Badgers and bovine tuberculosis); and

The report from Professor Krebs in 1997 (Bovine Tuberculosis in Cattle and Badgers).

Copies of these reports, each of which contains a summary of the main findings/recommendations, are available in the Library of the House.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will publish a detailed response to the letter to him dated 6 May about the Krebs report and the proposed badger culling experiment from Professor Stephen Harris of the University of Bristol School of Biological Sciences. [46761]

Mr. Rooker: I replied to Professor Harris's letter on 22 June, inviting him to discuss his concerns in detail with officials.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many badgers proposed to be killed in the Krebs experiment are expected to be (a) snared and (b) trapped. [46760]

Mr. Rooker: We shall take no decisions on the conduct of the culling experiment until we have received advice from the Expert Group. This will include advice on the method or methods to be used to capture badgers.

Poultry

Mr. Todd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what measures are taken to ensure that poultry meat imported into the United Kingdom meets EU and United Kingdom rules and legislation; and what steps he will take to ensure fair competition in the UK poultry meat market. [46977]

Mr. Rooker: All fresh meat, including poultrymeat, imported into the UK, whether from other Member States or third countries, must have been produced in accordance with harmonised Community rules. These rules require all meat which is intended for sale for human consumption to fulfil the required public health standards. This means that it must be produced in EC approved establishments and, to signify this, must be stamped with a health mark before leaving the plant.

Ensuring that all Member States comply with their Community obligations in properly implementing and applying Community rules is the responsibility of the European Commission, whose Office of Veterinary and Phytosanitary Inspection carries out regular programmes of inspections visits to all Member States. The inspection, approval and monitoring of poultrymeat slaughterhouses in third countries are also the responsibility of the European Commission.

In addition, meat imported from third countries must be accompanied by agreed animal and public health certification which is issued at the plant of origin and must take place via approved Border Inspection Posts (BIPs) where they undergo veterinary checks to ensure that they comply with EU animal and public health legislation.

Livestock Support

Mr. Paice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will give the levels of (a) suckler cow, (b) ewe premium and (c) HLCA payments for beef and sheep per animal in cash prices and at 1997 prices for each of the last five years and his proposals for 1998–99. [23484]

Mr. Rooker [pursuant to the reply, 8 June 1998, c. 455]: The information requested is set out in the following table. This has been updated in respect of payment rates for 1997 and, where possible, for 1998.

HEALTH

Young Carers

Ms Shipley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the impact of the implementation of the Carers (Recognition and Services) Act 1995 on young carers; and what estimate he has made of the number of assessments made of young carers under the Act. [46572]

Mr. Boateng: We continue to monitor the implementation of the Carers (Recognition and Services) Act, through commissioned research and as part of the social services inspection programme. Estimates of the number of young carers' assessments under the Act are not available.

Ms Shipley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if support for young carers will be included in the national strategy for carers. [46568]

Mr. Boateng: The national strategy will be concerned with all carers. We take a close and active interest in the needs of children and young people who undertake responsibility for the well-being of a relative or friend with a disability or chronic illness.

Newspaper Rounds

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what effect EC Directive 94/33 will have on the employment of young people in the home delivery of newspapers. [46983]

Mr. Boateng: None.

Nurses Day

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what initiatives the Government took to promote the UN International Nurses Day on 12 May. [47220]

Mr. Milburn: We were involved in a number of initiatives to promote the United Nations International Nurses Day on 12 May, and during that week.

The Chief Nursing Officer for England, Mrs. Yvonne Moores, attended and supported the international gathering of global senior nurses at the 51st World Health Assembly in Geneva, organised by the International Council of Nurses on International Nurses Day.

To mark International Nurses Day, and the United Kingdom Presidency of the European Union, the Chief Nursing Officer for England, supported by her UK Chief Nursing Officer colleagues, hosted a "masterclass" for European Union Government Chief Nurses, in London from the evening of 12 May to 14 May. The "masterclass" aimed to debate the nursing, midwifery and health visiting contribution to public health. The keynote address to the conference was given by my hon. Friend the Minister for Public Health. Other invited speakers included senior nurses and others from the World Health Organisation, the EU, the Commission and senior nurse colleagues from member states. A report of the "masterclass" is being prepared.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State and the Chief Nursing Officers for England, Scotland and Ireland, with many of the European Chief Nurses, attended the Florence Nightingale memorial service in Westminster Abbey on 14 May.

Departmental Cash Limits

Ms Southworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what changes will be made to the cash limits of his Department in 1998–99. [47439]

Mr. Dobson: Subject to Parliamentary approval, the cash limit for Class XI, Vote 1 (Hospital, community health, family health and related services, England) will be increased by £6,600,000 (from £31,385,613,000 to £31,392,213,000). This allows for a transfer of £6,600,000 from Class IX, Vote 1 (Department for Education and Employment: programmes and central services) to reflect the initial transfer of funding responsibilities for students in health care professions.

The cash limit for Class XI, Vote 2 (Department of Health, administration, miscellaneous health and personal social services, England) will be reduced by £1,130,000 (£75,000 running costs), from £1,097,507,000 to £1,096,377,000. This reduction allows for the transfer of responsibility for childcare and early years policy to Class IX, Vote 1 (Department for Education and Employment: programmes and central services) as announced by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 27 March 1998, Official Report, column 296.

The Department's gross running cost limit will be increased by £4,425,000 from £258,490,000 to £262,915,000 for additional work being carried out by the National Health Service Pensions Agency on missold pensions (£4,500,000) less part of the transfer mentioned above.

All increases will be offset by savings, increased receipts or transfers to or from other Votes and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Medical Negligence

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what policy conclusions he has drawn from the lecture on medical negligence presented by Lord Justice Sir Philip Otton at the Royal Society of Medicine on 20 June, with particular reference to problems facing junior doctors. [46787]

Mr. Milburn: Lord Justice Otton's speech makes a number of wide-ranging suggestions. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State recently invited interested parties from both the National Health Service and legal spheres to submit ideas on how to reduce clinical negligence litigation, and how to manage better that which will inevitably occur. Lord Justice Otton's proposals will form part of that debate, but it is too early yet to draw any firm conclusions.

Residential Child Care Initiative

Mr. Dawson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will estimate the proportion of staff who have qualified under the Residential Child Care Initiative and continue to work in local authority residential child care (a) nationally and (b) by local authority. [47001]

Mr. Boateng: The information requested is not available centrally. However, an evaluation of the residential child care initiative (RCCI) undertaken for the Department by the Tavistock Institute showed that 455 local authority staff were seconded under the initiative and 35 bursaries were awarded for staff in the voluntary sector. The research concluded

"that RCCI, considered with other changes taking place at a local level, was contributing to an overall increase in the proportion of qualified staff in residential child care".

The proportion of RCCI secondees who had not returned to the residential child care sector was found to be relatively small (13.5 per cent.).

Young People in Care

Mr. Dawson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on progress towards the establishment of a national organisation for young people in care. [46998]

Mr. Boateng: We are pleased to be able to report that we have agreed funding for an initial three year period to assist in the creation and establishment of a national organisation for young people in care and care leavers. The grant to the new organisation will be channelled through First Key—The National Leaving Care Advisory Service.

Residential Social Workers (Training)

Mr. Dawson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of the recipients of the training support grants allocated for the training of residential social workers undertaking NVQ level 3 completed the course in each of the last two years; what was the average time taken to complete the course; and what steps are being taken to ensure that NVQ assessors are available. [46999]

Mr. Boateng: The sub-programme of the training support programme to train residential social care staff to National Vocational Qualification level 3 began in 1998–99. It is the responsibility of the assessment centres approved by awarding bodies for National Vocational Qualifications and employers to ensure the availability of assessors for the National Vocational Qualifications in care.

Health Services (Worcestershire)

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 18 June 1998, Official Report, columns 309–10, concerning health services in Worcestershire, if he will make it his policy to set a target date for deciding on service reconfiguration in the county; and if he will make a statement. [47253]

Mr. Milburn: No.

Anti-acne Drugs

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what reports he has received of adverse reactions following the use of the anti-acne drug Roaccutane/Accutane; and if he will make a statement. [42061]

Ms Jowell [pursuant to her reply, 18 May 1998, c. 267]: I regret the number of prescriptions quoted in my previous reply was incorrect. This information was derived from data held by the Prescription Pricing Authority which cover only prescriptions written by general practitioners. There is no national scheme for gathering drug usage in hospitals; hence the estimate for the use of Roaccutane has been derived from sales figures. The majority of prescriptions for Roaccutane are written in hospitals; therefore the previous estimate of 11,000 prescriptions underestimates the true usage.

Information from the manufacturer provides an estimate of 136,563 prescriptions for Roaccutane covering the period 1993 to 1997 in the United Kingdom. These prescriptions cover both general practice and hospital usage. During this period, the Medicines Control Agency/Committee on Safety of Medicines have received a total of 280 reports covering 467 suspected adverse reactions reported in association with Roaccutane therapy. These reports cover a range of effects; the most frequently reported include skin and subcutaneous tissue reactions, musculoskeletal disorders and gastrointestinal disorders.

Roaccutane (oral isotretinoin) is available only on prescription for the treatment of severe acne which has failed to respond to antibiotics. It is recommended for use under the supervision of a consultant dermatologist. The product information for doctors and patients includes information on its adverse effects.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Average Earnings

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to her answer of 8 April 1998, Official Report, column 377, what rates of real increase in average earnings for the years to September (i) 1998 and (ii) 1999 were derived from the data and evidence available at the time of the Pre-Budget report; and what would be the corresponding rates of real increase based on the data and evidence now available. [44820]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 9 June 1998]: At the time of the Pre-Budget Report the latest figures for average earnings showed growth of 4.3 per cent. and RPI excluding mortgage interest payments was forecast to be 3 per cent. in 1998 and 2.5 per cent. in 1999.

The latest figures now show average earnings growth running at 5.2 per cent. At Budget time the forecast for RPI excluding mortgage interest payments in 1998 was revised down to 2.75 per cent. and the forecast for 1999 was unchanged at 2.5 per cent.

Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many recipients of incapacity benefit (a) nationally and (b) in Leaside District have had their case reviewed; how many of those have had their benefit stopped; how many have appealed; and how many of those appeals have been upheld in each of the last three years. [45095]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 9 June 1998]: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is set out in the table.

Council Tax Relief

Mr. Dawson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what factors and costings are taken into account in establishing the personal allowance for council tax relief for (a) single people and (b) couples. [47000]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The single person's and couple's rates of the personal allowance used in the calculation of Council Tax Benefit are intended to represent the cost of day to day living. The rates are uprated by Parliament annually. Additional allowances or premiums can be included in the calculation for those single people and couples identified as having extra needs, for example those who are long-term sick, elderly or with children.

Benefits Agency

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what guidance she has issued to the Benefits

Agency on access to benefits for people with learning disabilities who are in the care of a health trust but who have been discharged from hospital beds. [47286]

Mr. Denham: There has been no special guidance issued to the Benefits Agency (BA) about access to benefits for people with learning difficulties who have been discharged from hospital beds but who remain under the care of an NHS Trust.

The BA is currently overhauling its leaflet programme in line with Active Modern Service. It is aimed to make the material simpler and much more customer focused, giving a better entry point into the Social Security system. The first set of products is due to be launched around October 1998.

There is a core series of leaflets which provide general information on disability benefits (FB2—Which benefit?, FB4—Young Peoples Guide to Social Security, and FB28—Sick or Disabled). Specific benefit leaflets to which these general leaflets refer, together with others on specific topics like being in hospital are also available (IS1 & IS20—Income Support, IB202—Incapacity Benefit, NI252—Severe Disablement Allowance, DS702—Attendance Allowance, DS704—Disability Living Allowance, NI6—Industrial Injuries Disablement Benefit and NI9—Going into hospital).

The Benefit Inquiry Line gives general disability benefit advice over the telephone while the Agency's network of local offices advises about any benefit or pension.

Benefit Integrity Project

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people in Cumbria have (a) been disallowed benefit and (b) received increased benefit as a result of the Benefit Integrity Project. [45664]

Mr. Denham: The administration of the Benefit Integrity Project is a matter for Peter Mathison, the Chief Executive of the Benefit Agency. He will write to the right hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. David Maclean, dated 22 June 1998:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking how many people in Cumbria have (a) been disallowed benefit and (b) received increased benefit as a result of the Benefit Integrity Project (BIP).

The information concerning the BIP is not available in the format requested. To provide geographical information routinely would incur high costs and disrupt the processing of ongoing casework.

As at 30 April 1998, a total of 172,026 cases, including 27,991 renewal cases have been selected for action under the BIP. At the same date a total of 81,221 cases have been examined. Of the total cases dealt with 1,864 have had their benefit increased, 63,380 have remained unchanged, 10,058 have had their benefit reduced and 5,919 have had their benefit stopped.

The total included 16,366 renewal cases of which 505 had their benefit increased, 8,407 have remained unchanged, 4,436 have had their benefit reduced and 3,018 have had their benefit stopped.

A monthly statistical report can be found in the House of Commons Library.

I hope you find this reply useful.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Offshore Oil and Gas

Mr. Dafis: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will place in the Library copies of the correspondence her Department has received in the last six months concerning the implementation of the Environmental Impact Assessment Directive as it affects the offshore oil and gas industry. [46008]

Mr. Battle: Correspondence received by the Department in London and Aberdeen since December 1997 concerning the implementation of the Environmental Impact Assessment Directive as it applies to the offshore oil and gas industry covers a wide range of matters, including requests for and responses to the February draft of the Regulations which came into effect on 30 April and comments on Guidelines designed to help those involved in preparing or responding to environmental statements required under those Regulations. The consultation correspondence includes material from other government Departments, statutory advisers, local authorities, companies and industry representatives and environmental and other interest groups and, since neither of the consultation requests mentioned that responses would be copied for publication, it would be appropriate as a matter of courtesy to seek correspondents' permission before doing so. There is also some correspondence regarding the impact of the Regulations on future projects which may include commercially confidential material and, again, the correspondents' permission would be needed before such letters could be released. For these reasons, the copies requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Export Controls

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what export licensing controls exist in respect of the export of civil nuclear technology and equipment; and if existing procedures are under review. [46481]

Mrs. Roche: The UK's export controls on nuclear and nuclear-related goods are derived from international nuclear non-proliferation commitments and membership of international nuclear export control regimes, in particular the Nuclear Suppliers Group (NSG), whose members have agreed common guidelines for the transfer of nuclear and nuclear-related goods and technology. The NSG guidelines are reproduced as International Atomic Energy Agency document INFCIR 254, Parts I and II as amended.

These commitments are given effect in the relevant legislation, which in this case is Council Regulation (EC) No.381/94 on the export of dual use goods and the related Council Decision 94/942/CSFP as amended.

The Council Regulation—which has a much wider scope than civil nuclear equipment and technology—foresees a review three years after the date of its entry into force, which was 1 July 1995. The UK is working with EU partners on such a review. In addition, the UK works with NSG partners on the development of the NSG guidelines. No general review of these strict controls is currently being undertaken, but work is in hand in the NSG to examine ways in which specific issues such as the intangible transfer of technology may be addressed to ensure that the guidelines remain as effective as possible in a changing technological environment.

Nuclear Power Authorities (Visitors)

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many foreign visitors and delegations from which countries have been received by (a) the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority and (b) British Nuclear Fuels Limited since 1991. [46478]

Mr. Battle: I am advised by UKAEA that they received over 22,000 foreign visitors from countries throughout the world since 1991. I understand from BNFL that it would be an extensive exercise to check past visitors records: in 1997, the last complete year, they received 178,000 visitors to the Sellafield Visitors Centre alone.

Road Vehicles (Fuel)

Mr. Pike: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many and what percentage of road vehicles are currently powered by (a) compressed natural gas,(b) liquid petroleum gas and (c) electricity in (i) the United Kingdom and (ii) other member states of the European Union; and if she will make a statement. [46728]

Mr. Battle: In 1997, 9,100 vehicles were registered as running on gas or gas and petrol. No breakdown between compressed natural gas and liquid petroleum gas is available. There were 17,400 electric vehicles. Taken together, gas and electric vehicles make up less than 1 per cent. of the vehicles in the UK. There are no comprehensive statistics for other EU member states.

Interest in alternatively fuelled vehicles is growing, especially among fleet operators and local authorities. DTI is supporting the development and use of such vehicles through the Foresight Vehicle LINK programme and the work of the Cleaner Vehicles Task Force.

Research Councils

Mr. Sawford: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what mechanisms are in place to monitor and audit funding awarded to universities through the research councils. [46841]

Mr. Battle: All Research Councils' expenditure is subject to audit by the National Audit Office (NAO).

Research Councils themselves have annual programmes of dipstick testing of the usage of their grants within higher education institutions (HEIs). These programmes are carried out jointly by Council staff and the Research Councils' Internal Audit Service. The NAO are currently conducting a value for money audit examining the procurement by HEIs of capital equipment funded by Research Council grants.

Plutonium

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to her answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Kirkcaldy (Dr. Moonie), of 2 June 1998, Official Report, column 162, if she will indicate the differences in information reported on civil plutonium under the new arrangements as against previous practice. [46811]

Mr. Battle: The key differences are:

(i) Information under the new format is now reported to the International Atomic Energy Agency, and circulated to Member States by the Agency, in keeping with the requirements of the 'Guidelines for the Management of Plutonium'. These figures, which show holdings of plutonium at 31 December instead of at 31 March each year, are more widely distributed than before.

(ii) The new format provides clearer information on holdings of plutonium in various forms in a way which facilitates international comparisons on a consistent basis.

(iii) Separate information is now published on the amount of plutonium held in the United Kingdom on behalf of foreign customers.

(iv) Information relating to reactor discharges and dispatches by site, and to exports and imports of plutonium, is no longer being published.

Radiation (Information)

Ms Walley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when she expects to publish the proposed consultation document on new radioactive emergency preparedness and public information regulations. [46736]

Mr. Battle: The Health and Safety Executive are at present developing consultative proposals for the Radiation (Emergency Preparedness and Public Information) Regulations (REPPIR) in consultation with the Nuclear Emergency Planning Liaison Group, the Nuclear Safety Advisory Committee and the Ionising Radiations Advisory Committee. They are now expected to be published in a consultative document in Autumn 1998. The HSE are aiming for as much commonality as possible with the Proposals for Regulations implementing the Directive on the control of major accident hazards involving dangerous substances which were published as a consultative document in May 1998.

Genetically Engineered Animals

Mr. Baker: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement on the legal status of patents for genetically engineered animals granted by the EU within the United Kingdom. [46562]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 22 June 1998]: There is currently no mechanism for patents to be granted by the EU but patents having effect in the United Kingdom can be granted by the European Patent Office based in Munich. The European Patent Office is not an EU institution.

Provided certain formal requirements are met, patents granted by the European Patent Office have the same legal status in the United Kingdom as patents granted in this country. Thus, a patent for a genetically engineered animal granted by the European Patent Office gives the same rights and can be challenged in our courts in the same way as patents granted here.

Sellafield

Mr. Boswell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment she has made of the current safety situation at the Sellafield nuclear installations, with respect to (a) operating buildings, (b) abandoned buildings and (c) waste storage facilities; and if she will make a statement. [46956]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 22 June 1998]: The management of safety at Sellafield is a matter for the operator of the site, BNFL, in accordance with the requirements of the UK's independent nuclear safety regulator, the Health and Safety Executive's Nuclear Installations Inspectorate (HSE's NII). Under the terms of its nuclear site licence, BNFL must demonstrate to HSE's satisfaction that all operations at Sellafield, including decommissioning of redundant plant and waste storage, are adequately safe. HSE undertakes rigorous monitoring and assessment of BNFL's safety management arrangements and has extensive powers to enforce any safety related actions it considers necessary.

Additional expert scrutiny of safety issues associated with the UK civil nuclear industry, including activities at the Sellafield site, is provided by the independent Nuclear Safety Advisory Committee (NuSAC). NuSAC publishes a biennial report setting out details of its work. Its current programme includes consideration of a number of issues relating to the Sellafield site.

Coal Mining

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what plans she has for support from public funds for the United Kingdom deep coal mining industry; and what representations she has received on this matter; [47087]

(2) what proposals have been received from the private sector for support for the United Kingdom deep mining industry in relation to the use of coal for electricity generation; and if she will make a statement. [47088]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 23 June 1998]: We are making good progress on our energy review and the Government hope to make an announcement on this very shortly.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Montserrat

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much her Department intends to spend in Montserrat in (a) 1997–98 and (b) 1998–99. [46726]

Clare Short: The Department for International Development (DFID) spent £38.3 million on assistance to Montserrat and Montserratian evacuees in 1997–98. I will arrange for a table showing DFID expenditure on Montserrat in the last three years to be placed in the Library of the House.

Upon the release of the draft Sustainable Development Plan, I announced my intention to make up to a further £75 million available to Montserrat over the three years 1998–99 to 2000–01 in support of the Plan. Within this period, expenditure is expected to be highest during 1998–99.

The Gambia

Mr. McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will provide a breakdown of all aid to the Gambia funded by the British Government, since 1994. [47302]

Clare Short: British aid to the Gambia, including Commonwealth Development Corporation investments, between 1993–94 and 1996–97 totalled £9.58 million. Figures for 1997–98 are not yet available but the total was approximately £800,000. The table analyses the figures by financial year and economic sector.

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what percentage of United Kingdom overseas development assistance given to Sudan has been for (a) long-term development, (b) short-term relief and (c) disaster preparedness in each year since 1992. [45988]

Clare Short: The table shows our assistance to Sudan between 1992–93 and 1996–97. Our long-term bilateral development aid programme (excluding the Joint Funding Scheme and other small grant schemes) was terminated in 1991. Since then no new financial aid has been provided. Projects supported under our relief and rehabilitation assistance include both immediate relief and work on disaster preparedness; there is no separate figure for the latter.

TREASURY

Computers

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the cost of making central Government computer systems euro compliant. [43941]

Mrs. Liddell: Government Departments have investigated the impact of the launch of the euro on their computer systems. Early indications are that these are limited. But the situation may change depending on the extent to which the euro is used in the United Kingdom while we are outside the euro zone. The situation will be closely monitored.

IT implications are unavoidable if the United Kingdom joins the single currency. The Chancellor of the Exchequer has not made an estimate of the cost of making these changes as the cost of adapting central Government computers would depend on the detailed arrangements governing the transition to the single currency.

Education Spending

Mr. Maude: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what level of education spending would be required in (a) 1999–2000, (b) 2000–01, (c) 2001–02 and (d) 2002–03 in order to ensure that it was 0.1 per cent. higher as a proportion of GDP than in 1998–99, assuming the economy grows by two and a quarter per cent. in 1998, two per cent. in 1999 and two and a half per cent. in 2000; [46434]

(2) what level of education spending would be required in (a) 1999–2000, (b) 2000–01, (c) 2001–02 and (d) 2002–03 in order to maintain it at the same proportion of GDP as in 1998–99, assuming the economy grows by two and a quarter per cent. in 1998, two per cent. in 1999 and two and a half per cent. in 2000. [46430]

Mr. Darling: The proportion of Gross Domestic Product (GDP) formed by education spending in 1998–99 can be derived from tables 3A.2 and 4.1 of the Economic and Fiscal Strategy Report (Cm 3978). Projected levels of spending in future years at a fixed proportion of GDP can be calculated for any set of assumptions on economic growth and inflation. Table 4.1 offers assumptions for both output and prices.

Mr. Maude: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what level of education spending would be required in (a) 1999–2000, (b) 2000–01, (c) 2001–02 and (d) 2002–03 if the rate of increase were to be maintained at the same real terms rate as over the 10 years to 1997–98. [46431]

Mr. Darling: The rate of growth in spending on education over the ten years to 1997–98 can be derived from table 3.3 of the Public Expenditure Statistical Analyses 1998–99 (Cm 3901). The level of spending for future years can then be calculated by applying this rate of growth, and assumptions for increases in prices such as those in table 4.1 of the Economic and Fiscal Strategy Report (Cm 3978), to the figure for 1997–98.

Official Engagements

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will list his engagements for 15 May to 8 June; [45488]

(2) if he will list his engagements for 7 June to 15 June. [46395]

Mr. Gordon Brown [holding answers 15 and 18 June 1998]: I attended a number of meetings with ministerial colleagues and others, carried out my duties in the House of Commons, gave several speeches and undertook a number of engagements in my constituency.

Public Investment

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimates he has made of the current marginal benefits of different forms of public investment; and if he will make a statement. [46399]

Mr. Darling [holding answer 18 June 1998]: The Government believe that at present the marginal benefits of public investment are likely to be relatively high, reflecting under-investment in public infrastructure over recent years. This view is based on an assessment of the quality of service generated from existing public assets. Although all public investment projects are subject to detailed appraisal, the assessment of marginal benefits is in many cases made in non-financial terms because of the difficulty of assigning a monetary value to social returns.

As explained in Cm 3978, the Economic and Fiscal Strategy Report, a number of steps are being taken, including the establishment of the Investment in Britain Fund, to make up for past under-investment and to provide for the modernisation of Britain's public sector infrastructure.

The conclusions of the Comprehensive Spending Review will include detailed spending plans, taking account of the scope for worthwhile public investment projects. Departments will subsequently prepare their Departmental Investment Strategies. These will be scrutinised closely to ensure best value for money and positive social returns. The Treasury will publish the Departmental Investment Strategies in Spring 1999.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the level of net public investment as a share of gross domestic product for each year from 2002–03 to 2004–05;and if he will make a statement. [46378]

Mr. Darling [holding answer 18 June 1998]: Projections of public sector net investment in 2002–03 and 2003–04 as a share of gross domestic product are given in Table 4.5 of the Economic and Fiscal Strategy Report (June 1998). Figures for the year 2004–05 are not available.

Economic and Fiscal Strategy

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will restate Table 4.5, page 44, of the Economic and Fiscal Strategy report of June 1998, to show total tax receipts and social security contributions before netting-off tax credits; and if he will make a statement. [46390]

Mr. Darling [holding answer 18 June 1998]: Corrected Budget forecasts of tax credits as a per cent. of GDP were published on 27 March 1998, Official Report, columns 348–50. There were no changes to these forecasts in the Economic and Fiscal Strategy Report.

The Working Families Tax Credit will make work pay for families. It will guarantee a minimum income and will ease both the unemployment and poverty traps.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will update Table 1.2, page 11, of the "Financial Statement and Budget Report" of March 1998, to include the new forecasts contained in the Economic and Fiscal Strategy report of June 1998. [46373]

Mr. Darling [holding answer 18 June 1998]: Forecasts of the public sector net cash requirement, general government net borrowing and the public sector current budget were published in Table 4.5 of the Economic and Fiscal Strategy Report. There have been no changes to the costings of the 1998 Budget measures, shown in Table 1.2. of the "Financial Statement and Budget Report", since the March Budget.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will recalculate tables 4.4, 4.5, 4.6 and 4.7 in the Economic and Fiscal Strategy report on the assumption that GDP grows (a) by 1.5 per cent. in 1998–99 and by 1.75 per cent. in 1999–2000, (b) by 1.25 per cent. in 1998–99 and by 1.5 per cent. in 1999–2000, (c) by 1.0 per cent. in 1998–99 and by 1.25 per cent. in 1999–2000, (d) by 0.75 per cent. in 1998–99 and by 1.0 per cent. in 1999–2000, (e) by 0.5 per cent. in 1998–99 and by 0.75 per cent. in 1999–2000, (f) by 0.25 per cent. in 1998–99 and by 0.5 per cent. in 1999–2000, (g) by 0.0 per cent. in 1998–99 and by 0.25 per cent. in 1999–2000, (h) by –0.5 per cent. in 1998–99 and by 0.0 per cent. in 1999–2000 and (i) by –1.0 per cent. in 1998–99 and by 0.0 per cent. in 1999–2000. [46856]

Mr. Darling [holding answer 22 June 1998]: Table 4.1 of the Economic and Fiscal Strategy Report set out the economic assumptions underlying the public finance projections. The effect of different growth rates on the public finances would depend on the composition of growth in the revised assumptions, and the reasons for the change in growth.

Public Spending

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proposals he has to increase consultation about public service standards and associated public spending plans; and if he will make a statement. [46383]

Mr. Darling [holding answer 18 June 1998]: The Government are fully committed to seeking improved standards in public services and better value for the taxpayer. Proposals will be published in the forthcoming Comprehensive Spending Review and "Better Government" White Paper.

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if it is his policy to keep public expenditure in balance over the economic cycle. [47288]

Mr. Darling [holding answer 23 June 1998]: Meeting the golden rule means that, over the economic cycle, public sector current spending will be funded by current receipts, and not by borrowing.

Golden Rule

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 11 June 1998, Official Report, column 652, which paragraph of Annex B contains the Treasury definition of capital expenditure for the purposes of the golden rule. [46462]

Mr. Darling [holding answer 18 June 1998]: Paragraph 2.18 of the November 1997 Pre-Budget Report made clear that the Government monitor progress against the golden rule using the public sector current balance. Paragraph B.53 of the March 1998 "Financial Statement and Budget Report" sets out the definition of the current balance; and paragraphs B.62 and B.63 deal with the measurement of capital spending.

Stability and Investment Report

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer on what date the final draft of "Stability and Investment for the Long Term", June 1998 (Cm 3978), was sent to be printed; and if he will make a statement. [46372]

Mr. Darling [holding answer 18 June 1998]: In accordance with normal procedure, the final draft of Cm 3978, "Stability and Investment for the Long Term", June 1998, was sent to the printers the day before publication, Wednesday 10 June 1998.

Local Authority Airports

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the changes in the fiscal rules that will apply to public corporations with particular reference to local authority airport companies. [47035]

Mr. Darling: The Minister for Transport will be consulting shortly on the Government's plans for allowing financially sound local authority airports greater commercial flexibility, as announced in the Economic and Fiscal Strategy Report (Cm 3798). The consultations will cover both the detailed criteria for selecting those airports that will benefit and the operation of the new regime.

The Economic and Fiscal Strategy Report also announced plans to give certain, largely self-funding, public corporations more flexibility to manage their spending between years, within agreed limits on external finance. Additional flexibilities may be available for some of these bodies in the light of the conclusions of reviews currently under way.

Wage Increases

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the employment effect of a direct increase in wages in the UK of 0.6 per cent.. [47237]

Mrs. Liddell: The impact on employment would depend on why wages increased, and how employers and employees responded to the increase in wages. For example, if an increase in wages reflected higher productivity it need have no employment consequences, and for those on low pay it could promote employee commitment, reduce staff turnover and thereby provide a boost to productivity.

Pay

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the average pay rates for each of the counties in England, Scotland and Wales in descending order. [47105]

Mrs. Liddell: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Chief Executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Chris Ruane, dated 24 June 1998:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your parliamentary question on earnings for each of the counties in England, Scotland and Wales.

The latest information, from the New Earnings Survey April 1997, is contained in the attached tables.

I will arrange for a copy of the tables to be placed in the Library.

Commemorative Coins

Ms Lawrence: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans Her Majesty's Government have to issue any new commemorative coins. [47674]

Mr. Gordon Brown: Her Majesty the Queen has been graciously pleased to approve my recommendation that a crown piece should be issued in 1999 in memory of Diana, Princess of Wales.

The memorial crown will be available from banks and post offices at its face value of five pounds by 1 July, the anniversary of the birthday of the Princess. In addition, collector versions in base and precious metal will be placed on sale from early in the year.

The proceeds arising from the issue of this coin will go towards the development and implementation of the proposals announced by the Diana, Princess of Wales, Memorial Committee in their preliminary advice to HM Government published today. Copies have been placed in the Library of the House.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Football (Racism)

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps the Government have taken to eradicate racism in football. [46098]

Mr. Banks [holding answer 18 June 1998]: The Government are fully committed to eliminating racism from football. One of the priorities of the Football Task Force was to address this problem, and I welcome and fully support the practical recommendations made in the Task Force's report into racism. I have written to the bodies identified in the report, asking them how they intend to take forward the measures relevant to them and seeking a clear timetable for action.

There are two specific recommendations that fall to Government: that the Football Offences Act 1991 should be amended to make racist abuse by spectators an offence; and that schoolchildren should have access to playing fields on a regular basis.

The Government will be amending the Football Offences Act 1991 as soon as legislative priorities allow. In the meantime, the Home Office has written to all chief police officers in England and Wales reminding them of existing powers under the Public Order Act 1986, which makes it an offence to use threatening, abusive or insulting words or behaviour with the intention of causing harassment, alarm or distress to the person to whom such words or behaviour are directed.

The Government recognise that schoolchildren should have access to playing fields to enable them to participate in a range of sports. We recently announced how we will protect existing playing fields needed by schools and communities through new legislation requiring schools to seek consent for the sale of playing fields and tightening planning controls.

Listed Buildings (East Sussex)

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many listed buildings, by number and grade, there are in East Sussex. [46705]

Mr. Banks: The information requested is as follows:

Grade I : 142

Grade II* : 327

Grade II : 6,554

HOME DEPARTMENT

Nurses (Working Holiday Visas)

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what plans he has to amend the working holiday visa scheme to allow greater flexibility in respect of the employment of overseas nurses; [46503]

(2) if he will make it his policy to grant all nurses on working holiday visas an unrestricted two-year visa. [46504]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: We would not wish to relax the working holidaymaker rules further while a mechanism already exists, through the work permit scheme, for non-European Economic Area nationals to be employed in cases of skills shortage.

Policing Costs (Hunts)

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which police forces charge organisers of hunts for policing costs; and if he will make a statement. [46730]

Mr. Michael: This information is not held centrally. It is for chief officers of police to decide when to charge for providing a police service. No charge should normally be levied for officers deployed on the public highway.

Policing Costs (Football Matches)

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what reports his Department has received from police forces in England regarding police charges for Premier League and Football League matches for police off the ground in reserve; and if he will make a statement. [46729]

Mr. Michael: I have received some correspondence from Lancashire Constabulary about the current discussions between the force and Burnley Football Club over charging for policing football matches. I have asked the Chief Constable of Lancashire to keep me informed of developments.

It is for chief officers of police to decide when to charge for providing a police service but, under Home Office guidelines, no charge should normally be levied for officers deployed on the public highway outside football grounds.

Police Grant

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the police grant funding for each county for each of the last three years. [46925]

Mr. Michael: The information requested, for each police force area, is set out in the tables.

MI5

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what records relating to the activities of MI5 after 1918 are planned to be released to the Public Record Office; what years these records will cover; when these records will be released; and if he will make a statement. [46798]

Mr. Straw: The Security Service has started work on a review of its files relating to the Second World War. I hope that it will be possible to release some, but not all, of these files by the end of this year. Consideration will then be given to reviewing the records surviving from the inter-war period. As I announced in the House on 25 February 1998, Official Report, column 346. I hope to make a statement before the summer recess on files held by the Security Service.

Traffic Police

Ms Hewitt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which police forces have required traffic officers to undertake non-traffic duties. [46936]

Mr. Michael: Traffic officers in all police forces in England and Wales undertake non-traffic policing duties. Road traffic offences and general criminal offences do not arise in clearly separate ways which can be independently enforced. It is an important part of the British policing system that traffic officers deal with all crimes which occur on the roads and that police officers on general duties can take action against breaches of road traffic law.

Ms Hewitt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many and what percentage of police officers worked on traffic duties in each of the past 20 years, in each police force. [46926]

Mr. Michael: The allocation of resources to particular functions and the deployment of officers are operational matters for individual chief constables. Road traffic offences do not necessarily occur separately. A large part of traffic officers' time is spent dealing with ordinary crime, or carrying out ordinary police duties. Conversely, officers on general beat duties are able to take prompt action against breaches of road traffic law. Any figures must be interpreted with care against that background.

It is possible to provide figures only since 1990. These are set out in the tables which I have placed in the Library. Information for 1997-98 is not yet available.

Departmental Reviews

Mr. Allan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list, for each of the last four years, all departmental inquiries and reviews instigated by ministers which have been chaired by individuals outside his Department, and in each case if he will give the date of establishment and the name of the chairman. [46834]

Mr. Straw: The information requested is as follows:

Committee	Established	Chairman
Inquiry into the escape of IRA Prisoners from Whitemoor gaol	September 1994	Sir John Woodcock
Inquiry into Prison Security	December 1994	Sir John Learmont
Inquiry into Legislation against Terrorism	December 1995	Lord Lloyd of Berwick
Assessment and implications of centrifuge contamination in the Trace Explosive Section of the Forensic Explosives Laboratory at Fort Halstead	May 1996	Professor Brian Caddy
Scrutiny of evidence relating to the Hillsborough Disaster	June 1997	Lord Justice Stuart-Smith
Inquiry under the Police Act 1996 into matters arising from the death of Stephen Lawrence	August 1997	Sir William Macpherson of Cluny
Independent Commission on the Voting System	December 1997	Lord Jenkins of Hillhead
Review of Financial Regulation in the Crown Dependencies	January 1998	Mr. Andrew Edwards

Victims of Crime

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he had made of the merits of allowing victims of crime to present a statement to the police on the impact of the crime on their lives; and if he will make a statement on pilot schemes which have involved victims' statements. [46750]

Mr. Michael: Pilot schemes testing the use of 'victim statements' have been running in six police force areas since the end of 1996. Evaluation of the pilots is currently in hand, though a final report is not expected before the end of the summer. An assessment of the merits of the scheme will be made in the light of that report.

Electronic Tagging

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 15 June 1998, Official Report, column 71, in respect of the offender who circumvented the strap of the equipment provided by the Digital Products Corporation, which company was responsible for monitoring the electronic tag; what plans he has for the same or similar equipment to be used in future; and what assessment he has made of whether other straps are susceptible to similar attempts at circumvention. [46986]

Ms Quin: Securicor Custodial Services was responsible for monitoring the offender who circumvented the tag. The type of equipment in question made use of first generation technology and I understand that Securicor has no plans to use such equipment again. All electronic monitoring equipment in England and Wales is tested, prior to its authorisation for use, against the technical criteria specified by the Home Office, which includes an assessment of the susceptibility of the equipment to tampering.

Witness Support

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on arrangements for supporting witnesses in magistrates' courts. [47009]

Mr. Michael: We are committed to providing a more co-ordinated service to witnesses through the implementation locally of 'National Standards of Witness Care in the Criminal Justice System'.

Schemes supporting witnesses and other users of magistrates courts already exist in many parts of the country. Some are run by National Association for the Care and Resettlement of Offenders, some by Victim Support, while others have been established as a result of local initiatives. The possibility of improving support for users of magistrates courts is currently under consideration against the backdrop of the Government's Comprehensive Spending Review. We hope it will be possible to announce the outcome of this consideration later in the year.

Firearms

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the total number of firearms that have been handed in under the Firearms Amendment Act 1997. [46976]

Mr. Michael: The prohibition of large-calibre handguns under the Firearms (Amendment) Act 1997 came into effect on 1 July 1997 and owners of such handguns were required to dispose of them lawfully by 30 September 1997. By the end of that period, 116,644 large-calibre handguns had been surrendered to the police. In addition, although at that time they had yet to be prohibited, 26,371 small-calibre pistols were surrendered voluntarily by their owners to the police under the terms of the Government's ex gratia payment scheme. A further 19,183 small-calibre pistols were surrendered to the police between 1 and 28 February 1998 following the implementation of the Firearms (Amendment) (No. 2) Act 1997, which extended the original prohibition to small-calibre pistols. As a result, the total number of handguns surrendered to the police in England, Wales and Scotland was 162,198. The table shows the number of handguns surrendered by police force area.

Domestic Violence

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the number of reported incidents of domestic violence in England and Wales during 1997. [46987]

Mr. Michael: Recorded crime statistics relate to offence type, not to the relationship between the victim and the offender. There is therefore no definitive figure for the number of violent crimes which are domestic in nature.

The most reliable nationwide estimate is provided by the British Crime Survey (England and Wales). The most recent survey suggested that, in 1995, there were one million incidents of domestic violence.

Prison Population

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the projected prison population for each of the next 10 years. [46581]

Ms Quin [holding answer 19 June 1998]: Projections are currently available through to 2005. A projection which assumes that trends in sentencing which have been observed over the last 20 years continue, is as follows:

	Annual averages
1998	65,000
1999	69,600
2000	72,200
2001	73,700
2002	75,800
2003	78,000
2004	80,400
2005	82,800

Alternative scenarios are available which give a prison population by 2005 of 92,600 (custody rates and sentence lengths increase at about the rate observed between 1992 and 1996) or of 64,400 (custody rates and sentence lengths remain at 1997 level). The projection does not take into account the effect of Home Detention Curfew, which is included in the Crime and Disorder Bill [Lords]. The effect of the Home Detention Curfew, when implemented, is estimated to bring a reduction in the prison population, below what it would otherwise be, of between 3,000 to 4,000.

The most recent projections were published in Home Office Statistical Bulletin 2/98 "Revised Projections of Long Term Trends in the Prison Population to 2005" on 29 January 1998. A copy of the bulletin is available in the Library. The bulletin describes the methodology of the projection in more detail.

Rehabilitation of Offenders

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the need for places in rehabilitation units for offenders made subject to drug treatment and testing orders. [47064]

Mr. George Howarth: The purpose of piloting the drug treatment and testing order in three areas will be to evaluate its cost, effectiveness and the demand for it from the courts. It is not possible at this stage to estimate with any accuracy what the need will be for places in rehabilitation units for offenders made subject to the order.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many places were available for the rehabilitation from illegal drugs of offenders aged 15 to 21 years whose offending is linked to drugs and who are considered to be in need of treatment by the courts or criminal justice agencies (a) on 1 May 1997 and (b) at the latest available date. [47066]

Mr. George Howarth: This information is not held centrally. In general, places in rehabilitation units are not reserved for specific categories of patients, such as those referred by the courts.

Law Commission Reports

Mr. McWalter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what consideration his Department is giving to Law Commission reports; and if he will make a statement. [47814]

Mr. Straw: I very much value the work done by the Law Commission and welcome the close working relationship between the Commission and the Department. The Home Office has the responsibility for considering the Law Commission's reports on the criminal law, although other Departments often have an interest in their proposals. Law Commission reports are normally considered by an interdepartmental working group of officials representing all the interested departments. The Law Commission plays a valuable role in assisting and advising these working groups.

The consultation paper "Violence: Reforming the Offences Against the Person Act 1861", which described the Government's proposals for reform based on the Law Commission's recommendations in their report "Offences Against the Person and General Principles" (LC 218), was issued in February. This was based on the work of an interdepartmental working group on which the Law Commission was represented. The Law Commission reports on Involuntary Manslaughter (LC 239) and Corruption (LC 248) are currently under consideration by similar interdepartmental working groups which include the Law Commission. The Criminal Law Commissioner is also advising an Interdepartmental Working Group considering the Misuse of Public Office.

The Law Commission's work on Hearsay also contributed to the work of the Vulnerable and Intimidated Witnesses Group which recommended that an interdepartmental working group be set up to consider the Law Commission's report on Hearsay (LC 245) in the broader context, taking account of the discussion in the report "Speaking Up For Justice". This working group will commence work shortly and will have the benefit of Law Commission membership.

Criminal Cases Review Commission

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications for case review have been received by the Criminal Cases Review Commission in each month since its establishment. [46406]

Mr. Michael: The Criminal Cases Review Commission was empowered to investigate possible miscarriages of justice in England, Wales and Northern Ireland from 31 March 1997. Thirty two applications had been made to the Commission before that date, and 252 cases were transferred to the Commission from the Home Office and Northern Ireland Office. The numbers of applications received each month since then are as follows:

	Number
1997
April	129
May	108
June	76
July	96
August	102
September	92
October	76
November	97
December	58
1998
January	80
February	85
March	97
April	105
May	96

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many case workers have been employed by the Criminal Cases Review Commission in each month since its establishment. [46407]

Mr. Michael: The numbers of case review managers (caseworkers) employed by the Criminal Cases Review Commission who have started work each month since the Commission was established, and the total strength, are as follows:

	Start work	Total strength
January	0	0
February	3	3
March	6	9
April	1	10
May	0	10
June	4	14
July	2	16
August	1	17
September	3	20
October-December	0	20
1998
January	2	22
February	1	23
March	1	24
April-May	0	24
June	2	26

In addition, one further case review manager is due to join the Commission this month. This will bring the Commission's total case review manager strength to 27.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will review the number of staff available to the Criminal Cases Review Commission for the review of cases; [46408]

(2) what proposals he has to increase the budget of the Criminal Cases Review Commission to deal with increases in casework. [46409]

Mr. Michael: We are considering with the Commission its current resource requirements.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list all staff by grade employed by the Criminal Cases Review Commission. [46410]

Mr. Michael: The Criminal Cases Review Commission has 14 members and at present employs nine executive staff (including the Chief Executive, the Director of Finance and Personnel, two Legal Advisers, the Head of Information, the Investigations Adviser and the Operations Manager); 26 case review managers; and 15 administrative and support staff.

Football Hooligans

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what new measures he will take to prevent known football hooligans travelling overseas; and if he will make a statement. [46565]

Mr. Michael: Under the Football Spectators Act 1989, the courts may impose a restriction order on anybody who is convicted of a football-related offence in Great Britain or in certain countries overseas, including France. A restriction order means that the offender is required to report to a police station on the day of a football match abroad involving a team from England or Wales. My right hon. Friend has encouraged the use of restriction orders and their number has increased from 9 at the beginning of the year to 71 now.

This week the House has agreed to include measures in the Crime and Disorder Bill [Lords], increasing the maximum penalty which can be imposed by the courts for breaches of a restriction order under the Football Spectators Act 1989 from one month's imprisonment to six. The police will also have a power of arrest without warrant where a person subject to a restriction order has committed the offence of failing to report to a police station on the day of an international football match overseas, or is about to commit that offence, or where the police have reasonable grounds for believing that he is about to commit it.

We will give urgent consideration to what other steps may be required for the future.

PRIME MINISTER

Radioactive Waste

18. Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Prime Minister what plans he has to establish a national policy for the safe storage of radioactive waste. [45944]

The Prime Minister: My hon. Friend will be aware of the Select Committee on Science and Technology's inquiry in another place into Nuclear Waste Management. The Government have welcomed the Select Committee's inquiry. We await its report, which is expected in the autumn, and will undertake widespread consultation before coming to a final view on the way forward.

HEALTH

Child Protection Registers

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many children were on child protection registers on 1 May. [46530]

Mr. Boateng: The latest figures for children and young people on child protection registers in England are for 31 March 1997 and show a total of 32,400 children.

Community Health Councils

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to ensure that all community health councils represented in a locality are consulted about initiatives in (a) health action zones and (b) primary care groups; and if he will make a statement. [46525]

Mr. Milburn: Community health councils have the statutory right to be consulted on proposals for any substantial development of the health service in the council's district and on any proposals to make substantial variation in the provision of such service.

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will issue directions to (a) health authorities, (b) hospitals and (c) ambulance trust boards to ensure the right of a local representative from each community health council represented in the locality to be given (i) observer status or (ii) full speaking rights at the board meetings; and if he will make a statement. [46522]

Mr. Milburn: The Public Bodies (Admission to Meetings) (National Health Service Trusts) Order 1997 came into force on 6 February 1998, bringing NHS trusts in line with health authorities and requiring them to hold their board meetings in public.

Best practice guidance is currently being prepared for NHS boards to help them implement the new Order. It will also address the best ways to involve community health councils in board meetings.

Voluntary Organisations

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which components of the NHS will have the power under the new arrangements set out in the White Paper, The New NHS (Cm 3807), to make grants to voluntary organisations in connection with the provision by them of services. [46508]

Mr. Milburn: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State and health authorities may at present make grants to voluntary organisations for the provision of health and social services. We will be considering in due course whether primary care trusts might also be allowed to exercise this function.

Trauma Patients

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what training is given to doctors to assist in diagnosing patients suffering from trauma. [46512]

Mr. Milburn: Undergraduate medical students are required to acquire a knowledge and understanding of both mental and physical aspects of trauma. The diagnosis and management of trauma is also likely to form part of specialist training programmes in several different medical specialties and also for vocational training for general practice. The content and standard of postgraduate medical training is the responsibility of the medical Royal Colleges and their Faculties.

Gas-fired Power Stations

Mrs. Brinton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will estimate the effect on national mortality and morbidity rates of a further five year moratorium on gas-fired power stations. [46580]

Ms Jowell [holding answer 19 June 1998]: My right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade announced in December 1997 that she proposed to defer decisions on outstanding or new applications for power station consents while a review of energy sources for power generation was underway. This review is near completion and I understand that an announcement will be made shortly. Any changes to emissions from power stations will be taken into account as part of the review of the national air quality strategy which will be completed by the end of this year.

Lupus Disease

Mr. Efford: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what estimate he has made of the number of people currently suffering from Lupus disease in the United Kingdom; [46967]

(2) what training is given to doctors to assist with the diagnosis of Lupus disease. [46968]

Mr. Milburn: The Department has not made any estimate of the number of people suffering from Lupus, but research evidence indicates that there are possibly about 20,000 to 30,000 sufferers in the United Kingdom at any one time.

It is for health authorities to assess the health care needs of their populations, which will include an assessment of the number of people suffering from conditions such as Systemic Lupus Erythematosus.

The training of doctors in the diagnosis and treatment of disease is primarily the responsibility of relevant educational and professional bodies, such as the medical Royal Colleges.

Asbestos-related Illness

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people were treated within the NHS in the last 12 months who were suffering from asbestos-related illnesses. [47108]

Ms Jowell: Information on in-patient treatment for asbestos-related illnesses for the latest year available, 1995–96, is shown in the table. It is based on finished consultant episodes (FCEs), which represent the number of episodes of care under individual consultants. The same person may be counted more than once if they have more than one episode of care.

Ordinary admissions and day cases combined: completed episodes by selected primary diagnoses (given by ICD-10 codes) National Health Service hospitals in England, 1995–96

	Primary diagnosis	FCEs
J61	Pneumoconiosis due to asbestos and other mineral fibres	154
C45.0	Mesothelioma of pleura	972
J92.0	Pleural plaque with presence of asbestos	61

Healthy Schools Initiative

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to extend the healthy schools initiative on a national basis. [46860]

Ms Jowell: It is the aim of the healthy schools initiative for all schools to become healthy schools. To achieve this we plan to establish as quickly as possible a national healthy school award with clear criteria on what constitutes a healthy school, and for which all schools will be able to apply. We are currently setting up eight pilots where health authorities and local education authorities will work together in devising models that other areas can follow. These pilots will also inform the development of the criteria for the healthy schools award.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what strategies he is developing under the healthy schools initiative to improve safety for children travelling to and from school. [46859]

Ms Jowell: The outline criteria for a healthy school include a requirement for schools to develop strategies to improve the safety of children travelling to and from school. Money will be available from the healthy schools initiative for projects on this subject and we will be working closely with colleagues in the Department for Education and Employment and the Department for the Environment, Transport and the Regions.

Analgesics

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received concerning the volume of analgesics available for over the counter sale by (a) pharmacies and (b) other retail outlets. [45859]

Mr. Milburn: In November 1996 a public consultation exercise was carried out on the availability of over the counter analgesics from pharmacies and general retail outlets, including proposals to restrict availability to reduce toxicity in overdose. Consumer and patient organisations, professional bodies and industry provided full and detailed responses which were carefully considered.

As a result of these representations, new measures have been introduced to restrict pack sizes for paracetamol and aspirin containing medicines available for over the counter sale by pharmacies to 32 tablets or capsules, and by general retail outlets to 16 tablets or capsules. These measures will take effect on 16 September 1998, following a transition period of 1 year during which the new smaller packs are being introduced.

DEFENCE

Clothing

Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the proportion of garments currently purchased on behalf of his Department by the Defence Clothing and Textile Agency which are manufactured within the United Kingdom. [46194]

Mr. Spellar: This is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Defence Clothing and Textiles Agency (DCTA). I have asked the Chief Executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Michael Roycroft to Mr. Andrew George, dated 24 June 1998:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the proportion of garments currently purchased on behalf of his Department by the Defence Clothing & Textiles Agency (DCTA), which are manufactured within the United Kingdom, as this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the DCTA.

As stated in my Agency's letter to you of 24 April, some 80% of the garments purchased on behalf of the Department by the DCTA are through contracts placed in the UK. I am unable to say precisely how many of the garments are actually manufactured within the UK because prime contractors can vary the amount of work with sub-contractors during the contract. In the uniform area, the contractor is required to produce at least 10% of the items in his own premises, which generally means in the UK.

I am sorry to have to give, what you may see as, an unhelpful reply but the base information is not collected.

Defence Estate

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the current rules on disposal of the Defence Estate were agreed by his Department and the Treasury; what was the basis for their introduction; and what were the changes from the previous policy. [46748]

Mr. Spellar: The current rules on disposal of the Defence Estate were agreed between my Department and the Treasury on 9 July 1996. They were introduced to take into account new issues and policies that had arisen since the publication of the previous rules.

Changes to the previous policy were as follows: fuller guidance on the position of former owners; guidance on the definition of market value; advice that departments should consult other departments and non-departmental public bodies when major disposals were contemplated; additional guidance on methods of sale; and the removal of the requirement for prior Treasury approval for certain types of disposal.

Departmental Property (Harrow)

Mr. McNulty: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list each property owned by his Department in the Harrow, East constituency; and in each case what proposals exist for their utilisation. [46917]

Mr. Spellar: My Department owns three properties in the Harrow, East constituency: RAF Bentley Priory, RAF Stanmore Park and Kingsbury Territorial Army Centre.

RAF Bentley Priory is the HQ of 11/18 Group, responsible for UK Air Defence and Air Maritime Patrol; it is the base for the RAF Inspectorate of Flight Safety and it is a major communications hub. There are no plans to change its role. RAF Stanmore Park is occupied by the RAF pending a completion of new accommodation at RAF Bentley Priory; once vacated, the site will be placed for sale on the open market.

The Kingsbury Territorial Army Centre is used by TAVRA as a Territorial Army Centre, and by the Army Cadet Force and Air Training Corps. Currently there are no plans to change its role.

RAF Stanmore Park

Mr. McNulty: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many of the RAF houses adjoining RAF Stanmore Park are empty; what plans there are for those homes in the future; and if he will make a statement. [46916]

Mr. Spellar: My Department currently has 26 empty properties adjoining RAF Stanmore Park. Twelve are awaiting refurbishment, five are allocated to incoming families and the remaining nine are ready for allocation. There is a continuing Service requirement for these houses.

Spring Quarry, Corsham

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what functions are carried out in the underground site at Spring Quarry in Corsham Wiltshire; how many staff are employed there; what is the size of the site; and what plans his Department has for the disposal of any of the site. [46839]

Mr. Spellar: Spring Quarry comprises 35 acres on the surface with a similar area underground. No functions are carried out on the site, it is vacant and has been declared surplus. No staff are employed at this site. Inspections and maintenance are carried out by contractors.

My Department is currently co-operating with North Wiltshire District Council (NWDC) and Wiltshire County Council in an EU Funded KONVER Study to identify potential uses for the site. NWDC has expressed an interest in acquiring the property and my Department is in discussion with Council Officials about the principle terms of this proposal, prior to entering detailed negotiations.

If a private treaty sale to the Council does not take place, it is likely that the property will be sold on the open market.

Atomic Weapons Establishment

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 11 May 1998, Official Report, columns 1–2, if he will place in the Library a list of unclassified audit reports produced by the Directorate of Quality Assurance since January 1998, indicating the title of each report and the date on which each was produced. [46810]

Mr. Spellar: I am today placing a list in the Library of the House.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

UN Resolutions

Mr. Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many resolutions the United Kingdom has initiated in the United Nations Security Council during the last 12 months; and if he will list those adopted by the Security Council. [45465]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The United Nations Security Council adopted 61 resolutions between 9 June 1997 and 9 June 1998. The United Kingdom initiated (in the sense of producing the first draft for consultation) 18 resolutions during this period, all of which were adopted. These were:

Resolutions adopted between 9 June 1997 and 9 June 1998

Number	Subject
1112	Bosnia
1115	Iraq and Kuwait
1117	Cyprus
1120	United Nations Transitional Administration Eastern Slavonia (UNTAES)
1129	Iraq
1131	Western Sahara
1132	Sierra Leone
1133	Western Sahara
1134	Iraq
1137	Iraq and Kuwait
1143	Iraq
1146	Cyprus
1148	Western Sahara
1153	Iraq
1154	Iraq and Kuwait
1156	Sierra Leone
1162	Sierra Leone
1171	Sierra Leone

Sierra Leone

Mr. Howard: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his oral answer of 6 May 1998, Official Report, columns 721–30, on arms sales to Sierra Leone, for what reasons he did not mention the briefing on Sandline International made available to Baroness Symons before she answered questions in the House of Lords on 10 March. [46059]

Mr. Robin Cook [holding answer 15 June 1998]: I responded fully and accurately to all questions put to me in the House on 6 May. None were about Baroness Symons.

In any case, the briefing provided for Baroness Symons for 10 March 1998 in no way detracts from the clear statement I made on 6 May 1998 that at no point was any ministerial approval given for the activities of Sandline, nor was there any ministerial discussion of the activities of Sandline, or any meeting between Ministers and Sandline.

I announced on 18 May 1998, Official Report, column 607, that Sir Thomas Legg would conduct a full and independent investigation and that the report would be made public. He will have full access to all relevant documents, including briefing provided to Ministers.

Trinidad and Tobago

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) if he has urged the Government of Trinidad and Tobago to allow international scrutiny of prisoners subject to the death penalty; [46745]

(2) what representations he has made to the Government of Trinidad and Tobago concerning their withdrawal from the American Convention on Human Rights; [46747]

(3) what assessment he has made of the effect of the withdrawal of Trinidad and Tobago from the American Convention on Human Rights on the human rights situation in that country. [46746]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: Together with our EU partners, we have made representations to the Government of Trinidad and Tobago expressing our deep disappointment at the announcement of their denunciation of the American Convention on Human Rights and the first Optional Protocol to the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, and re-accession to the latter with a reservation on death penalty issues. We also urged Trinidad and Tobago to reconsider their decision before the denunciations take effect.

Until 26 August 1998, Trinidad and Tobago remain party to the first Optional Protocol to the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights which allows for individual petition on all matters covered by the Covenant. After this date, individuals will not be able to petition on death penalty issues. The Government of Trinidad and Tobago have argued that the right of individuals sentenced to death are adequately protected in their domestic appeals system, which includes the right of appeal to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council.

The Gambia

Mr. McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the recent detention of civilians by the Government in The Gambia; and what representations have been made by his Department to the Government in The Gambia about these detentions. [47305]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: We are concerned at the recent detention of civilians by the government of The Gambia. The detainees were released on bail by a High Court ruling on 8 June 1998.

Our High Commission in Banjul has made a number of representations to the government of The Gambia about these detentions. On 9 June our High Commissioner undertook a demarche on behalf of the European Union expressing concern at recent events and seeking assurances that the government remain committed to the constitution.

Mr. McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans his Department has to launch an investigation into human rights abuses in The Gambia since 22 July 1994. [47303]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: We, together with our European Union partners and the Commonwealth, closely monitor human rights in The Gambia, and regularly bring any concerns to the attention of the Government of The Gambia. The Commonwealth Ministerial Action Group was set up in November 1995 and has had The Gambia and its human rights record on its agenda ever since.

Mr. McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action has been taken by the Commonwealth Ministerial Action Group to promote democratic practices in The Gambia, with particular reference to reversing the ban on the former main political parties and political personalities promulgated in Decree No. 89 of 1996. [47306]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The Gambia has been considered by the Commonwealth Ministerial Action Group (CMAG) at each of the group's meetings since its inception in Auckland in 1995. At the Commonwealth Heads of Government Meeting in October 1997, Heads of Government agreed that CMAG should continue to monitor the situation in The Gambia with a view to promoting full compliance with the Harare principles. At their last meeting on 2–3 March CMAG asked the Commonwealth Secretary General to monitor the situation in The Gambia and to keep CMAG informed.

CMAG has repeatedly urged the Government of The Gambia to remove Decree 89 and demonstrate its stated commitment to human rights and rule of law.

Mr. McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he or his officials have had with (a) the OAU and (b) the Commonwealth on human rights abuses in The Gambia. [47304]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: We have had no discussions with the OAU on human rights abuses in The Gambia.

We have raised concerns about human rights in The Gambia at each of the Commonwealth Ministerial Action Group's meetings since its inception in Auckland in 1995.

European Court of Human Rights

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 18 June 1998, Official Report, column 303, if he will make a statement on each of the 53 cases before the European Court of Human Rights which have been declared admissible and are awaiting examination of the facts. [47205]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The cases are as follows:

one case concerning the independence and impartiality of a Court in Guernsey which refused the applicant permission for a change of use of a packing shed in which he had made his home;

two cases concerning the fairness of the trial of two 11-year old boys for murder, and in particular the fact that the trial was held in public in an adult court, and also the role of the Secretary of State in fixing the minimum period of their detention;

six cases concerning the refusal of planning permission for gipsies to live in their caravans on land which they own;

one case concerning the threatened expulsion of an Indian national who is the wife of the first applicant and the mother of the other applicants, aged 18 months and 3 months;

one case concerning the refusal of legal aid for a criminal appeal in Scotland;

one case concerning the lawfulness of the applicant's detention with a view to deportation, the adequacy of the reasons given and the alleged absence of an effective review of the lawfulness of the detention, given the national security issues invoked;

one case concerning the separation of the applicant from her baby when she was in detention on remand;

three cases concerning the independence and impartiality of a court-martial;

one case concerning the suicide in prison of the applicant's son, who had a history of mental illness;

one case concerning the alleged negligence of the social services in removing a child from her mother, and the exclusion of liability for such negligence;

one case concerning the alleged negligence of the social services in failing to take the applicants into care as children, despite being aware of the neglect and abuse to which they were exposed at home, and the exclusion of liability for such negligence;

one case concerning the absence of legal aid in Guernsey to pursue a civil action for false imprisonment;

one case concerning the absence of a public hearing in arbitration proceedings;

one case concerning the issuing of a national security certificate by the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, thus excluding the applicant from the protection of the provisions against religious and political discrimination contained in fair employment legislation; three cases concerning the non-disclosure of material by the prosecution in criminal proceedings, on the ground of public interest immunity;

one case concerning the alleged absence of a right to a court review of the applicant's detention in mental hospital, where they are serving life sentences following criminal convictions;

one case concerning the refusal of legal recognition of a change of sex;

one case concerning the absence of legal recognition of a change of sex;

three cases concerning the derecognition of trade unions by certain employers;

one case concerning hunt saboteurs whose behaviour was sanctioned as "contra bonos mores";

one case concerning the arrest and imprisonment of the applicant, a Spanish citizen, on his arrival in the United Kingdom, in connection with non-payment of maintenance arrears, and the proceedings relating thereto; two cases concerning the automatic exclusion of bail for persons detained on remand on suspicion of certain serious offences, when they have previously been convicted of one of such offences;

one case concerning the refusal to grant a woman who gave up work to look after her young son and incapacitated husband an additional tax allowance which is available to men with an incapacitated wife;

17 cases concerning detention for non-payment of the community charge.

British Embassy, Berlin

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the Private Finance Initiative contract for the British Embassy in Berlin will be signed; and if he will make a statement. [47798]

Mr. Fatchett: The Private Finance Initiative contract for the British Embassy in Berlin was signed on 22 June and the commercial arrangements completed yesterday, 23 June.

The Embassy will be built to a design by the British architects Michael Wilford and Partners, winners of the 1995 Embassy Design Competition, on the site of the pre-war British Embassy in Wilhelmstrasse. Under the contract Arteos, a German consortium, will finance, construct and then manage the building for 30 years. Building work will start in July and the building will be handed over by the end of February 2000.

Bosnia

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the approval of an export licence for the supply of bomb disposal equipment to the Ministry of the Interior, Sarajevo Canton, Bosnia. [47799]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The Government recently approved the export of a complete disruptor set and a box of 100 cartridges to the Ministry of the Interior, Sarajevo Canton, in Bosnia to enable local police bomb disposal teams to defuse bombs placed in the city by criminal and terrorist elements. Given the threat which these improvised explosive devices pose to civilians who are trying to rebuild normal, unthreatened lives in the city, we were glad to be able to approve this export as an exception to our interpretation of the EU arms embargo on the former Yugoslavia. This decision does not affect the Government's continued support of the EU common position on arms exports to the former Yugoslavia.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

MFV Gaul

Mr. Alan Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will publish the National Maritime Institute report commissioned by the Department of Trade entitled, "Investigation into the Stability of MFV 'Gaul' in a Seaway (project 207001)", Reference MF 92/12/08-MS 92/12/09. [44388]

Ms Glenda Jackson: A copy of the report has been placed in the library.

Non-domestic Ratepayers

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions to what extent the Departmental Review of the ratings structure for non-domestic ratepayers will take into account the objectives of sustainability, security and diversity of supply for electricity supply; and if he will make a statement. [46529]

Mr. Raynsford: We have recently consulted on options for allowing a measure of local discretion over the business rate. At the same time, we are considering whether, from 1 April 2000, those industries—including the electricity industry—which currently have their rates bills set by a formula, should have their rates determined on the basis of valuation like any other business. We hope to announce our decisions on these issues later in the summer. In doing so, we will fully consider their impact on the electricity industry.

Pedestrian Areas

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the Government's policy towards extended pedestrian-only areas in city centre and suburban areas. [46707]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The decision to pedestrianise areas of a city, town or suburban centre is a matter for individual local highway authorities, rather than central Government. The Government welcome the improved safety, convenience and environmental benefits that a well designed scheme can bring to local communities. Government advice in Planning Policy Guidance Note 6, Town Centres and Retail Developments, encourages local authorities to give greater priority to pedestrians, including pedestrianisation in town centres. Detailed advice has also been given on planning, design and legal implications in restricting vehicle access to pedestrianised areas, in the Department's Local Transport Note 1/87, "Getting the Right Balance".

Local Government

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what consultations the Government have embarked upon with local government representatives following the publication of "Leading the Way—A New Vision for Local Government". [46710]

Ms Armstrong: My right hon. Friends the Prime Minister and the Deputy Prime Minister and I have had meetings with representatives of the Local Government Association at which we discussed our proposals for modernising local government, on which we have also consulted councils, business and others.

Departmental Reviews

Mr. Allan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list, for each of the last four years, all departmental inquiries and reviews instigated by ministers which have been chaired by individuals outside his Department; and in each case if he will give the date of establishment and the name of the chairman. [46831]

Angela Eagle: Details of five inquiries established by my Department, including their date of establishment and the name of the chairman, were given in the answers by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster on 23 April 1998, Official Report, columns 687–90, and the then Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster on 25 May 1995, Official Report, columns 716–20.

A total of fourteen DETR reviews established since 1 May 1997 were included in the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 27 April 1998, Official Report, columns 14–17. Information on reviews between 1 June 1994 and 1 May 1997 cannot be provided except at disproportionate cost.

Water Pollution

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what assessment he has made of the danger to public health posed by the contamination of the water supply by (a) viral, (b) retroviral, (c) bacterial and (d) toxic agents; [46939]

(2) what steps the Government have taken to minimise the incidence of pollution of the water supply by (a) viral, (b) retroviral, (c) bacterial and (d) toxic agents; [46937]

(3) what steps he has undertaken to assure the prompt reporting of contamination of the water supply by (a) viral, (b) retroviral, (c) bacterial and (d) toxic agents. [46940]

Angela Eagle: The Water Supply (Water Quality) Regulations 1989 set standards for some 55 parameters, including microbiological and toxic parameters, which water suppliers must meet. In addition, water supplies must not contain any other substances at concentrations which would be detrimental to public health. The overall quality of water supplies in England and Wales is very high with 99.7 per cent. of over 3 million routine tests meeting the standards in 1996.

The standards are enforced by the Drinking Water Inspectorate. Each of the tests which contravene the standards is assessed by the Inspectorate. There is no evidence that contraventions found during routine tests endanger public health because the standards for parameters of health significance are set with a wide margin of safety. The Inspectorate requires the water supplier to take action as quickly as possible in respect of any contravention that is not trivial and is likely to recur.

Water suppliers are required to notify the Inspectorate immediately of any incident in which the quality of water supplies might be affected. Ninety five incidents were notified in 1997 and most were relatively minor happenings. All incidents are investigated by the Inspectorate. The Inspectorate checks that the water supplier has taken appropriate action to minimise the risk to public health, takes enforcement action against the water supplier when appropriate, and, in exceptional cases when water unfit for human consumption has been supplied, brings a prosecution against the water supplier under Section 70 of the Water Industry Act 1991.

Aircraft Noise

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to review legislation regarding the control of aircraft noise. [46934]

Ms Glenda Jackson: We are examining airport and aircraft noise policy generally in the context set by the wider Integrated Transport Policy review. The case for new legislation on aircraft noise is being considered and proposals will be made in due course.

Airports

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to undertake a review of airports policy; and if he will make a statement. [46935]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The consultation paper "Developing an Integrated Transport Policy" stated the Government's intention to review policy to examine how airports can play their full part in meeting both the transport and environmental needs of their region, including through better integration of surface access to airports with our wider transport policies. We shall announce our conclusions in the forthcoming Integrated Transport White Paper, which will provide the framework and the starting point for subsequent work on airports policy.

Road Humps

Mr. Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of evidence that road humps cause increases in vehicle exhaust pollution. [46984]

Ms Glenda Jackson: In 1994, my Department commissioned the Transport Research Laboratory (TRL) to carry out a literature review of research that had been carried out world-wide into the effects that traffic management schemes (including traffic calming) might have on vehicle emissions. These results are summarised in Traffic Advisory Leaflet 4/96 "Traffic Management and Emissions", copies of which have been placed in the Library. A further research project is specifically examining the effects of traffic calming measures, including different types of road humps. The results of this work will be available in November 1999.

Seat Belts

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) what is his estimate of the number of coaches currently in service built with anchorage points able to accommodate seat belts as part of the integral design; [46738]

(2) what is his estimate of the number of coaches currently in service which were not built to accommodate seat belts. [46737]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Precise figures are not available. In coaches registered since 1988, certain exposed seats would have been designed to take belts, and it is likely that other seating positions in these vehicles would have been similarly constructed even though belts were not fitted at the time of manufacture. Older vehicles are less likely to have been designed for seat belts. While this does not necessarily mean that seat belts cannot be fitted to these vehicles, it may be necessary to carry out structural modifications to ensure that seat belts and anchorages can be satisfactorily installed.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what recent changes there have been in the advice his Department gives on the positioning of seat belts; and what were the reasons for each change. [46795]

Ms Glenda Jackson: We have not changed our advice relating to the correct positioning of seat belts. However, we have recently made it clear that belts in minibuses, buses and coaches with a lap strap that sits anywhere between the wearer's pelvis and the upper quarter of the thigh should be treated as acceptably positioned for the purposes of the forthcoming MOT check. This is generally in line with the positioning permitted by the latest amendment to the European seat belt directive.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what tests his Department has (a) carried out and (b) evaluated concerning the ability of vinyl-covered pipe lagging around tubular frames on bus seats to protect seat-belt users in an impact. [46740]

Ms Glenda Jackson: None. The requirements for padding are based on characteristics related to energy absorption, regardless of the material used.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what evidence his Department has evaluated which supports the use of seat belts over the legs as safe practice; and if he will make a statement. [46739]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Ideally, a lap belt, or the lap section of a three point belt, should lie across the pelvis. However, bearing in mind the differences between seat shapes and between one wearer and another, it is inevitable that there will be some variation in the way the strap lies across the body. In cases where a belt cannot lie across the pelvis, it has long been accepted that it is far better for it to lie across the strong upper thigh rather than the vulnerable abdominal region.

Health and Safety Inspectors

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many Health and Safety inspectors have been employed in each of the last five years. [46753]

Angela Eagle: The table shows the number of inspectors employed by the Health and Safety Executive.

Year (1 April)	Inspectors
1994	1,572.5
1995	1,477.6
1996	1,466
1997	1,442.2
1998	1,437.4

Note:

Figures given are full time equivalent counts: part time staff were counted as half units until 1 April 1995; since then they are counted on the basis of the proportion of a full week that they work

Council Tax (Empty Dwellings)

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to remove council tax exemption from empty dwellings. [47032]

Mr. Raynsford: The consultation paper 'Improving local financial accountability' invited views on whether there is a case to change the council tax. The deadline for responses was 1 June. Our proposals will be set out in a White Paper this summer.

Central European Time

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what assessment he has made of the implications for energy saving of a change to Central European Time. [47240]

Angela Eagle: I understand from my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary that there are no plans for the United Kingdom to adopt Central European Time. The 1989 Green Paper "Summertime: A Consultation Document" concluded that a move to CET could result in marginal energy savings, but that these would be subject to larger uncertainties.

Homelessness

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to increase the utilisation of empty buildings for housing the homeless. [47131]

Mr. Raynsford: The Government are committed to making better use of empty buildings as part of our strategy for planning for household growth in the future and at the same time protecting our environment.

We will continue to encourage local authorities to play a key role in this by developing empty property strategies. About 200 authorities have strategies in place or under development. My Department is currently funding the Empty Homes Agency to work with authorities to bring more empty commercial property back into housing use and to assist rural authorities in drawing up successful strategies.

We have made extra money available to local authorities for renovating and improving stock through the Capital Receipts Initiative. Capital funding is also available through the Housing Investment Programme, the Single Regeneration Budget and the Housing Corporation's Approved Development Programme.

Child Safety Week

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what initiatives his Department will take to promote Child Safety Week on 22 to 28 June. [47201]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Child Safety Week makes a valuable contribution to DETR's road safety education efforts. 1998 will be the 5th year that the Department has supported the Child Accident Prevention Trust's (CAPT) Child Safety Week. It is an important event which helps raise awareness of road safety issues among parents, carers and children. The Department encourages all those concerned with child safety to become involved. The week provides an opportunity to remind parents of the need to ensure that their children are safe when out walking, cycling or playing. It reminds adults that they need to take care as drivers—to reduce their speeds and ensure that babies and children are safely secured in their vehicle.

We recently organised a conference to disseminate our recent research on road safety education to practitioners in this field. We have also recently issued a booklet providing a summary of recent research on child road safety education funded by the Department; one of the projects on which we have worked closely with CAPT aims to provide advice to new parents on all aspects of child safety. A copy of the booklet will be available in the Library.

My Department has made a grant of £5,000 to CAPT to support the road safety element of their publicity.

Regional Development Agency (Merseyside and North West)

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what will be the size of the board for the Regional Development Agency in the new combined Merseyside and North West Region; and how many representatives will be from Cumbria. [47216]

Angela Eagle: The RDA board for the North West will have 12 members. Members will not be appointed as representatives, but on merit for the particular expertise and background they offer. Although there will not be a specific allocation of seats for Cumbria, one of the factors taken into account when selecting members for the board will be geographical spread.

Closed Railway Tracks

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many miles of closed railway tracks, in England are open as (a) footpaths, (b) cycle tracks, (c) bridleways; what estimate he has made of the number of miles of track which could be used for (a) to (c); and if he will make a statement. [47203]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Over the years, a substantial mileage of closed railway lines has been sold to local authorities, but details of use as footpaths, cyclepaths or bridleways are not available. 220 miles have recently been transferred to Sustrans for cyclepaths. Those sections of line still in BR ownership and not held for public transport schemes are short (about 70 miles split between more than 100 sites) and are unlikely to be of significant use for these purposes.

Local Authorities (Planning Guidance)

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the (a) powers, (b) responsibilities and (c) budget to be delegated to local councils as part of the proposals for greater decentralisation set out in the document "Planning for Communities: Transitional Arrangements for Regional Planning Guidance and Development Plans". [47068]

Mr. Raynsford: Under the proposals set out in "The future of Regional Planning Guidance" consultation paper published in January, responsibility for the production of draft Regional Planning Guidance (RPG) will be transferred to the regional planning conferences of local authorities. Following an independent public examination of the draft RPG, final guidance will be formally issued by the Secretary of State. As these arrangements are non-statutory, no powers can be transferred to local authorities. There is no separate budgetary provision. However, we have already indicated that the main additional costs of holding the public examination will be met directly by my Department. The preparation of development plans remains the statutory responsibility of local authorities.

North Wales Railway Line

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the electrification of the North Wales railway line. [47114]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The electrification of the North Wales railway is a commercial matter for Railtrack. I understand that studies have been carried out by Railtrack in conjunction with the relevant train operating companies but that electrification is not a commercially viable option at the present time.

Road Hauliers

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what measures he will take to ensure fair competition for UK hauliers when cabotage restrictions end on 1 July. [47192]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Although formal cabotage restrictions end on 1 July, cabotage operations have been possible, under cover of permits, since 1990. To date, no adverse effects on UK operators have been observed. We have no reason to believe this will change. At the same time, UK hauliers have begun to increase their activities abroad and are well placed to benefit from this further liberalisation of the market.

Drugs Misuse (London)

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the powers which a future London Assembly will have to develop a comprehensive drugs misuse strategy for the capital. [47342]

Mr. Raynsford: In April 1998, the President of the Council presented the Government's 10-year strategy for tackling drugs misuse "Tackling drugs to Build a better Britain". The strategy will be overseen and coordinated by Keith Hellawell, the UK Anti-Drugs Coordinator, and coordinated locally by Drug Action Teams. DATs must, through consultation with the other DATs in their region, ensure that their plans have a strategic regional coherence. Where appropriate, they are encouraged to liaise with relevant regional tiers of Government. In London, it is expected that the Mayor and Assembly would work closely with DATs to ensure that factors specific to the capital are reflected in the application of the strategy.

Sites of Special Scientific Interest

Mr. Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will list by region the sites of special scientific interest which have been damaged by falling water table levels in the last 12 months; and which water companies abstract water in each local area. [47345]

Angela Eagle: The Environment Agency published in May 1998 a submission to Government entitled A Price Worth Paying, which is in the Library of the House. Annex 1 of that document lists sites of special scientific interest which the Agency, in consultation with English Nature and the Countryside Council for Wales, considers to be affected by water company abstractions. The listing gives the name of the site, together with the county and the Environment Agency region in which it is situated. In most cases, the water company concerned can be identified from that information, but the Agency region can provide further details in cases of doubt.

Irish Sea

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) if he will list the number and type of oil spills or leaks which have been reported in the Irish Sea in each of the past 10 years; [47124]

(2) how many incidents of ships illegally flushing out their tanks in the Irish Sea were reported in each of the past 10 years; [47125]

(3) if he will list the number and type of radioactive pollution incidents in the Irish Sea in each of the past 30 years; [47126]

(4) if he will list the total tonnages of (a) treated and (b) untreated sewage that was pumped into the Irish Sea in each of the past 10 years; [47127]

(5) if he will list the number and type of pollution incidents on each of the rivers that flow into the Irish Sea for each of the past 10 years; [47128]

(6) if he will list the (a) type, (b) size and (c) location of known armament dumpings in the Irish Sea; [47129]

(7) if he will list the estimated total tonnage of fertilisers which were washed from the land into the Irish Sea for each of the past 10 years. [47130]

Angela Eagle: The Digest of Environment Statistics No 19, 1997 (London, the Stationery Office, ISBN 0–11–753399–8) and the corresponding publications for earlier years set out in chapters 3 and 4 the available statistics, inter alia, on oil spills (incidents reported size, effects and costs incurred), prosecutions and convictions of ships for oil spills, urban waste water treatment plants (discharges into freshwaters, estuaries and coastal waters), water pollution incidents and prosecutions, and direct and riverine inputs (including plant nutrients) from the UK to coastal waters around the UK. Some of these statistics are for England and Wales only. None of them include statistics for the Isle of Man or the Republic of Ireland.

The Nuclear Installations Inspectorate of the Health and Safety Executive produces quarterly reports of incidents involving releases of radioactivity, copies of which are in the Library. No significant incidents in the Irish Sea itself can be identified.

The then Minister for the Armed Forces gave the available details of known dumping of munitions around the United Kingdom by United Kingdom organisations in a written answer on 19 January 1996, Official Report, column 842.

EU Environment and Transport Councils

Dr. Whitehead: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the outcome of the Joint Environment and Transport Council held in Luxembourg on 17 June. [47675]

Mr. Prescott: I chaired the joint Transport and Environment Council in Luxembourg on 17 June. This was an historic occasion, as it was the first time the Councils of EU Transport and Environment Ministers had come together formally to discuss a wide range of issues. I am happy to report a successful outcome, taking forward the mandate on the Environment from the Cardiff European Council the previous day. I am also pleased that Cardiff gave an impetus to environmental integration, and that the Transport, Agriculture and Energy Councils were invited to start the process.

The joint Council unanimously agreed Conclusions which recognise the vital social and economic role of transport but agree that there are adverse environmental effects which mean that current trends in traffic growth are unsustainable. The Conclusions emphasise the importance of an integrated approach, and call for a wide range of policies and measures at Community and Member State level, including national action plans, to promote sustainable mobility. The Conclusions also establish a process for the future, providing for the Commission to report to the Council on developments in the integration of environment and transport, and for the Council to meet again in joint session from time to time, to take stock of progress.

Dr. Whitehead: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the outcome of the Transport Council held in Luxembourg on 17 and 18 June. [47676]

Dr. Strang: I chaired the final Transport Council of the UK Presidency in Luxembourg on 17–18 June. My hon. Friend the Minister for Transport in London represented the United Kingdom.

All our objectives were met. The Council adopted two negotiating mandates, reached a common position on one legislative measure and agreement on four others (pending receipt of the European Parliament's opinion), agreed two sets of Conclusions, and held useful discussions in some important areas.

Safety was a key theme. As Chairman, I presented a paper by the UK Presidency on Transport Safety in the European Union. Following discussion of this paper by Ministers, the Commission accepted an invitation to produce a first report in 1999 on transport safety across all modes in the EU.

Two important negotiating mandates were adopted by the Council. The first of these authorised the Commission to start negotiations, on behalf of the European Community and the Member States, towards the establishment of a new pan-European international organisation, to be known as the European Aviation Safety Authority (EASA). The second mandate authorised the Commission to negotiate Community membership of the European Organisation for the Safety of Air Navigation (EUROCONTROL).

The Council reached a common position on a draft regulation amending Regulation 2299/89 on a code of conduct for computerised reservation systems (CRSs) in air transport.

The Council reached Conclusions welcoming a draft regulation amending Regulation 295/91 on Denied Boarding compensation in scheduled air transport and calling for a decision on it at an early Council. The proposed amendment would strengthen the rights of passengers who are denied boarding to overbooked aircraft.

The Council also reached Conclusions supporting action at global level through the International Civil Aviation Organisation (ICAO) on the limitation of emissions of oxides of nitrogen (NO_x) from jet aircraft engines, though noting that the possibility of Community legislation remains open if ICAO fails to agree worldwide rules. Council also reached broad agreement, pending receipt of the European Parliament's opinion, on the main elements of a draft directive to limit the use of re-certificated civil jet aircraft, usually modified by the fitting of "hush-kits". Council agreed that the draft directive be transformed into a regulation, to facilitate early implementation.

The Council reached broad agreement on draft directives on roadside inspection of commercial vehicles, and on harmonisation of examination requirements for safety advisers for the transport of dangerous goods by road, rail or inland waterway, pending receipt of the European Parliament's opinions.

The Council continued the discussion begun at the Informal Council in April on the Commission Communication proposing step-by-step opening of the rail freight market.

The Commission reported on progress with developing legislative proposals to extend working time rules to the road transport sector.

In maritime transport, the Council reached broad agreement, pending receipt of the European Parliament's opinion, on a directive requiring safety inspection of passenger ferries, the last of a series of measures brought forward in the wake of the 1994 "Estonia" tragedy. The Council also debated the Commission's Green Paper on ports and maritime infrastructure. There was widespread support for the Commission giving priority to further work on principles for port and maritime infrastructure charging and financing, including an inventory of public funding, and on a regulatory framework for port services.

There was also a first exchange of views on two recent Commission proposals on the crewing of vessels operating regular passenger and ferry services within and between member states.

During the Council, on behalf of the European Community, Commissioner Kinnock and I signed a tripartite agreement, with the Directors-General of EUROCONTROL and the European Space Agency, on a European contribution to a Global Navigation Satellite System.

Mr. Singh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will make a statement on the outcome of the Environment Council held in Luxembourg on 16 and 17 June. [47764]

Mr. Meacher: The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions, my hon. Friend the Member for Wallasey (Angela Eagle), chaired the final Environment Council of the UK's Presidency in Luxembourg on 16–17 June. My right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister also attended the Council.

I am delighted to report an extremely successful Council. All of our objectives were met, with the Council agreeing Member States' share of the EU's Kyoto target, reaching four common positions, agreeing five sets of Conclusions and having useful discussions in a number of other areas.

The Council gave highest priority to securing agreement on how the EU would share out the 8 per cent. reduction of greenhouse gases agreed at Kyoto. After protracted and difficult negotiations which involved a continual series of bilaterals lasting throughout the Council, ministers reached agreement on this, and on Conclusions on the closely related issue of common and co-ordinated policies and measures for implementing these targets. Reaching agreement on climate change was one of the UK Presidency's main environmental objectives and I am delighted that we have achieved our goal. On negotiations with the industry to reduce CO_2 from passenger cars, the Council agreed Conclusions welcoming the European car industry's improved offer, but agreed that more work was needed before agreement could be reached.

The Council agreed common positions on four proposals. We agreed a directive setting legally binding limits for airborne levels of four major pollutants which will greatly increase protection for people particularly sensitive to air pollution. We also took further steps towards eliminating acid rain by agreeing a directive which will significantly reduce the sulphur content of heavy fuel and gas oil. Council also reached agreement on a directive establishing a system for licensing and inspection of zoos, so securing one of the UK's main objectives for its Presidency. We also agreed a revised European Environment Agency regulation.

The Council also reached a very considerable degree of common understanding on the proposal for a Water Framework Directive which should allow a common position to be reached once the European Parliament's opinion is available. This is a major environmental proposal which will establish the general orientation of Community water policy over the next 30 years.

Conclusions were agreed preparing the EU's position for the Fourth Pan-European Conference of Environment Ministers in Denmark later this month, on the Community's Biodiversity Strategy and on the follow-up to the Bergen-Northsea Intermediate Ministerial Meeting on the Integration of Fisheries and Environmental Issues.

We also held the first ministerial discussions on a number of important proposals. The debates on proposals to reduce emissions from Heavy Goods Vehicles (part of the Commission's Auto-Oil Programme) and the revision of a directive on the deliberate release of genetically modified organisms will enable the Austrian Presidency to make progress with both of these over the next six months. The Commission will revise its proposal in the light of a very useful debate on eco-labelling. The Council also briefly discussed the Commission's proposal to end the Austria and Luxembourg bans on genetically modified maize, although no decision will be taken on this issue until after the European Parliament has delivered its opinion on 14 July.

The Commission presented its Communication on Environment and Enlargement which will be discussed further by the Council during the Austrian Presidency.

My right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister reported on the Conclusions on the environment agreed by Heads of Government at the European Council in Cardiff on 16 June. These Conclusions establish a new framework for integrating environmental issues into all European policy decisions. Responding to the Spanish Minister's report on the toxic waste spill near Doñana National Park in southern Spain, my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister, who visited the area on 5 June, proposed that there should be a review of current provisions for responding to disasters of this nature and, if these proved unsatisfactory, that there should be a conference to discuss possible alternatives. The Commission responded positively to this proposal and will report on their findings in the Autumn.

At the outset of the Presidency, the UK set itself an ambitious environmental agenda, with six areas identified as priorities (climate change, air quality, biodiversity, enlargement, fisheries and transport). I am delighted to report that, with the Conclusion of this Council, we have achieved our objectives in all those areas.

WALES

Cataract Operations

10. Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what measures he is taking to tackle waiting lists for cataract operations. [45908]

Mr. Win Griffiths: An additional £20 million will be spent in 1998–99 on reducing in-patient and day case waiting lists to below the level which the Government inherited. This supports the Government's commitment to reduce waiting lists over the lifetime of this Parliament by 100,000.

Each Health Authority has been asked to provide details of their plans to reduce overall waiting lists, which would include those for cataract operations, by 19 June.

Health Service

11. Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received concerning the restructuring of the health service in Wales. [45909]

Mr. Win Griffiths: My right hon. Friend and I have received in excess of 2,800 representations on this matter from hon. Members, interested groups and organisations and members of the public. We have also received approximately 15,000 petition signatures and I have held a number of meetings with hon. Members and others. Representations have advocated a variety of courses of action involving the retention or merger of various existing NHS trusts.

12. Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to increase NHS provision in Wales. [45910]

Mr. Win Griffiths: The Government have committed additional resources to NHS Wales in 1998–99. Total provision is £2.480 billion which is £138.5 million more than in 1997–98. My right hon. Friend will announce his plans for 1999–2000 in due course.

Child Care Strategy

13. Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the child care strategy for Wales. [45911]

Mr. Win Griffiths: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Monmouth (Mr. Edwards) on 22 June 1998, Official Report, column 388.

Heart Surgery

14. Mr. Rhodri Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what proposals he has received for the development of heart transplant surgery in Wales. [45912]

Mr. Win Griffiths: The University Hospital of Wales, Cardiff has produced a business case for introducing adult heart transplantation. The Department, in consultation with health authorities, is currently considering the proposals.

25. Ms Julie Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the future of open heart surgery in Wales. [45924]

Mr. Win Griffiths: Reducing the number of deaths from coronary heart disease is one of the 15 national health gain targets and I remain committed to the provision of high quality cardiac services for the people of Wales.

Agricultural Subsidies

16. Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many farmers in Wales have had their 1997 applications for (a) sheep annual premium, (b) suckler cow premium, (c) hill livestock compensatory allowance and (d) beef special premium rejected; and if he will make a statement. [45914]

Mr. Win Griffiths: The numbers of 1997 applications currently rejected are Sheep Annual Premium (172); Hill Livestock Compensatory Allowance (414) and Beef Special Premium (27). It is also anticipated that 150 applications will be rejected under the Suckler Cow Premium Scheme.

Taken together the number of rejections is of the order of 1.3 per cent. of total applications received.

Training

17. Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received during the past three months from training providers in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [45915]

Mr. Hain: My right hon. Friend and I have received 15 letters from training providers over the period. In addition, I have met representatives of the West Wales Training Forum.

Agri-environment Scheme

18. Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what progress he has made in implementing an all-Wales agri-environment scheme. [45916]

Mr. Ron Davies: I have approved the Working Group's recommendations for the technical details for the new scheme and these details have now been forwarded to the European Commission. I am proposing to make an announcement at the 1998 Royal Welsh Show.

EU Structural Funds

19. Ms Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the recent visit of the President of the European Union Commission to Wales, in relation to structural funds. [45918]

Mr. Hain: President Santer and my right hon. Friend discussed the economic and social conditions across Wales. He reinforced the fact that continued structural fund support is crucial to the ongoing regeneration of these areas, particularly in the peripheral West and Valleys areas. These needs were underlined by the plight of the rural economy in Wales, as particularly demonstrated by low agricultural incomes.

20. Mr. Touhig: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on his discussions on the structural funds with the President of the European Commission. [45919]

24. Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he held with the President of the European Commission during his recent visit to Wales on objective 1 status for west Wales and the valleys. [45923]

27. Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the Cardiff European Union summit as it affects his responsibilities, with particular reference to issues relating to objective 1 status. [45926]

Mr. Hain: Discussions at the Cardiff European Council are not expected to have a direct outcome on future structural fund eligibility.

On 15 June the European Council discussed issues of economic reform; the future of Europe as well as enlargement and the Agenda 2000 package. Eligibility for Structural Funding and financial issues are likely to be discussed by Member States towards the end of the year.

Multilateral Agreement on Investment

21. Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the implications for the work of the Welsh Assembly of the current text of the Multilateral Agreement on Investment. [45920]

Mr. Ron Davies: The purpose of the MAI is to prevent discrimination against investors on the grounds of nationality. I do not expect this to constrain the work of the National Assembly for Wales.

Hospital Waiting Lists

22. Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received concerning hospital waiting lists in Wales. [45921]

Mr. Win Griffiths: Other than in respect of individual cases, none. Reducing the time people have to wait for treatment, within the emphasis on emergency care, remains a priority for the Government. The additional £20 million for waiting lists announced in the budget will be targeted at reducing lists to below the level which the Government inherited.

Devolution

23. Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the Government's response to the Welsh Affairs Committee's first report on the impact of the Government's devolution proposals on economic development and local government in Wales (HC 329). [45922]

Mr. Ron Davies: The Government's response to the Welsh Affairs Committee's report, "The Impact of the Government's Devolution Proposals on Economic Development and Local Government in Wales" was published on 1 June 1998. A copy has been placed in the Library of the House.

National Assembly

26. Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discretion elected members of the National Assembly will have in relation to the location of temporary and permanent homes of the national assembly. [45925]

Mr. Ron Davies: They will have discretion to the extent that financial and other commitments permit.

Domestic Energy

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what are his Department's policies to ensure the minimum waste of domestic energy. [45913]

Mr. Win Griffiths: Domestic energy efficiency features prominently in the Department's housing, environmental and economic policies particularly with a view to securing affordable warmth, lower running costs and reductions in CO_2 emissions.

Tallow Trade

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales in what locations in Wales the tallow trade is practised; and if he will make a statement. [45003]

Mr. Win Griffiths: This information is not held centrally. Tallow is produced when animal carcases are rendered. All rendering plants, of which there is only one in Wales, are required to be approved under the Animal By-Products Order 1992 to process ruminant waste. The State Veterinary Service carries out regular announced and unannounced visits to check compliance with this legislation.

Brown-field Sites

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what estimate he has made of the potential for building new housing developments on brown-field sites; and if he will make a statement. [45880]

Mr. Win Griffiths: Planning Guidance (Wales): Planning Policy, May 1996, makes clear that it is for local planning authorities to take account of the scope and potential for rehabilitation, conversion, clearance and redevelopment of land in their areas. In particular, local authorities should take account of the contribution reclaimable or reclaimed urban land can make to the overall provision of land for housing. Local authorities are able to identify suitable sites through the development plan process. The joint Housing Land Availability Studies co-ordinated and published by the Land Authority for Wales can help identify such sites.

We are also encouraging registered social landlords to build more of their developments on brownfield sites. Such schemes are being encouraged by Tai Cymru in the form of a 50 per cent. grant towards the cost of technical site investigations.

National Museum Curator

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions there have been between his Department and the National Museum of Wales concerning the desirability for applicants for the post of curator of the National Museum of Wales having some knowledge of Wales, its history and its people. [46704]

Mr. Ron Davies: Decisions on the appointment of a new Director for the National Museums and Galleries of Wales (NMGW) are a matter for the Council of the NMGW. I understand that a first-hand knowledge of Wales has been included in the description of personal attributes for the post-holder, and that this will therefore be taken into account in making the appointment.

Gas-fired Power Stations

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the impact of the moratorium on gas-fired power stations on Wales; and if he will make a statement. [47419]

Mr. Hain: Welsh Office officials have been maintaining close contact with the power station developers in Wales. The President of the Board of Trade will shortly be making an announcement on the Review of Energy Sources for Power Stations.

Cottage Hospitals

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received concerning the closure of cottage hospitals in Wales. [45917]

Mr. Win Griffiths: Since 1 May 1997, I have received a number of representations about proposals by health authorities for the closure of hospitals in Wales. Such proposals are the responsibility of health authorities and are referred to me for decision only if they cannot be agreed with the local Community Health Council. To date I have received no such referrals.

Town Centre Regeneration

Mr. Gareth Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to assist town centre regeneration in Wales. [45902]

Mr. Ron Davies: My Department encourages its agencies, local authorities and others to take a holistic approach to the regeneration of town centres by drawing up strategies in partnership with the private and voluntary sectors and with community groups. These strategies should, amongst other things, identify appropriate sources of funding from a number of different schemes offering support for town centre regeneration.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Antibiotics (Resistance)

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to implement the recommendations made by the House of Lords Science and Technology Select Committee in its report on Resistance to Antibiotics and other Antimicrobia agents (Seventh report of Session 1997–98 (HL81)). [46927]

Mr. Rooker: The Select Committee's Report is being carefully considered jointly with Health Ministers. The Government will respond to the Committee when this consideration has been completed.

Badgers

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will estimate the numbers and costs of badgers killed in official programmes each year since 1970. [46757]

Mr. Rooker: Official badger removal operations did not start until 1975. The number of badgers removed and sent for post-mortem each full year since 1975 is as follows:

Year	Number of badgers
1975	100
1976	203
1977	183
1978	208
1979	357
1980	346
1981	200
1982	691
1983	995
1984	1,265
1985	1,120
1986	785
1987	733
1988	778
1989	727
1990	810
1991	990
1992	1,054
1993	1,094
1994	1,683
1995	1,509
1996	1,911
1997	2,447

The Department does not have annual figures for the cost of removing badgers. However, the overall cost of the Department's Wildlife Unit, whose principal role was to visit farms in England and parts of Wales, and survey, trap, kill and submit for post-mortem inspection badgers taken in official programmes, was £1.67 million in 1997. Ignoring the cost of minor duties, such as collecting other dead badgers for post-mortem examination, this is equivalent to almost £700 per badger taken.

Departmental Reviews

Mr. Allan: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list, for each of the last four years, all departmental inquiries and reviews instigated by ministers which have been chaired by individuals outside his Department; and in each case if he will give the date of establishment and the name of the chairman. [46827]

Mr. Morley: Details of relevant inquiries from June 1994 are as follows:

Committee	Date established	Chairman
Committee on Ethical Implications of Emerging Technologies in the Breeding of Farm Animals	[1]April 1993	The Reverend Professor Michael Banner MA DPhil
Dairy Produce Quota Tribunal for England and Wales	June 1994	Sir Michael Kerry QC
The Nitrate Vulnerable Zone Independent Review Panel	May 1995	Mr. Terrence Etherton QC
The Common Fisheries Policy Review Group	March 1995	Mr. John Goodlad (from September 1995)
Independent Scientific Review on Tuberculosis in Cattle and Badgers	14 November 1996	Professor John Krebs FRS
Assessment of the Radiological Implications of Dumping in Beaufort's Dyke and Other Coastal Waters from the 1950s	30 July 1997	National Radiological Protection Board
The Advisory Group on Quarantine	2 October 1997	Professor Ian Kennedy LLD
Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy Inquiry	22 December 1997	Lord Justice Phillips
Review of Salmon and Freshwater Fisheries	8 April 1998	Professor Lynda Warren
Review of Public Analyst Arrangements	April 1998	Mr. Alan Turner OBE

[1] Report published February 1995

Calf Processing Scheme

Mr. Paice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the future of the calf processing scheme. [47255]

Mr. Rooker [holding answer 23 June 1998]: The Government issued a consultation paper on 7 May 1998 on the proposition that this scheme should terminate on 30 November 1998 when its application ceases to be compulsory. The consultation period ends on 2 July and the Government will consider their position in the light of responses received.

Drift Nets

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when the ban on drift net fishing announced by the European Union will come into force; how it will be policed; what penalties will be imposed on fishing fleets which breach the ban on drift net fishing; and if he will press for a world wide ban on drift net fishing. [45858]

Mr. Morley: After 31 December 2001 it will be illegal for EU fishermen to use high seas drift-nets for tuna, swordfish and similar species. As with other fisheries on the high seas, responsibility for enforcement and dealing with infringements will be a matter for the flag state. A United Nations Resolution, which the United Kingdom fully supports, already calls for a moratorium on high-seas drift-nets.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Disaffected Children

Mr. Stephen Twigg: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when his Department will respond to the Fifth report of the Education and Employment Committee, Session 1997–98 (HC 498) on Disaffected Children. [47826]

Mr. Blunkett: The Department has produced its response to the Select Committee's Report on Disaffected Children. A copy of the response has been sent to the Education and Employment Select Committee. A copy will be placed in the Library.

Grammar Schools

Mr. Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate he has made of the cost of holding ballots on the future of grammar schools in (a) Kent, (b) Lincolnshire, (c) Medway, (d) Slough, (e) Southend, (f) Torbay, (g) Trafford, (h) Buckinghamshire and (i) Bexley. [47090]

Mr. Byers: Ballots will be held only when 20 per cent. of local parents seek one. The cost will depend on how many ballots parents seek. Where parents seek ballots, every effort will be made to ensure that costs are kept to a minimum and value for money is secured.

Universities (Scotland)

Mr. Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate he has made of the number of students from England who will attend Scottish universities in 1998–99. [47089]

Dr. Howells: The Department does not publish forecasts of entrants by country of domicile or by country of study.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Focus Groups

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will place in the Library a copy of the focus group work which she has commissioned since 1 May last year, indicating the cost in each case. [45459]

Mr. Field: We have today placed in the Library a list containing the information requested.

Lone Parents

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to her answer of 21 April 1998, Official Report, columns 604–45, if she will update her answer as regards how many lone parents who gained employment are now in receipt of income support and have no earnings, and include those who gained employment in the period (a) 1 March to 31 March and (b) 1 April to 30 April. [45191]

Mr. Keith Bradley [holding answer 15 June 1998]: The number of lone parents who obtained employment between the following dates, and who are now in receipt of Income Support and have no earnings are as follows:

Period	Number of lone parents who obtained employment/ increased hours	Number of lone parents who obtained employment/ increased hours, but who are now in receipt of Income Support and have no earnings
21 July-22 October 1997	518	87
23 October-30 November 1997	391	86
1 December-31 December 1997	141	28
1 January-31 January 1998	228	32
1 February-28 February 1998	240	36
1 March-31 March 1998	280	26
1 April-30 April 1998	219	14

Notes:

1. The figures given for the number of lone parents who have found employment include those lone parents who have increased their hours while participating in the New Deal for Lone Parents
2. The figures given for the number of lone parents who have found employment but are now on Income Support with no earnings represent information as of 16 June 1998

It is not possible to draw conclusions about exit rates from employment of lone parents on the New Deal for Lone Parents as the data from the New Deal for Lone Parents are insufficient to calculate exit rates. The interim evaluation results of the New Deal for Lone Parents show that the programme has had an encouraging and marked effect on the rate at which lone parents move off Income Support; the programme has reduced the number of lone parents on Income Support in the New Deal areas by between one and two percentage points.

The final evaluation report, which will be available in Autumn 1999, will compare the outcomes for lone parents in the eight prototype New Deal for Lone Parents areas with those in the control areas.

Budget Changes

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many couples with children aged (a) under 11 years and (b) 11 years and above, claiming income support after 5 April, will be better off as a result of changes announced in the Budget and due to take effect in April 1999 by (i) up to £2.50, (ii) £2.51 to £5, (iii) £5.01 to £7.50, (iv) £7.50 to £10 and (v) £10.01 and above per week; and how many will remain unaffected. [46001]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The changes announced in the Budget which are due to take effect from April 1999 consist of a £2.50 increase in Child Benefit for the eldest child, and a £2.50 increase in the Family Premium in Income Support, Jobseeker's Allowance, Housing Benefit and Council Tax Benefit. The information requested on the numbers affected by this change is in the tables.

Couples in receipt of income support (IS)/jobseeker's allowance (JSA) with children under the age of eleven

Gender Impact Assessments

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will place in the Library copies of gender impact assessments which have been undertaken in respect of legislation introduced in this Parliament; if he will make it his policy to do so in respect of future legislation; and if he will make a statement. [47021]

Ms Ruddock: The gender perspective in policy making is being addressed through the cross-Departmental mainstreaming initiative which the Ministers for Women launched on 18 May. We have consulted widely in the formulation of new guidelines. These guidelines will require Departments to:

consider how policy proposals affect women;

consult with women's organisations where appropriate; and to take action where the differential impact is not justifiable.

The Ministers for Women intend to publish an Annual Report to Parliament setting out progress on mainstreaming the women's perspective into Government policy-making. The first report will be published after the end of this financial year.

ENVIRONMENT, TRANSPORT AND THE REGIONS

Queen Elizabeth II Bridge

Sir Sydney Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when ownership of the Queen Elizabeth II bridge and the Dartford Tunnels will transfer to the Government; if the transfer will be earlier than scheduled; and what difference there has been between the revenue received from toll charges and the forecast made when the bridge was sanctioned. [46755]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The concession for the Dartford crossings is likely to end, on current projections and subject to ongoing assessments of maintenance requirements, towards the end of 2000. Tolling can then continue for a further year for the accumulation of a maintenance fund. This estimated timetable is 3 years shorter than was envisaged at the start of the Dartford River Crossing's concession in July 1988. In real terms, toll revenue has been over 20 per cent. higher than expected.

Gender Impact Assessments

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will place in the Library copies of gender impact assessments which have been undertaken in respect of legislation introduced in this Parliament; if he will make it his policy to do so in respect of future legislation; and if he will make a statement. [47028]

Angela Eagle: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Women yesterday, 24 June 1998, Official Report, columns 557–58.

Environment Agency (Penrith Office)

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many Environment Agency staff in Carlisle have been made redundant because of the move to Penrith. [47232]

Angela Eagle: None.

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many new jobs will be created in Penrith because of the move to Penrith of the Environment Agency Regional Office. [47224]

Angela Eagle: The Penrith Office will be staffed by existing Environment Agency employees from elsewhere in the North West Region. There are no plans for additional posts at this stage.

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what estimate he has made of the resources which the Environment Agency will put into the local economy in Penrith and the surrounding area when its new headquarters are fully functioning. [47231]

Angela Eagle: No estimate has been made.

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is the total number of jobs in the new Environment Agency office in Penrith. [47228]

Angela Eagle: 118.

Eurostar Sleeper Carriages

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what is to happen to the Eurostar sleeper carriages. [47274]

Ms Glenda Jackson: Following the termination of the lease referred to in my answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Tamworth (Mr. Jenkins) on 16 June 1998, Official Report, column 126, the partially built rolling stock became the responsibility of the manufacturer, GEC Metro Cammel. If this rolling stock is sold on by the manufacturer there is a profit sharing arrangement which could result in a return to the taxpayer.

London Underground (Muggings)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many mugging offences against passengers on London Underground services were reported in the last 12 months. [47339]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The safety and security of passengers is a top priority for London Underground. It works in partnership with the British Transport Police to reduce the incidence of crime on the network. I understand from London Transport that 462 robberies were recorded in the period from June 1997 to June 1998, a reduction of 8 per cent. on the previous year.

Crop Irrigation

Sir Raymond Powell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to restrict the use of water for irrigating crops. [47514]

Angela Eagle: Under proposals set out in The Review of the Water Abstraction Licensing System in England and Wales—Consultation Paper which we published on 19 June, all forms of irrigation where water is moved from a source and applied to land would have to be licensed, unless the abstracted quantities are below a threshold amount which would be set to reflect the local water resource position. Currently, only abstraction for spray irrigation requires a licence.

Sir Raymond Powell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to remove entitlement to compensation if an abstraction water licence for irrigating crops is revoked or varied. [47515]

Angela Eagle: As set out in The Review of the Water Abstraction Licensing System in England and Wales—Consultation Paper which we published on 19 June, we are minded to remove, from a date to be determined, compensation for losses arising from the revocation or variation of any abstraction licence which has been granted without time limit if the Secretary of State is satisfied that the proposed action is necessary in order to protect the associated water environment from significant damage.

Lake District National Park

Mr. Collins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions (1) how he proposes to consult residents and businesses within the Lake District National Park following the publication of his conclusions about transport strategy in the area; [47463]

(2) if (a) the viability of local businesses, (b) the prospects for local jobs and (c) the nature of village life in the area will be taken into account in his Department's review of transport strategy within the Lake District National Park; and if he will make a statement; [47464]

(3) which organisations and individuals representing residents and businesses within the Lake District National Park (a) have been consulted, (b) will be consulted and (c) have chosen to express a view on his Department's transport strategy for the area; [47465]

(4) when he expects to announce his conclusions concerning transport policy within the Lake District National Park; and if he will make a statement. [47466]

Angela Eagle: The Deputy Prime Minister has asked me to look at the transport problems faced by the Lake District and to see what the Government can do to help build on the work which has already been done by a local partnership including Cumbria County Council, the National Park Authority, the Countryside Commission and the Cumbria Tourist Board. I visited the Lake District National Park on 15 May to meet the local partners and to see the problems and opportunities first hand. The Government are committed to an integrated approach, linking matters such as jobs, housing, transport and other services in rural areas, to foster a living sustainable countryside.

Any new proposals will need to build on the existing transport strategy, for which consultation mechanisms already exist. A number of individuals and organisations representing local interests have put forward their views on the transport problems and solutions in the Lake District National Park. I will be reporting my findings to the Deputy Prime Minister shortly. We will then need to consider the way forward with the local partners.

Fishing Vessel Losses

Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many fishing vessels have been lost from Cornish ports since 1995; how many men were lost in each case; and who owned the vessels. [47462]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Marine Accident Investigation Branch has produced a list showing Cornish fishing vessel losses between 1995 and 1997, the most recent years for which records are available.

Date of accident	Name of vessel	Fatalities	Owner
6 November 1995	Provider	3	Mr. G. Adams
25 July 1996	Lars William	—	Mr. D. J. Evans
15 August 1996	Flem Art	—	Mr. C. K. Curtis
16 August 1996	Rachel and Daniel	—	W. Harvey and Sons
24 December 1996	New Dawn	—	Mr. A. J. McFarlane
11 March 1997	Gorah Lass	3	Mr. P. W. Benney
30 March 1997	William G	—	Mr. D. P. Smith
19 September 1997	Lynn-Well	—	Tarbert Shellfish Co. Ltd.
11 November 1997	Margaretha Maria	4	Mr. G. Adams
5 December 1997	Southover Scorpio	—	Mr. G. A. Tomlinson

This list includes vessels which were operated from Cornish ports but were not necessarily registered there.

Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what plans he has to raise the 'Margaretha Maria'; and what investigations are taking place to identify the cause of the loss of the vessel. [47461]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The Marine Accident Investigation Branch has no plans to raise the vessel. It is currently analysing the material obtained on the survey and is satisfied that it has obtained sufficient evidence to determine how the vessel was lost.

Mr. Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions what representations he has received from the widows of the men lost aboard the 'Margaretha Maria'. [47460]

Ms Glenda Jackson: One representation has been received from the hon. Member on behalf of Mrs. Todd.

Wetlands

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions when he plans to introduce legislation to ban the use of lead shot over wetlands; and if he will make a statement. [47096]

Angela Eagle: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Minister for the Environment to my hon. Friend the Member for Shipley (Mr. Leslie) on 18 December 1997, Official Report, column 276.

Asbestos

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions how many deaths have been caused through white asbestos in each of the last five years. [47410]

Angela Eagle: The number of cases specifically caused by white asbestos cannot be determined from available statistics which do not distinguish between types of asbestos. However, there is good evidence that blue and brown asbestos is significantly more hazardous than white.

Asbestos causes three fatal diseases: mesothelioma, lung cancer and asbestosis. The number of deaths from all types of asbestos exposure for mesothelioma and asbestosis in the last five years for which complete data are available are as follows:

Year	Mesothelioma	Asbestosis
1991	1,011	163
1992	1,082	150
1993	1,140	172
1994	1,241	174
1995	1,317	164

The number of lung cancers cannot be accurately determined, but indirect evidence suggests that there are at least as many cases as for mesothelioma.

These figures represent deaths from exposure probably between 15 and 45 years ago when the use of asbestos was more widespread and when legislative controls were less stringent than now.

Stagecoach

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions if he will launch an inquiry into the proposed acquisition of a stake in Virgin Rail by Stagecoach. [47561]

Ms Glenda Jackson: The proposed acquisition by Stagecoach of a 49 per cent. shareholding in Virgin Rail will require approval by the Franchising Director under the terms of Virgin's franchise agreements and by the Rail Regulator under the terms of the licences issued by him. It may also constitute a merger under the terms of the Fair Trading Act 1973 and the Director General of Fair Trading will be considering this. If it is a qualifying merger, he will provide advice to the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry as to whether it should be referred to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission or whether undertakings should be sought in lieu of such a reference.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Lockerbie

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Attorney-General how many members of his Department are currently working on Lockerbie. [47293]

The Attorney-General: The conduct of the criminal investigation into the Lockerbie tragedy is in the hands of my noble and learned Friend the Lord Advocate. The conduct of the ongoing litigation before the International Court of Justice is a responsibility which my noble and learned Friend the Lord Advocate shares with my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary. Officials from my office are involved in consideration and discussion of the matter as appropriate.

Departmental Reviews

Mr. Allan: To ask the Attorney-General if he will list, for each of the last four years, all departmental inquiries and reviews instigated by ministers which have been chaired by individuals outside his Department; and in each case if he will give the date of establishment and the name of the chairman. [46836]

The Attorney-General: Two such reviews have been established by me or my predecessor during the past four years. They are:

Review	Date	Chairman
Possible merger of SFO and CPS Fraud Divisions	July 1994	Rex Davie
Review of Crown Prosecution Service	June 1997	Right hon. Sir Iain Glidewell

Legal Aid

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Attorney-General, pursuant to the answer of 28 April 1998, Official Report, columns 65–67, on legal aid, if he will list for the named barristers the amount of public funds they gained from prosecution costs over the same period. [42265]

The Attorney-General [holding answer 19 May 1998]: The number of prosecuting authorities in England and Wales makes it impracticable for my officials to make inquiries of each in order to aggregate payments made to each counsel. Such inquiries have therefore been confined to the four main prosecuting authorities only, namely the Crown Prosecution Service, the Serious Fraud Office, the Department of Trade and Industry and HM Customs and Excise. Figures are for gross fees inclusive of VAT. Because of the system operated for the payment of prosecution fees, the figures represent sums actually paid to counsel during the period in question, which is a different basis to that reflected in the answer given by the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department on 28 April 1998, Official Report, columns 65–67, which were calculated on a last payment basis.

The sums paid by way of prosecution fees to the barristers named during the financial year 1996–97 by the authorities mentioned above is as follows:

Dr. Reid: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Service Children's Education

Mr. Borrow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the key targets for 1998–99 for the Chief Executive of Service Children's Education. [48004]

Mr. Spellar: The Chief Executive has been set the following Key Targets for 1998–99.

1. Exceed the 1997–98 UK LEA average percentage pass rate (measured as a percentage of pupil entries) gaining A* to C grade in 5 or more subjects at GCSE by 4 per cent.; 1998–99 target is 44.3 per cent.
2. Exceed 1997–98 UK LEA average percentage pass rate (as measured as a percentage of subject entries) at grades A* to C at A level by 2 per cent.; 1998–99 target is 54 per cent.
3. Maintain an overall percentage pass rate for GNVQ Intermediate Level; 1998–99 target is 92 per cent.
4. Achieve the following results at standard assessment tasks and tests (SATs) at each of ages 7, 11 and 14 in: (a) English (b) Maths (c) Science.

5. Achieve as a minimum a "satisfactory" standard in each OFSTED school inspection.
6. Implement the SCE elements of the MOD scheme(s) for the provision of nursery education overseas.

Note:

This target seeks to ensure the completion of the introduction of free nursery education in line with UK provision.

7. To achieve a percentage reduction in real terms in pupil per capita costs (measured against total Agency resource costs) of 2.5 per cent.
8. Achieve an index of satisfaction with SCE within the Army Continuous Attitude Survey above 358 overall and above 400 for Germany.

Note:

The "Army Continuous Attitude Survey" is an independent customer survey of the views of Army Personnel.

9. Ensure the percentage of inquiries and/or requests answered within 10 working days of receipt is at least 90 per cent.

United Kingdom Hydrographic Office

Mr. Rapson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what key targets have been set for the United Kingdom Hydrographic Office Defence Agency for 1998–99. [48024]

Mr. Spellar: The key targets set for the UK Hydrographic Office in 1998–99 are as follows:

1. To process and promulgate priority safety information within stated timescales from receipt of data.
2. To achieve 100 per cent. of the endorsed and funded Defence Programme to cost, quality and timeliness targets as defined in Tasking Authorisation Forms (TAFs).
3. To meet short-notice Defence operational requirements within agreed timescales.
4. Implement by 30 September 1998 new performance indicators (PIs) of product availability and service levels for response times as perceived from our customers' perspective for improving safe navigation.
5. To break even taking one year with another.
6. To achieve an average Return on Capital Employed (ROCE) during the plan period of 7.5 per cent.
7. To achieve efficiency savings of 13.5 per cent. of controllable costs (based on controllable costs for FY95–96) by 31 March 2001.

Agency Newsletters

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the current security classifications of the newsletters produced for the staff of (a) the Army Base Repair Organisation, (b) the Army Personnel Centre and (c) the RAF Training Group;, how often each is produced; and when each was first produced. [46815]

Mr. Spellar: This is a matter for the Chief Executives of the Agencies concerned. I have asked them to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Jim Drew to Mr. Matthew Taylor, dated 25 June 1998:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about newsletters produced by three Defence Agencies. This mater, as far as the Army Base Repair Organisation (ABRO) is concerned, falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive.

The ABRO Newsletter, "ABRO News", is unclassified. It was first produced in August 1994. Until 1997 it was produced every other month. In 1997 three issues were produced and there has been one issue thus far in 1998.

Letter from Tony Stables to Mr. Matthew Taylor, dated 25 June 1998:

I am replying to your Question to the Parliamentary Under Secretary of State for Defence about the production of newsletters, as this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Royal Air Force Training Group Defence Agency.

The RAF Training Group does not currently produce an Agency-wide newsletter, but a variety of such publications are issued by our individual units to their own staff, giving up to date information on all matters of interest. They are unclassified and published at varying intervals. The original dates of issue are as varied as the publications themselves; however, most of them have been launched, or relaunched in their present format, since the formation of the Agency in April 1994.

Letter from Alex Stevenson to Mr. Matthew Taylor, dated 25 June 1998:

I am replying on behalf of the Chief Executive of the Army Personnel Centre (APC), in his absence on business, to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the security classification and production of an APC newsletter, as this matter falls within the responsibility of this Agency.

The APC has produced two types of newsletter, both of which have been published without security classifications to ensure they received the widest possible circulation among the intended readership. Seven issues of an internal newsletter for staff of the APC and its predecessor organisations were published at irregular intervals between April 1996 and September 1997 to report major developments in the APC Implementation Programme. Production of a successor internal newsletter is currently being considered. An external newsletter for APC customers was first produced in December 1997 and has been published quarterly to all Field Army units worldwide. Two issues have been published to date and a third will be published in July.

Chemical and Biological Weapons

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence in what ways he is co-operating with the US Defence Secretary in the devising and development of (a) protective equipment and (b) vaccines to defend (i) United States and British troops and (ii) civilian populations from chemical and biological weapons. [46544]

Mr. George Robertson [holding answer 22 June 1998]: I have recently agreed with the US Defence Secretary that we should increase co-operation to combat chemical and biological weapons. This will further deepen the existing close collaboration in this area.

The UK is already party to a trilateral Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) with the United States and Canada on chemical and biological defence. Under the auspices of this MOU, we have developed a joint approach to chemical and biological defence and collaboration across the full range of defensive measures, including protective equipment and vaccines. In addition, the three countries are seeking to harmonise our policy and procedures for dealing with the threat from chemical and biological weapons. We also plan to participate in a joint vaccine programme which will develop licensed vaccines for all three countries.

The defence of the civilian population is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary.

Mount McKinley Rescue

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the rescue of the two British Army climbers from Mount McKinley in Alaska. [47559]

Mr. Spellar: On Thursday 18 June a 10 man team of soldiers from the 1st Battalion, the Princess of Wales Royal Regiment, had split into two groups in an attempt to climb Mt. McKinley in Alaska. A team of six were attempting the summit, whilst three soldiers remained in a mountain hut at 14,000ft to provide support. The tenth solider had already left the mountain suffering from altitude sickness.

At 19,300ft as they attempted to cross a snow buttress, the leading group of three soldiers, who were roped together, fell 300ft. Two of them sustained injuries which prevented them from taking any further part in the expedition. Whilst the two injured soldiers remained at 19,000 ft with two fit members of the team, the other two descended to a rescue hut to raise the alarm. During the descent they encountered two American civilian climbers who had both fallen and had sustained serious injury. One of the soldiers remained with the Americans whilst the other continued down the mountain to alert the rescue services.

The High Altitude Rescue Team from the US Army Base at Fort Wainwright were alerted by the National Park Rangers at 2 o'clock on the morning of Friday 19 June. However, due to heavy cloud formations, strong winds and temperatures of 30 degrees below zero, a helicopter rescue was not possible. Later that day one of the injured soldiers who had been unconscious but had now recovered, needed to be evacuated to a lower altitude. He was accompanied by a fit member of the team. However, during the descent, the climbers became disoriented and both fell a considerable distance down a steep slope. During the fall one of the soldiers suffered a broken ankle. Both were rescued and taken to the hut at 14,000 ft, still unable to be lifted out by helicopter due to poor conditions.

The two soldiers remaining at 19,000 ft were now isolated by bad weather which prevented their rescue until Monday 21 June. During this period they endured four difficult nights at high altitude, in freezing conditions, with very little food. On 21 June a special high altitude Lama helicopter lifted both soldiers from the mountain to a base camp where they were transferred to another helicopter and air lifted to hospital in Anchorage. In total, four soldiers were hospitalised, one has sustained a broken ankle, two have frostbite, and one, who has since been released, had minor injuries.

We owe a debt of gratitude to the National Park Rangers and the US Emergency Services for performing such a gallant act of rescue. In addition, the many mountaineers who assisted on the mountain in the recovery of our soldiers are to be thanked. We should also congratulate our soldiers, who finding themselves in extremely difficult circumstances, relied upon their high quality training to survive this hostile and life threatening situation.

Eurofighter

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage of the Eurofighter aircraft by value is sourced from (a) the United Kingdom, (b) Germany, (c) Spain and (d) Italy. [46978]

Mr. Spellar: Workshare entitlements, based on the number of aircraft each country is purchasing are: United Kingdom 37.42 per cent., Germany 29.03 per cent., Spain

14.03 per cent. and Italy 19.52 per cent. Any imbalances that arise between production activity levels and entitlements will be addressed during the life of the programme using mechanisms established in the Memoranda of Understanding signed by the partner nations in December 1997.

AWE, Aldermaston

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many quarterly analysis reports produced by the Directorate of Quality Assurance at the Atomic Weapons Establishment, Aldermaston since January 1995 are currently unclassified. [46796]

Mr. Spellar: Fourteen.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many directorates currently exist at the Atomic Weapons Establishment, Aldermaston. [46797]

Mr. Spellar: Eleven.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 11 May 1998, Official Report, columns 1–2, how many reports produced by the Weapon Diagnostic Division of the Atomic Weapons Establishment between 1979 and 1994 are currently unclassified. [46809]

Mr. Spellar: Twenty five of the reports produced by the Weapon Diagnostic Division of the Atomic Weapons Establishment between 1979 and 1994 are currently unclassified.

Strategic Defence Review

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he currently expects to publish the strategic defence review; and when he ceased to expect to publish the review in the first half of the year. [47517]

Mr. George Robertson: I expect to be able to publish a White Paper on the outcome of the Strategic Defence Review shortly. The timetable has been kept under review and it is only in the last two weeks that it has become clear that we could not publish in the first half of the year.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Small Businesses

Mr. Baldry: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if she will make a statement on the targets the Government have set for their policies on smaller businesses, indicating the timetable for such targets. [47427]

Mrs. Roche: The Government are currently refining their detailed policy framework for small businesses.

The resulting strategy will be set out in the Competitiveness White Paper to be published in the Autumn.

Berlin Airlift

Ms Stuart: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans the Post Office has to issue a set of stamps to commemorate the Berlin Airlift. [47426]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The Post Office's stamp programme for 1999 has been designed to celebrate the Millennium: no special anniversaries will be commemorated. The Post Office recognises the importance of the Berlin Airlift anniversary and plans to issue a special commemorative label with associated philatelic products to honour the event. With the support of the Ministry of Defence, the Post Office is planning a high profile launch to maximise interest and publicity.

Gender Impact Assessments

Jackie Ballard: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will place in the Library copies of gender impact assessments which have been undertaken in respect of legislation introduced in this Parliament; if he will make it his policy to do so in respect of future legislation; and if he will make a statement. [47022]

Mr. Ian McCartney: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Women on 24 June 1998, Official Report, columns 557–58.

Minimum Wage

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to her oral statement of 18 June 1998, Official Report, columns 507–19, what research underlay her statement that there would be no employment effects consequent on her minimum wage proposals; and what factors underlie the estimates made by the Low Pay Commission. [47236]

Mr. Ian McCartney: The Government's assessment was based on a wide range of econometric studies. The independent Low Pay Commission, which undertook a comprehensive consultation exercise and examined a wide body of published research on the effect of national minimum wages, concluded that a national minimum wage set at a sensible level, as we propose, should not have an adverse effect on employment.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if the minimum wage legislation will allow a worker to agree to be paid (a) nothing, (b) a rate between nothing and the minimum and (c) nothing for some hours or functions and the minimum for other hours or functions. [47322]

Mr. Ian McCartney: We have accepted the Low Pay Commission's recommendation that workers will be paid at least the national minimum wage for all hours worked and for all hours when they are at work and available for work. All workers will be covered by the minimum wage legislation apart from the genuinely self-employed and voluntary workers.

Supermarkets (Anti-competitive Practices)

Mr. Breed: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans she has to prevent supermarkets engaging in anti-competitive practices; and if she will make a statement. [47193]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: Under UK competition legislation, the Director General of Fair Trading is responsible for monitoring markets and considering allegations of anti-competitive behaviour, abuse of monopoly power or restrictive trade practices.

Anyone with evidence of anti-competitive practices should forward this to the Director General.

Insider Dealing

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many DTI investigations have been conducted into alleged insider share dealing since 1987; and how many have resulted in a successful prosecution. [47200]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: There have been 125 separate appointments of inspectors under section 177 of the Financial Services Act 1986 since 1987, some of which are ongoing. Successful prosecutions have followed from 11 of these appointments. This excludes 9 successful prosecutions, 6 by the DTI, where inspectors were not appointed.

Aerospace Investment

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how much has been invested in research and development in the aerospace industry by the (a) private sector and (b) Government in each of the last three years. [46217]

Mr. Battle [holding answer 16 June 1998]: Expenditure on aerospace research and development performed within UK businesses for the last three years for which data are available is as follows:

£ million

	Government[1]	Funded by Private sector[2]	Total
1994	240	620	860
1995	242	643	886
1996	216	596	812

[1] Government funded R&D includes payments of launch investment which can generate returns to Government through levies on sales. Government funded also includes a small contribution from the European Union.

Business Franchising

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what research her Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into the role of business franchising as a means of facilitating small firm growth. [47145]

Mrs. Roche: The Department has commissioned the following research on business franchising:

In 1993–94 Professor John Stanworth of the International Franchise Research Centre, University of Westminster, evaluated the impact of franchising on small and medium-sized enterprises (SMEs). The report, entitled "The Impact of Franchising on the Development Prospects of SMEs in the United Kingdom" was published in 1994.

In 1995–96 Professor D. A. Kirby of Durham University Business School, Ms J. Waites of the Franchise Company, Stockton and Mr. J. Bagri carried out research on "Franchising as a Business Development Strategy" for the Department. The final report was published in 1996.

Both reports are available in the Library of the House.

As a result of the Department's research, a publication entitled "An introduction to Franchising—Franchising Your Business" has been produced. This is aimed at those considering franchising their business, and complements an existing booklet for those considering purchasing a franchise.

Smaller Quoted Companies

Mr. Loughton: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what has been the changes in the proportion of United Kingdom gross domestic product contributed by smaller quoted companies in each of the last 10 years; [47081]

(2) what proportion of United Kingdom export sales were made by smaller quoted companies in each of the last five years. [47082]

Mrs. Roche [holding answer 23 June 1998]: The information requested is not available from official sources.

Lord Archer

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the cost of her Department's investigation into the share transactions relating to Anglia TV in 1994; how many inspectors were assigned to the case; and how long it took. [46982]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: On 8 February 1994 two independent inspectors were appointed under S.177 of the Financial Services Act 1986 to investigate dealings in the securities of Anglia Television Group Plc between 10 January and 21 January 1994. They submitted their report on 19 July 1994. Their fees and disbursements amounted to about £215,000 (including VAT).

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if her Department's inspectors investigating the dealing by Lord Archer in Anglia TV shares in 1994 interviewed Sir Nicholas Lloyd; and if she will make a statement. [46577]

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: It is not the Department's practice to give details of witnesses in insider dealing investigations.

Cigarette Exports

Mr. Rowe: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many cigarettes manufactured in the United Kingdom were exported and to which countries in each of the last five years; and if she will make a statement. [46921]

Mrs. Roche: The values of UK exports of cigarettes to the main destinations in each of the last 5 years are given in the following table. The statistics on UK trade do not distinguish between cigarettes that are manufactured in the United Kingdom and those manufactured elsewhere.

UK exports of cigarettes, 1993–97

SCOTLAND

Pilot Schemes

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the pilot schemes announced since 1 May 1997 by his Department that involve local authorities in a lead or partnership capacity; if he will list each of the local authorities involved in each case; and what revenue and capital funding each local authority will receive through the pilot in (i) 1997–98, (ii) 1998–99, (iii) 1999–2000 and (iv) 2000–01. [46041]

Mr. Macdonald [holding answer 15 June 1998]: There are a large number of pilot schemes across my Department involving local authorities. The information requested is not held centrally and the costs of providing it in full would be disproportionate. In most cases, the total sums involved in each scheme are less than £50,000; many involve no additional funding. The following are amongst the larger schemes for which my Department is responsible.

1. £16 million has been allocated to a pilot Rough Sleepers Initiative over 3 years 1997–98 to 1999–2000; and £9 million to a pilot Empty Homes Initiative in 1997–98 and 1998–99. The schemes are a mix of revenue and capital expenditure.
2. The Mental Health Development Fund involves funding of £3 million per year between 1998–99 and 2000–2001 for partnership schemes which demonstrate the breaking down of barriers to co-ordinated care and support.
3. The Alternatives to Exclusion Grant Programme involves funding of £3 million over 3 years to reduce the incidence of exclusion from school; the scheme mainly involves revenue funding; 18 councils will participate.
4. £1.3 million has been allocated to the New Deal for Communities Programme in 1998–99, to help neighbourhoods with high concentrations of deprivation. Edinburgh and Glasgow Councils will be involved in the pilots and more councils are to be designated.
5. The Public Libraries Challenge Fund of £250,000 was established on a pilot basis for 1997–98 only; 6 authorities received capital funding.

Farmers (Payments)

Mr. Charles Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what percentage of payments due in December 1997 to farmers (a) were paid late and (b) have not been paid to date; and if he will make a statement. [46944]

Mr. Macdonald: Under the Arable Area Payments Scheme in Scotland 98.6 per cent. of applicants received payments due by 31 December 1997 (representing 98 per cent. by value). As at 1 June 0.05 per cent. of applicants are yet to receive payments (representing 0.05 per cent. by value).

Further Education

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent discussions he has had with the Association of Scottish Colleges regarding funding; what plans he has to give additional funding to the further education sector in 1999–2000; and if he will make a statement. [47249]

Mr. Wilson [holding answer 23 June 1998]: I met with representatives of the Association of Scottish Colleges on 7 May and addressed the Association's Annual Conference on 12 June. On both occasions funding was discussed.

No decisions about funding for the sector in 1999–2000 can be made until the Government's Comprehensive Spending Review is completed. This Government have already increased the resources available to the further education sector in 1998–99 by £11.4 million over the planned figures of the previous Administration.

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on (a) the future of Clydebank College and (b) the imminent redundancy of lecturing staff there. [47251]

Mr. Wilson [holding answer 23 June 1998]: The Board of Management of Clydebank College is currently implementing a series of recommendations contained in a report by independent consultants, the object of which is to restore the College's financial health and viability.

The College's cost base is well above the norm for the further education sector. While any redundancies are regrettable, the college recognises that it is necessary to make significant cost reductions in order to secure its future as a major provider of further education within the local area.

When I visited Clydebank College on 14 May I announced the establishment of a £2 million restructuring fund for the further education sector into which I invited the College to apply.

Gaelic Broadcasting

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer of 23 March 1998, Official Report, column 44, if he has now received the consultants' report on Opportunities for Gaelic Broadcasting in the Digital Era; if he will place a copy in the Library; and if he will make a statement. [47407]

Mr. Wilson: The consultants' report on Gaelic broadcasting in the digital era has been received. I will arrange for a copy to be placed in the Library. The report will be issued as part of a consultation exercise on how a dedicated Gaelic television channel can best be established.

WALES

Railways

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to improve the (a) Wrexham-Birkenhead rail line, (b) Central Wales line and (c) Wrexham-Shrewsbury-Hereford-Cardiff line; and if he will make a statement. [45889]

Mr. Hain: Investment in rail infrastructure is primarily a matter for Railtrack, whose published Network Management Statement sets out investment strategies for particular routes. The Government support passenger rail services through the franchise agreements with train operators. One of the main objectives of our integrated transport policy, to be set out in a White Paper next month, is to encourage more passengers and freight onto the railways.

Sewers

Ms Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the advantages of requiring all new housing developments with access to the mains sewers to comply with the requirements of the Public Health Act 1936 and the Water Industry Act 1991 in order that the sewers serving these developments meet the criteria for adoption by the local authority. [46648]

Mr. Win Griffiths: The Review of Sewerage Law carried out in 1986 considered the question of requiring all new sewers to be built to an adoptable standard but the view was taken that existing legislation which enables sewers to be adopted was sufficient. It is a matter for developers to consider the advantages of building sewers to an adoptable standard. The Government have no plans at present to make any changes to the current legislation with regard to the adoption of sewers.

Ms Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many households he estimates have unadopted sewers connected to the mains system as a result of developers not meeting the requirements of the Public Health Act 1936 and the Water Industry Act 1991 when constructing housing developments. [46649]

Mr. Win Griffiths: The information is not available to enable me to provide such an estimate.

Farmers (Payments)

Mr. Charles Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what percentage of payments due to farmers in December 1997 (a) have not been paid to date and (b) were paid late; and if he will make a statement. [46945]

Mr. Win Griffiths: Under the Arable Area Payments Scheme in Wales, 78.3 per cent. of applicants received payments due by 31 December 1997 representing 67.0 per cent. by value. As at 1 June, 0.4 per cent. of applicants are yet to receive payments, representing 0.2 per cent. by value.

Victim Support Groups

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many Victim Support groups there are in Wales; and how much funding they have attracted from (a) the Welsh Office and (b) local government sources in (i) the present financial year and (ii) the last two financial years. [46794]

Mr. Win Griffiths: Information provided by the National Association of Victim Support Schemes indicates that there are 31 such local schemes and branches currently operating in Wales.

Central Government funding for Victim Support Schemes is provided by the Home Office on an England and Wales basis and is allocated to Schemes by a Funding Panel. All Victim Support Schemes operating in Wales have received funding from this source in the current and previous two financial years.

The Volunteering in Wales Fund, which is administered by the Wales Council for Voluntary Action on behalf of the Welsh Office, provided £8,030 to Cardiff Volunteer Support in 1997–98. Support may also be obtained from other sources, such as local government, but details of these are not held centrally.

A470

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when there will be further progress on the improvement of the A470 Blaenau Ffestiniog to Betwys-y-Coed road; and if he will make a statement. [47043]

Mr. Hain: Stage 1 of the A470 Ledr Valley improvement, between Cancoed and Minffordd has been completed. Further improvements on the Blaenau Ffestiniog to Betws-y-Coed section of the trunk road are subject to the current review of the Welsh trunk road programme. The report on the review will be published later this year.

Housing

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many housing association houses were built in Wales in each year since 1975; and what is the forecast for the next five years. [47116]

Mr. Win Griffiths: Information on the number of housing association dwellings completed in each year from 1975 is given in the following table. There are no official forecasts.

New housing association dwellings completed:

Year	Housing association completions
1975	275
1976	182

Cycling

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what efforts he is making to promote cycling in Wales. [47103]

Mr. Hain: The Welsh Office has endorsed the National Cycling Strategy which aims to quadruple cycle use by 2012 and is represented on the National Cycling Forum which is charged with taking the strategy forward. We are working actively with others to implement it.

I have recently announced that up to £500,000 per year will be available for local authority Safe Routes to School initiatives in Wales. I expect cycling to play a major part in such initiatives.

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much his Department has spent on the provision of cycling facilities in each of the past 10 years; and what is the projected amount to be spent in each of the next five years. [47102]

Mr. Hain: Local authorities are the primary agents for providing facilities for cyclists. We support local authorities' efforts with funding through the Transport Grant scheme in relation to packages; the Strategic Development Scheme; the Welsh Capital Challenge scheme and the annual capital block allocation.

The Welsh Office also provides cycling facilities as part of new or improved trunk road schemes where a need can be justified.

The cost of providing these facilities cannot be disaggregated from the overall costs.

Farm Workers

Mr. Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many farm workers are employed in each local authority area in Wales. [47104]

Mr. Win Griffiths: The information requested is shown in the following table:

Farm workers working on Welsh farm holdings, 1 June 1997[1]

Penmaenbach Road Tunnel

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what safety checks have been carried out during the last 14 months to the Penmaenbach Road Tunnel on the A55 between Conwy and Penmaenmawr; and if he will make a statement. [47391]

Mr. Hain: During the last 14 months regular safety inspections have been carried out at the Penmaenbach Tunnel on the A55 by Welsh Office engineers and the North-East Wales Trunk Road Agency, who are appointed highway maintenance agents of the Welsh Office. In addition, the Welsh Office commissioned crack movement monitoring during the same period. Both safety inspection and crack movement monitoring is ongoing. The dates of the safety inspections and crack movement monitoring over the last 14 months were:

Rural Transport

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he expects to announce details of the additional funding for rural transport announced in the Budget. [47899]

Mr. Hain: I have arranged for the Special Grant Report (No. 3) (Wales) 1998 to be laid before the House today. The report which is subject to affirmative resolution, confirms the allocation of the £2.25 million to local authorities which I announced on 11 June, and sets out the conditions attached to the grant. Guidance on the use of the grant is being distributed to local authorities today.

This new grant represents a major boost to the provision of bus services in rural areas, and is an important step in the development of the Government's integrated transport policy.

Qualifications, Curriculum and Assessment Authority

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the current members of the Qualifications, Curriculum and Assessment Authority for Wales, and give their relevant qualifications. [47523]

Mr. Hain: The current members of the Qualifications, Curriculum and Assessment Authority for Wales are as follows:

Chairman

Mr. Rudi Plaut, CBE

Deputy Chairman

Mr. Owen Rees, CB

Members

Mrs. Ann Davies
Mrs. Susan Parsons
Mrs. Caroline Lewis
Mr. Romey Ahmed
Mr. Peter Thomas
Mr. Emlyn Jones, OBE
Mr. Keith Davies
Mrs. Claire Argyle
Mr. Clive Carthew
Mr. Alan Boxford
Mr. Christopher Kipling.

Information about members is set out in the publication "Appointments by the Secretary of State for Wales" which is updated quarterly and placed in the Library of the House.

HEALTH

Health Trust Bills

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will assess the impact of introducing centralised payment of health trust bills. [46368]

Mr. Milburn: The White paper "The New NHS" made clear our intention to reduce bureaucracy in the National Health Service. Centralised payment of NHS trusts' bills is not considered a practical way of achieving that objective.

Health Spending

Mr. Maude: To ask the Secretary of State for Health by how much health spending rose as a proportion of gross domestic product between 1978–79 and 1997–98; and how much it has risen in 1998–99. [46479]

Mr. Milburn: The information requested is in the table.

United Kingdom National Health Service expenditure as a percentage of gross domestic product (GDP)

Year	UK NHS gross expenditure as a percentage proportion of GDP[1]
1978–79	4.7
1997–98	5.6
1998–99	5.6

[1] The table is calculated using National Health Service total gross outturn figures for the United Kingdom for 1978–79, estimated outturn for 1997–98, and planned expenditure for 1998–99, and estimates of GDP published on 17 March 1998

Capital Spending

Mr. Maude: To ask the Secretary of State for Health by how much capital spending in the NHS increased (a) on average over the period 1978–79 to 1997–98 and (b) in 1998–99. [46435]

Mr. Milburn: The information requested is in the table.

Increases in National Health Service capital expenditure

1978–79 to 1997–98 (average annual growth)	–0.6
1998–99[1]	4.9

Note:

In addition, since 1 May 1997, 25 major hospital schemes, worth almost £2 2 billion have been given the go ahead under the Private Finance Initiative

Norfolk and Norwich Hospital

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the progress with the construction of the new Norfolk and Norwich hospital. [46735]

Mr. Milburn: Construction started on the new Norfolk and Norwich Hospital on 12 January 1998. Design and construction work has progressed well and is currently over three weeks ahead of the original design and construction programme. At the current rate of progress the contractor will complete the hospital on or before the contracted date of 9 January 2002.

Macmillan Nursing Services

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to increase the availability of Macmillan Nursing Services in cancer treatment units. [47215]

Mr. Boateng: The Government recognise the valuable contribution to cancer services made by voluntary and charitable organisations, including Macmillan Cancer Relief. It is for this reason that Macmillan Cancer Relief and Marie Curie are represented on the National Cancer Forum. Decisions about the provision of services in local hospitals, including the provision of Macmillan nursing services for cancer patients, are for local agreement between the organisations involved. The policy framework for commissioning cancer services and guidance on improving outcomes in breast and colorectal cancer, which are currently being implemented, encourage the development of multi-professional teams, with specialist nurses as core members.

Child Safety Week

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what initiatives his Department will take to promote Child Safety Week on 22 to 28 June. [47197]

Ms Jowell: The Government's public health strategy, as outlined in the Green Paper "Our Healthier Nation", made accident prevention a priority area. We have already proposed a target to reduce the rate of accidents by at least a fifth by the year 2010 from a 1996 baseline. We are particularly concerned that accidents in childhood show a strong social class bias, with children in Social Class V being five times more likely to die in an accident than children in Social Class I.

The Department has a significant and on-going interest in promoting Child Safety Week as part of its commitment to the reduction of childhood accidents by providing funding to the Child Accident Prevention Trust which organises Child Safety Week. Furthermore, the Department publicised this year's initiative in the March and May editions of "Target" magazine, which reaches a wide audience in health authorities, local authorities, voluntary organisations, schools and the private sector.

Multiple Births

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many sets of (a) twins, (b) triplets, (c) quadruplets, (d) quintuplets and (e) sextuplets were born in England in each year from 1990 to 1997; what was the total number of maternities in each year; and how many multiple births of each type in each year were conceived as a result of (i) in vitro fertilisation, (ii) gamete intra-fallopian transfer and (iii) other forms of assisted conception. [46930]

Mr. Boateng: The number of multiple maternities and total number of maternities to women resident in England from 1990 to 1997 is shown in table 1. The number of multiple births following in vitro fertilisation and donor insemination treatment at licensed clinics in England from 1 August 1991 to 31 March 1996 (the latest available) is shown in table 2. Figures were not collected before 1 August 1991 and those for gamete intra-fallopian transfer and other forms of assisted conception are not collected.

Gluten-free Flour Prescriptions

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans his Department has to extend the prescription of gluten-free flour on the NHS to multiple sclerosis sufferers. [47295]

Mr. Milburn: The prescribing of gluten-free flour on the National Health Service for a particular patient is a matter for a general practitioner's clinical judgment, but is open to challenge by the health authority concerned. Multiple sclerosis is not however one of the conditions for which the Advisory Committee on Borderline Substances recommends gluten-free products as suitable for prescribing at NHS expense.

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the annual cost to the NHS of the prescription of gluten-free flour for patients suffering from Coeliac's disease. [47296]

Mr. Milburn: The latest information on the annual cost of gluten-free products dispensed at National Health Service expense is shown in column 4 of the Oral Nutrition section (BNF 9.4) of Prescription Cost Analysis, England, 1997, copies of which are available in the Library. It is not possible to identify the condition for which any prescription has been written.

Breastfeeding Week

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what initiatives the Government took to promote National Breastfeeding Week on 17 to 23 May. [47219]

Ms Jowell: National Breastfeeding Awareness Week has been run since 1993. It aims to raise awareness of the health benefits of breastfeeding, increase the social acceptance of breastfeeding and to promote support for breastfeeding mothers. The week is promoted by the National Network of Breastfeeding Co-ordinators (NNBC), which the Department funds.

This year the Department funded and provided the publicity materials which could be used during the week. These included posters and postcards with the slogan "Free fast food for babies", aimed at promoting breastfeeding and increasing its social acceptability. Materials were disseminated on request and in total 30,000 posters and 102,000 postcards were sent to health professionals, breastfeeding promotion groups and members of the public. The Department also funded a promotional advertorial in Pregnancy and Birth magazine.

The week aims principally to galvanise action at local level where the NNBC are instrumental in organising local activities and events which disseminate the messages on the benefits of breastfeeding to a wide audience. For example, this year some co-ordinators worked with schools during the week to promote breastfeeding whilst others used questionnaires about the availability of breastfeeding facilities to engage people's attention.

In addition to the local activities of the NNBC, I launched the United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund United Kingdom Baby Friendly Initiative's (UKBFI) new community initiative to mark the start of National Breastfeeding Awareness Week. This initiative centres around a seven point plan which aims to protect, promote and support breastfeeding in community health care settings and will complement the UKBFI hospital initiative. I took this opportunity to announce that the Department will be funding, subject to contract, research costing £225,000 which aims to identify some of the barriers to breastfeeding amongst women in low income groups, where breastfeeding rates are lowest.

Osteoporosis

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what initiatives the Government will take to promote National Osteoporosis Week on 22 to 28 June. [47222]

Ms Jowell: I have today announced, at the sixth Bath conference on osteoporosis and bone mineral measurement, a detailed and comprehensive strategy to prevent and tackle osteoporosis.

Osteoporosis is a complex and widespread problem and we need to concentrate our efforts on specific high risk groups. We also intend to encourage people to think creatively about how everyone can plan a part in preventing fractures, preventing the accidents that lead to fractures, and preventing osteoporosis in the first place. The initiatives we have taken will ensure that clinicians, managers and primary care teams have access to the information that they need on the treatment and management of osteoporosis; and individuals will be able to find out what steps they can take to reduce their chances of getting osteoporosis.

The specific elements of the strategy are:

new clinical guidelines on the management and treatment of osteoporosis, produced by the Royal College of Physicians together with the Royal Colleges of Obstetrics, Gynaecology and Surgeons;

a quick reference guide and laminated guideline card for general practitioners and community nurses, summarising the guidelines' key messages on prevention and treatment, to help primary care teams develop consistent, evidence-based practice for diagnosing and managing osteoporosis. The guide and card have been welcomed by the Royal Colleges of Physicians and of General Practitioners; the Committee on the Medical Aspects of Food and Nutrition Policy's (COMA) report on nutrition and bone health, which is due to be published next month. This will highlight the importance of Vitamin D in the prevention of osteoporosis;

the Health Education Authority is producing a fact sheet, "Nutrition and Bone Health", to coincide with the publication of the COMA report, summing up its recommendations in a user-friendly format; and a local health action sheet has been compiled on preventing accidents caused by osteoporosis. It shows what can be done at national, local and individual level to reduce the number of accidents and is a source of ideas for health authorities to use in planning effective action against osteoporosis in their respective areas. All the information is being brought together in a new internet site so that it is accessible to National Health Service organisations and professionals.

Earlier this week I also announced that the Department is publishing a series of new factsheets, which contain practical advice for older women on how to sustain physical and emotional wellbeing. Individual factsheets have been developed on osteoporosis and accident prevention.

Copies of the documents mentioned will be placed in the Library as they are published.

Day Against Drug Abuse and Illicit Trafficking

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what initiatives his Department will take to promote the U.N. International Day Against Drug Abuse and Illicit Trafficking on 26 June. [47206]

Ms Jowell: The Department will not be taking any specific initiatives to promote United Nations International Day Against Drug Abuse and Illicit Trafficking. We are committed to the United Nations drug control programme and the Government were key participants in the United Nations General Assembly Special Session on the world drug problem from 8–10 June. This included a statement by my right hon. Friend, the Deputy Prime Minister on behalf of the European Union. In addition, the Government will be involved in promoting European Drug Prevention Week from 16–22 November this year. Drugs issues will remain the focus of sustained action at all levels as our new ten year drug strategy begins to be implemented.

Health Service Spending (Lancashire)

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was total spending on health services in Lancashire in (a) April 1996 to April 1997 and (b) April 1997 to April 1998. [47254]

Mr. Milburn [holding answer 23 June 1998]: The information requested for Lancashire in the period April 1996 to April 1997 is in the table. Information for the period April 1997 to April 1998 is not yet available.

Spending on health services in Lancashire—April 1996 to April 1997

Health Authority	£000
South Lancashire Health Authority	178,708
North West Lancashire Health Authority	312,965
East Lancashire Health Authority	324,981
Morecambe Bay Health Authority (part)	89,216
Total	905,870

Notes:

1. Some expenditure by the above health authorities will be outside Lancashire
2. National Health Service trusts do not produce segmental accounts by geographic area
3. The amount shown for Morecambe Bay represents 44 per cent. of the total expenditure for this authority. This is based on the population figures for 1996/97, which indicate that 44 per cent. of residents served by the health authority actually live within Lancashire. The actual total spending on health services by Morecambe Bay was £202,763,000

Child Protection

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance he has issued to local area child protection committees on addressing the needs of children involved in sexual exploitation and prostitution. [47429]

Mr. Boateng: "Working Together Under the Children Act 1989" issued in 1989 by the Department, Home Office, Department for Education and Employment and Welsh Office, provides guidance on inter-agency co-operation for the protection of children from abuse. It includes guidance to Area Child Protection Committees on their role in developing and reviewing child protection policies. Such policies would be expected to address the needs of children at risk of, or subject to, sexual exploitation.

We are aware of the growing concern about the involvement of children and young people in prostitution. We intend to issue joint Health Department/Home Office guidance in the autumn on how best to deal with the problem and meet the needs of children involved in prostitution. This guidance will take account of the responses to the Department's consultation paper "Working Together to Safeguard Children: New Government Proposals for Inter-Agency Co-operation", which, among other issues, invited views on how to address the problem of children involved in prostitution. It will also take account of the Association of Chief Police Officers' guidelines on dealing with children involved in prostitution and the new arrangements for juvenile offenders in the Crime and Disorder Bill.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Private Sector Prisons

Ms Rosie Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish the reports of the two reviews on private sector prisons which he announced on 19 June 1997, Official Report, columns 249–51. [47898]

Mr. Straw: I am placing in the Library copies of the reports to the two reviews referred to in my answer of 19 June 1997. The Prison Service has already sent copies to unions and to the contractors.

Prisons (Communicable Diseases)

Mr. Quinn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been made in reducing the risk of the spread of communicable diseases in prisons; and if he will make a statement. [47900]

Mr. George Howarth: The Government are committed to tackling drug misuse in prisons. In support of the Government's wider national strategy, Tackling Drugs to Build a Better Britain, the Prison Service launched its new drug strategy on 12 May. It builds on existing drug policies and seeks to reduce the number of prisoners testing positive for drugs as a result of mandatory drugs testing. Inmates proved to be misusing drugs are normally punished with a loss of privileges, additional days added to sentence or another penalty, and injecting equipment is always confiscated when found. The Prison Service is also working to achieve our manifesto commitment to provide access to voluntary drug testing (so-called "drug-free wings") for all prisoners who request it, supported by treatment programmes to help them stay drug free.

These are other measures are achieving considerable success in reducing drug misuse in prisons. However it is known that a minority of inmates persist in injecting and in sharing injecting equipment. This behaviour poses a substantial risk in terms of the spread of HIV, hepatitis and other communicable diseases, not only to prisoners themselves but to staff who encounter contaminated needles and to the wider community. To help counter such risks, disinfecting tablets have been readily available in Scottish Prisons since 1993. They were also introduced in all prisons in England and Wales in 1995 but were withdrawn because of safety concerns. Those concerns have now been allayed following tests by the Health and Safety Executive. In the interests of public health, following consultation with the Department of Health and with the support of the Chief Medical Officer, the Prison Service will provide disinfecting tablets on a trial basis, together with a leaflet explaining how to use the tablets and providing information about hepatitis and HIV. The leaflet will warn prisoners of the dangers of injecting and outline help available to tackle their drug misuse.

The pilot scheme, which is planned to start in July 1998, will operate for three months in 11 selected prisons, and will make disinfecting tablets available to prisoners freely and anonymously. A variety of distribution methods suitable to the geography and regime of the different prisons will be trialed.

The pilot scheme will be evaluated by an independent academic team based at the London School of Hygiene and Tropical Medicine. If successful, the initiative will be extended to all prisons in England and Wales.

Animal Experiments

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many project licence applications have been rejected under section 5(4) of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 in the last five years. [47317]

Mr. George Howarth: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 16 July 1997, Official Report, column 173 and the reply I gave the hon. Member for Lewes (Mr. Baker) on 24 February 1998, Official Report, column 178.

Records that distinguish between a licence which was refused and one which was "not proceeded with" by the applicant are not kept centrally.

Mr. McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what involvement his Department had in the decision to allow Imutran to export two transgenic pigs to the Netherlands for use in an organ transplant experiment; for what reasons it was considered appropriate for this experiment to be carried out abroad rather than in the UK; and if Imutran had sought permission to conduct this experiment in the United Kingdom. [47307]

Mr. George Howarth: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Lewes (Mr. Baker) on 14 May 1998, Official Report, columns 166–67.

The purpose of exporting these animals was, we understand, to facilitate an international research programme on xenotransplantation. Part of this programme is carried out in the United Kingdom. Collaboration of this sort is preferable to groups in different countries carrying out independent research programmes and any replication of work this might entail.

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applicants for licences under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 are currently waiting to be informed of a decision by his Department. [47007]

Mr. George Howarth: The number of applicants for new certificates of designation, project licences and personal licences who are awaiting a decision are two, 258 and 211 respectively. In addition to new applications, there are 1,307 applications for amendments to existing licences awaiting a final decision.

These figures include cases where we are waiting for further information from the applicant or a revised application, and cases where the applicant is currently in discussion with the Inspectorate about how the draft application could be refined to minimise the amount of suffering and the number of animals used and to maximise the benefit that might accrue from the work. It is not possible to disaggregate these from the total.

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many and what grades of staff have been involved in processing applications for personal and project licences under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 in each of the past three years. [47006]

Mr. George Howarth: The number of staff is given in the table.

Year	Inspectors	Executive grades	Administrative grades
1996	15	0.47	12.85
1997	16	0.47	12.85
1998	16.5	0.47	13.85

Inspectors spend, on average, approximately 40 per cent. of their time assessing licence applications and amendments. The remainder is spent on visits of inspection and in providing specialist advice.

Additional funding has been secured to increase the complement of the Inspectorate from 18 to 21. Three new inspectors are scheduled to join the Inspectorate in the next two months.

Executive staff (Executive Officer to Grade 7) and administrative staff (Administration Assistant, Administrative Officer and equivalents) are shown as full-time equivalents. Additional funding has allowed the administrative staffing levels to be increased in 1998–99 through extra conditioned hours and overtime.

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the average time taken between receipt of an application for a licence under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 and informing the applicant of the decision. [47008]

Mr. George Howarth: Averages could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Apart from a couple of exceptional cases, we have dealt with all new personal licence applications received before March 1998.

The time taken for project licence applications varies greatly depending on a number of factors, including the quality of the initial application; the complexity or originality of the proposed work; and whether it is necessary to consult a specialist inspector, an external assessor or the Animal procedures Committee.

Mrs. Estelle Mills

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the application of Mrs. Estelle Mills, a constituent of the hon. Member for Sutton and Cheam, for British citizenship, application number M739663, will be (a) considered and (b) determined. [47565]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: It is not normal practice to comment on individual citizenship applications but in this case I am able to say that in fact Mrs. Mills' application was granted on 16 June.

Public Interest Immunity (Document D909)

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what disciplinary action has been taken against those providing Inland Revenue information referred to or relative to Public Interest Immunity Document D909 to persons outside the Inland Revenue; [47262]

(2) if he will make a statement on Document D909 on the Public Interest Immunity list; [47258]

(3) if he will make a statement on the role of Merseyside Police in respect of Document D909 on the Public Interest Immunity list; [47259]

(4) if he will make a statement on the process by which information relating to Document D909 on the Public Interest Immunity list was secured from Inland Revenue sources; [47260]

(5) if he will set up an inquiry into how Inland Revenue information relating to Document D909 on the Public Interest Immunity list came into the public domain. [47261]

Mr. Michael: The use of material generated as part of the investigation/prosecution process, whether used or unused, is to be the subject of consideration by the Judicial Committee of the House of Lords next month in the case of Taylor v Serious Fraud Office. The facts of that case have a considerable amount in common with the case to which I believe this question relates and it would not be proper for me to comment or intervene at this time.

Prisoners (Incentives and Earned Privileges Scheme)

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1), pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Newark (Mrs. Jones) of 1 June 1998, Official Report, columns 50–51, what estimate he has made of the number of (a) in-cell televisions and (b) prisoners who will have access to in-cell televisions when in-cell television has been extended more generally across the prison service; [44612]

(2) if he will list the prisons in which in-cell television is not to be made available; [44605]

(3) if any prisoners who are not on drug-free wings of prisons will have in-cell television made available to them following the increased availability of in-cell television; [44613]

(4) what criteria will be used in determining the availability of in-cell television to prisoners on the standard privilege level; [44608]

(5) what estimate he has made of the number of prisoners on the standard privilege level who will have access to in-cell television when in-cell television has been extended more generally across the prison system. [44606]

Ms Quin: All prisons will in due course provide in-cell television as an earned privilege but its extension will be gradual and monitored closely. The Prison Service will be deciding by August which local schemes should be implemented this financial year and will take account of early experience before deciding which schemes should be implemented next financial year.

The option of in-cell television will initially be targeted on prisoners on the enhanced privilege level or in other priority groups, such as those who are "drug free".

The future numbers of in-cell televisions and prisoners with access to them will depend on early experience of the policy which will be closely monitored.

The procurement exercise is based on approximately 20,000 sets over a contract period of three to five years.

CCTV Challenge Competition

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he intends to retain the CCTV Challenge Competition in 1999–2000. [47263]

Mr. Michael: The expenditure plans we inherited from the previous Administration made no provision whatsoever to support closed circuit television after 1998–99. The Government's spending plans for 1999–2000 and beyond will be announced in a White Paper to be published in July.

Emergency Planning

Mr. Bill Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 20 April 1998, Official Report, column 528, relating to current expenditure on his Department's emergency planning activities, if he will identify the subject or subjects of the expenditure classed as "(f) other" in his answer; and if he will make a statement. [44561]

Mr. George Howarth: The information requested is given in the table. The figures for other expenditure provided in the Answer of 20 April included, in error, some costs relating to the Emergency Planning College. This has been corrected in the table.

Prison Inspections

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many visits were made to prisons in England and Wales during 1997 by the Chief Inspector of Prisons; and which establishments were visited. [46975]

Ms Quin: During 1997, Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Prisons visited 40 Prison Service establishments in England and Wales. These were: Albany; Aldington; Birmingham, Buckley Hall; Bullwood Hall; Camp Hill; Canterbury; Cardiff; Colchester; Cookham Wood; Deebolt; Feltham; Foston Hall; Full Sutton; Garth; Glen Parva; Grendon; Guy's Marsh; Haslar; Haverigg; High Down; Highpoint; Hindley; Hollesley Bay; Holloway; Kingston; Littlehey; Low Newton; Manchester; New Hall; Onley; Parc; Parkhurst; Stocken; Styal; Thorn Cross; Wakefield; Wandsworth; Wealstun; and Winchester.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. McNulty: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications he has received from Christians from Pakistan for asylum status; and if he will make a statement. [46918]

Mr. Mike O'Brien: I regret that information on the number of Christian asylum applicants who are nationals of Pakistan could be obtained only by examination of individual case records and is, therefore, available only at disproportionate cost.

Gender Impact Assessments

Jackie Ballard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will place in the Library copies of gender impact assessments which have been undertaken in respect of legislation introduced in this Parliament; if he will make it his policy to do so in respect of future legislation; and if he will make a statement. [47024]

Ms Quin: The gender perspective in policy making is being addressed through the cross-Departmental mainstreaming initiative which the Ministers for Women launched on 18 May. This involved wide consultation in the formation of new guidelines. These guidelines will require Departments to consider how policy proposals affect women; consult with women's organisations where appropriate; and take action where the differential impact is not justifiable.

The Ministers for Women intend to publish an Annual Report to Parliament setting out progress on mainstreaming the women's perspective into Government policy making. The first report will be published after the end of this financial year.

Metropolitan Police

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in what ways (a) redrawing the boundaries of the Metropolitan Police area and (b) reducing Metropolitan Police numbers, will affect the funding formula under which the Metropolitan Police receives extra resources for national responsibilities. [47031]

Mr. Michael: The special payment the Metropolitan Police receives outside the funding formula in recognition of its distinct national and capital city functions is unlikely to be affected by the change in the force's boundaries, or any consequential reduction in the total number of police officers in the force.

Lorne House Drugs Project

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received concerning the Lorne House drugs project in Hackney. [47067]

Mr. George Howarth: The Lorne House Project was raised in correspondence in October 1997 by the London Drug Services Providers Consortium, and by my hon. Friend the Member for Hackney, South and Shoreditch (Mr. Sedgemore) in November 1997. Lord Peyton of Yeovil also tabled a Parliamentary Question that month and since then has written on six occasions, most recently on 2 June. We shall be replying to his latest letter shortly.

Police (Medical Retirements)

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will state the number of medical retirements from each police service in England and Wales as a proportion of all retirements for each of the last 10 years. [47212]

Mr. Michael: Numbers of medical retirements from forces in England and Wales for the years between 1990 and 1996–97, as a proportion of the total number of retirements, are included in the report by Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary "Lost Time: The Management of Sickness Absence and Medical retirement in the Police Service", published in December 1997. The information is reproduced in the table, which also includes provisional figures for 1997–98. Such information is not available for the period before 1990.

Child Pornography

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people have been prosecuted in England and Wales during the last 12 months for trading in child pornography. [47107]

Mr. Michael: Prosecutions for trading in child pornography cannot be identified separately on the Home Office Court Proceedings database from other child pornography offences. The information available on child pornography is given in the table.

Life Sentences

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) men and (b) women are at present serving a life prison sentence in England and Wales. [47195]

Ms Quin: The latest available information is for 31 May 1998. On that date, there were 3,792 male and 139 female life sentence prisoners in Prison Service establishments in England and Wales.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people who were serving a life sentence were released on parole in England and Wales during the last 12 months. [47106]

Ms Quin: Life sentence prisoners are released on life licence and not parole. Provisional information for 1997 shows that between January and December 1997, 111 life sentence prisoners were released on life licence from Prison Service establishments in England and Wales.

Day Against Drug Abuse and Illicit Trafficking

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what initiatives his Department will take to promote the U.N. International Day Against Drug Abuse and Illicit Trafficking on 26 June. [47207]

Mr. George Howarth: The Home Office played a significant role in the preparations for and at the United Nations General Assembly Special Session on Drugs, held in New York on 8–10 June, which I attended. The Special Session attracted a significant amount of press and media coverage in the United Kingdom. We shall take any suitable opportunities to highlight the International Day against Drug Abuse and Illicit Trafficking but, as in recent years, we will not be taking any specific initiatives to mark the Day.

Association of Chief Police Officers

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis is (a) co-director of ACPO Ltd. and (b) a member of the Executive Committee of ACPO. [47029]

Mr. Michael: Yes.

PRIME MINISTER

No. 10 Downing Street (Staff Costs)

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Prime Minister what estimate he has made of the total staff costs for No. 10 Downing Street in (a) 1996–97, (b) 1997–98 and (c) 1998–99 indicating separately the costs for (i) private secretaries, (ii) Policy Unit staff, (iii) Press Office staff, (iv) Strategic Communications Unit staff, (v) all support staff and (vi) Political Office staff. [40221]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 30 April 1998]: The total staff costs for No. 10 Downing Street were £3.4 million in 1996/97 and £4.1 million in 1997/98. Estimated costs for 1998/99 are £4.9 million. Due to changes to the accounting systems, it is not possible to give a breakdown of the 1996/97 figures as requested which means that a meaningful comparison with subsequent years cannot be drawn. The cost of the Political Office does not fall to the Government.

Sierra Leone

Mr. Butterfill: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 1 June 1998, Official Report, column 92, if all the papers forwarded by the Prime Minister to Sir Thomas Legg's inquiry will fall within the terms of reference of that inquiry; and if he will ensure that all such papers contain the dates on which they were received by his Department and the names of all those to whom they were circulated. [44556]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 9 June 1998]: Sir Thomas Legg is conducting a full and independent investigation into the supply of arms to Sierra Leone. He will determine which papers are relevant and the format in which they should be presented to him.

Millennium Compliance

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Prime Minister what proposals he has for a national contingency plan in the event of the failure of public and private sector computer systems to recognise the year 2000; and if he will make a statement. [45637]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 15 June 1998]: The actions that the Government have taken to deal with the Year 2000 problem are designed to prevent such failures. The Government are, however, taking a number of actions to ensure the continued delivery of the supplies and services essential to the life of the community.

The Government are currently conducting a risk assessment study of the national infrastructure, including public and private elements, which will inform contingency planning. The Home Office is addressing how to use the established framework for dealing with emergencies in the context of the Year 2000 problem. The Civil Contingencies Committee will co-ordinate the central government response to any emergency caused by widespread system failure.

My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster is reviewing progress within departments and agencies on a quarterly basis. He made an oral statement to the House on 8 June 1998, Official Report, columns 716–27 and published the latest revisions to Departments' action plans, which included information about their business continuity planning, together with an initial survey of the wider pubic sector including the NHS and Local Authorities. The information has been placed in the Library of the House and published on the Internet.

Government Buildings

Mr. Baker: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 11 June 1998, Official Report, column 665, if he will list the Labour Party events which have taken place since 14 May 1997 at (a) 10 Downing Street, (b) 11 Downing Street, (c) Carlton House Terrace and (d) Chequers. [46257]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 16 June 1998]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 11 June 1998, Official Report, column 665.

Any private receptions have been held in accordance with the Ministerial Code.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Spring: To ask the Prime Minister if he gave written permission to (a) the Secretary of State for Scotland and (b) the Chancellor of the Exchequer to visit France on unofficial business on 10 June. [46557]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 19 June 1998]: Both Ministers agreed their visits with the Prime Minister.

Minimum Wage

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Prime Minister which Ministers have been briefed by their departments on the employment impact of the minimum wage proposals. [47233]

The Prime Minister: It is not the policy of this or previous Governments to disclose details of the opinions, advice, recommendations and deliberations individual Ministers receive from their Departments. However, the Government share the Low Pay Commission's view that the national minimum wage set at the level proposed should have no significant impact on employment.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the effects on Departmental budgets of the minimum wage proposals. [47234]

The Prime Minister: Departmental spending plans will be announced as part of the Comprehensive Spending Review outcome and will take into account any effects of the introduction of the minimum wage.

Ministerial Committee on Welfare Reform

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Prime Minister if he will publish the terms of reference of the Ministerial Committee on Welfare Reform; how many times the Committee has met since its establishment; and if he will make a statement on the Committee's work to date. [47062]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire (Mr. Kirkwood) on 26 January 1998, Official Report, column 67, following the first meeting of the Group on 22 January. In accordance with long-established practice, it is not customary to make public details of discussions within such groups.

Dounreay

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Prime Minister (1) what discussions he had with President Clinton on the transfer of nuclear waste from Georgia to Dounreay; and what data the US Government gave him on this material; [46248]

(2) on what dates negotiations took place with regard to the importation of nuclear material from Georgia; on what date it was first discussed that low-grade nuclear material would form part of the consignment; and which UK representatives were involved in these discussions; [46249]

(3) on what date he was notified that 9 kilogrammes of low-grade nuclear waste was included in the consignment of nuclear material brought to Dounreay from Georgia; and what quantity of low-grade nuclear waste was proposed when he agreed to receive the material into the United Kingdom; [46246]

(4) who made the decision to accept the 9 kilogrammes of low-grade nuclear waste from Georgia for reprocessing at Dounreay; when it was made; and which ministers were informed. [46247]

The Prime Minister [pursuant to his reply, 18 June 1998, c. 314]: The second paragraph contained a transcription error. This occurred in a section of the paragraph which should have repeated information already in the public domain. A corrected version of the relevant section is set out.

"The Government's prime objective was to remove material of proliferation concern from Georgia. Before the Government made the decision to take the material, we were informed of all relevant issues. Low grade nuclear waste did not form part of the consignment, which consisted of unirradiated and irradiated high enriched and low enriched uranium. As I told the House on 22 April 1998, Official Report, column 818, in my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Ealing, Acton and Shepherds Bush (Mr. Soley), the intermediate level radioactive waste resulting from reprocessing the irradiated uranium would fill two drums."

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

India and Pakistan

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what plans she has to (a) withdraw and (b) suspend aid to India or Pakistan following the recent nuclear tests in those countries. [46725]

Clare Short: Our bilateral programmes to both countries are poverty focused and we do not propose to take actions which will hurt the poor. But we are in the process of preparing new Country Strategy Papers for India and Pakistan which will consider carefully the implications, including the economic and financial implications, of the nuclear tests when assessing prospects for partnerships for poverty reduction.

Jubilee 2000

Mr. McWalter: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent representations she has received from the organisers of Jubilee 2000; and if she will make a statement about those targets for debt relief set out by Jubilee 2000 which conflict with Government targets. [47308]

Clare Short: We have regular contacts with the organisers of Jubilee 2000 about international debt. Last month, I was delighted to have been able to address many of their supporters, who had travelled to Birmingham at the time of the G8 Summit.

Jubilee 2000's targets, and those of the Government set out in the Mauritius Mandate launched by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor last September, seek the same overall objective—the remission of the unpayable debts of the world's poorest countries. We both recognise the important part debt relief can play in the eradication of poverty, that creditors and debtor governments share responsibility for finding sustainable solutions, and that work must be tackled on a case-by-case basis, with debtors themselves being closely consulted in the process.

The Government have been pressing for the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries (HIPC) debt Initiative to be implemented as quickly as possible. At the G8 Summit, leaders agreed to encourage all eligible countries to put in place the policy measures needed to ensure that by 2000 they had at least embarked on the process which will lead to debt relief, which is one of the main aims of the Mauritius Mandate.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Commonhold

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what are the outstanding issues which need to be resolved before proposals on the introduction of commonhold are published; and if he will make a statement. [46555]

Mr. Hoon: The introduction of a commonhold scheme is a manifesto commitment. Although the introduction of such a scheme could be carried out independently of commitments in the field of leasehold reform, the Government's view is that it would be prudent for these developments to be co-ordinated. My right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister aims to issue a consultation paper on leasehold reform later in the year.

Rights of Audience

Ms McCafferty: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department when Her Majesty's Government will announce its proposals for modernising rights of audience in the higher courts. [47896]

Mr. Hoon: The Lord Chancellor has this morning published a paper, "Rights of Audience and Rights to Conduct Litigation in England and Wales: The Way Ahead", copies of which have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses. Comments are invited by 14 September 1998.

MINISTER WITHOUT PORTFOLIO

Millennium Experience

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Minister without Portfolio how many zones he currently proposes to have in the Millennium Dome. [45135]

Mr. Mandelson: Fourteen exhibit zones are currently under development, plus the central show.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Minister without Portfolio how much of the finance for the New Millennium Experience he proposes to raise from the private sector; and how much is currently committed. [45133]

Mr. Mandelson: Over £100 million of private sector sponsorship for the Millennium Experience has been committed so far. The New Millennium Experience Company is in active discussion with a number of companies and is on course to achieve the sponsorship target of £150 million by the end of the year.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Listed Sporting Events

Mr. Gareth R. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will make a statement about the outcome of his review of major events listed under Part IV of the Broadcasting Act 1996. [47969]

Mr. Chris Smith: My review of the list is now complete. I have conducted it in the light of the criteria which I published last year. I consulted widely on the criteria and the content of the list and I have carefully considered the many representations made to me. I have accepted the general principles of the report produced by the Advisory Group chaired by Lord Gordon of Strathblane.

With immediate effect, I am revising the list of events under Part IV of the Broadcasting Act 1996.

I am retaining the following events on the list, requiring live coverage to be made available to free-to-air terrestrial television broadcasters (in Category A as specified in the 1996 Act):

The Olympic Games

The FIFA World Cup Finals Tournament

The FA Cup Final

The Scottish FA Cup Final (in Scotland)

The Grand National

The Derby

The Wimbledon Tennis Finals.

I am adding the following events to the list on the same basis:

The European Football Championship Finals Tournament

The Rugby League Challenge Cup Final

The Rugby World Cup Final.

After careful consideration of the Advisory Group's recommendations, I have concluded that a number of the matches in the World Cup and European Championships football qualifying tournaments meet the criteria for listing. I believe that it is important that crucial ties in these competitions should be available to all viewers and therefore intend to seek Europe-wide arrangements for protecting free-to-air live broadcasts of crucial matches in these competitions.

I am also listing some further events on a different understanding. For these events, I have recommended to the Independent Television Commission that live coverage might be allowed to be shown exclusively by a Category B broadcaster (as specified in the 1996 Act), provided there are satisfactory arrangements for secondary coverage by a Category A broadcaster. I have asked the ITC to consider setting a minimum acceptable standard for such secondary coverage, to include some combination of delayed full coverage, highlights and live radio commentary.

The events I am listing on this understanding are:

Cricket Test Matches played in England

Non-Finals play in the Wimbledon Tournament

All Other Matches in the Rugby World Cup Finals Tournament

Five Nations Rugby Tournament Matches Involving Home Countries

The Commonwealth Games

The World Athletics Championship

The Cricket World Cup—the Final, Semi-finals and Matches Involving Home Nations' Teams

The Ryder Cup

The Open Golf Championship.

Libraries

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much public money was used to support the lending of (a) books and (b) other printed sources in public libraries in 1996–97. [47211]

Mr. Fisher: In 1996–97, public library authorities in England spent £83.5 million on books and pamphlets, and £6.1 million on newspapers, periodicals and magazines. Information is not held centrally about the operating costs of lending services for books or other printed material.

Millennium Commission

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) what is the national average per constituency for awards made by the Millennium Commission since 1 May 1997; [47290]

(2) if he will list the awards made by the Millennium Commission by constituency since 1 May 1997. [47289]

Mr. Chris Smith [holding answer 23 June 1998]: This is a matter for the Millennium Commission. I shall write to the hon. Member in my capacity as Chairman of the Commission and place copies of my reply in the Library of the House.

Tourism

Miss Geraldine Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will estimate the number of jobs in British seaside resorts dependent on the tourism industry. [46721]

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if he will list by local authority area for each of the last 10 years for which figures are available (i) the value of tourism, (ii) the number of direct tourism jobs, (iii) direct tourism jobs as a percentage of the workforce, the number of indirect tourism jobs and the percentage of jobs sustained in full or (iv) part by tourism. [46507]

Mr. Tom Clarke: Spending by tourists across the UK was estimated to be £40 billion for 1996 and the estimate for 1997 will be available shortly. Employment in tourism-related industries was estimated at 1.7 million in the Summer of 1997. However, the national tourism and employment surveys are designed to give disaggregated figures down to regional level and, in some cases, county level and figures for the value of tourism and the number of jobs in tourism-related industries are not available for individual local authorities.

Miss Geraldine Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what percentage of the United Kingdom's gross domestic product tourism accounts for. [46723]

Mr. Tom Clarke: Figures from the ONS show that the value added contribution of the tourism-related industries was £17,602m in 1995, the latest year for which figures are available. This accounted for 2.89 per cent. of the United Kingdom's gross domestic product of £608,090m.

These figures are likely to underestimate the whole value added contribution to GDP arising from the total of £38 billion for tourism spending in the UK in 1995. For example, spending on retail goods by tourists is not captured in the figures on the tourism-related industries, which refer only to those industries in which tourism accounts for a significant proportion of total spending. On the other hand, some of the value added in the tourism-related industries will have arisen from spending by residents rather than tourists.

Miss Geraldine Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans the British Tourist Authority has to promote British seaside resorts as tourism destinations in the near future. [46722]

Mr. Tom Clarke: The BTA will continue to assist seaside resorts to promote themselves effectively as tourist destinations. BTA encourages targeted marketing to those groups most likely to be attracted to a particular resort; participation of individual destinations in larger overseas marketing partnerships; and involvement of such partnerships in overseas consumer and trade exhibitions. BTA will also continue to feature seaside resorts in the print it distributes and through public relations activities.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

EU Legislation

Mr. Cash: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 18 May 1998, Official Report, column 263, how many of the 1997 European Communities legislative items were incorporated into United Kingdom law by (a) primary legislation and (b) statutory instrument; and what is the procedure for determining the appropriate vehicle for the incorporation of EU instruments. [45719]

Mr. Doug Henderson: This information is not readily available. I will write to the hon. Member in due course. Copies will be placed in the Library of the House.

Police and Military Assistance (Human Rights)

Sir Peter Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what place is given to human rights in the programme of training supplied by the United Kingdom for foreign police and military personnel; and what research he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on its effectiveness in improving the human rights record of the countries concerned. [47344]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: The FCO's programme of training for foreign police and military personnel, Assistance to Support Stability with In-Service Training (ASSIST) promotes respect for international human rights standards through training which features human rights both as a distinct discipline and as an element of broader training courses.

The programme will be evaluated internally at the end of the current financial year against the criteria announced in my Answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Chorley (Mr. Hoyle) on 26 March 1998, Official Report, columns 235–36.

Zinoviev Letter

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the proposed research in the Moscow archives by Gill Bennett into the circumstances surrounding the Zinoviev letter of 1924. [47406]

Mr. Doug Henderson: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary announced on 12 February 1998, Official Report, column 324, that he had commissioned the Foreign and Commonwealth Office Historians to write a memorandum on the Zinoviev Letter of 1924, drawing on papers held by the SIS as well as those in the FCO. Work on this memorandum is well advanced and copies will be laid in the House on publication.

In order that the memorandum should be as comprehensive and authoritative as possible, it was decided that the FCO Historian should visit Moscow and examine material held in parallel Russian archives. We are grateful to the Government of the Russian Federation for their co-operation in arranging this visit, which will take place early in July.

Falkland Islands (Oil)

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the latest oil exploration around the Falkland Islands; and who will be eligible to receive royalties from oil found in this area. [47433]

Mr. Tony Lloyd: Exploratory drilling in the North Falkland Basin started on 27 April 1998 when Amerada Hess drilled the first well. On 27 May they announced they had abandoned this well, stating that although the well had encountered traces of hydrocarbons, nothing further had been found. Lasmo are now in the process of drilling the second well. It is far too early to make any prediction about finding oil in commercial quantities.

Any oil revenues will accrue to the Falkland Islands Government. I discussed some revenue sharing, should oil be found, with the Falkland Islands Councillors during a visit to the Islands in April. I welcomed their generous offer made in 1994 to share revenues from oil production with HMG and we agreed that we should now discuss this in a spirit of co-operation and partnership.

Cyprus

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Government of Turkey concerning the behaviour of Turkish troops in Northern Cyprus towards Kurdish civilians. [46779]

Mr. Doug Henderson [holding answer 22 June 1998]: None.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports he has received about human rights abuses in the northern part of Cyprus; and if he will make a statement. [46778]

Mr. Doug Henderson [holding answer 22 June 1998]: We have not recently received reports of any specific incidents of human rights abuses in northern Cyprus. The High Commission in Nicosia continues to monitor closely human rights issues in Cyprus as a whole.

The Cyprus problem involves a range of issues that need to be resolved. All parties agree that this will be best achieved through a comprehensive political settlement under the auspices of the UN Secretary-General's mission of good offices.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Organophosphates

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he will be able to publish the report of his official group on organophosphorous products; and if he will make a statement. [48003]

Dr. John Cunningham: With the agreement of my colleagues, the Deputy Prime Minister and the Secretaries of State for Health, for Defence, for Scotland, for Wales and for Northern Ireland, I am today publishing the report from the official group on organophosphorous (OP) products. The group was set up at the end of last year to review the processes for sharing information and achieving co-ordination between Departments, to draw together scientific evidence and identify any gaps to be remedied; to examine those processes by which OPs are licensed, and to advise whether procedures should be changed.

The group's report is the most thorough review of all the issues relevant to the safety and control of these products ever carried out by Government. It is evidence of how seriously we take the public concern about organophosphorous compounds and their use.

The existence of the groups has brought about more effective co-operation between the many Government Departments involved. This is in itself an important step forward, and the group will continue to serve this purpose. The group has formed two networks of Departmental contacts to liaise on exchange of information and the planning of research projects. The aim is to ensure that Departments work on complete and up-to-date information, and avoid conflicting decisions.

The group has made recommendations for early action to improve licensing procedures, the flow of information within Government and to the public, and the range of expertise of the advisory committees from which Government draw scientific advice. We intend to act on all these recommendations. To this end, the Freedom of Information Bill team has been alerted to the need for a clear legal basis for the sharing of information relating to the licensing of medicines and pesticides, and action has begun to alter the membership of the advisory committees.

One important recommendation relates to a comprehensive literature review by the Institute for Environment and Health (IEH) of the scientific evidence on the effects of OPs on human health. The report on that study is also being published today. This review presents a complicated picture; there remains uncertainty about the health effects of OPs. This uncertainty led the official group to recommend that Government should seek views on this study from the Committee on the Toxicity of Chemicals in Food, Consumer Products and the Environment (COT), the Advisory Committee on Pesticides (ACP), the Veterinary Products Committee (VPC) and the Committee on Safety of Medicines (CSM). Government accept this recommendation and have set up a special sub-group of COT to start the process. We are asking the committees to give their opinions by the end of 1998. Taking into account the advice from these committees, Government will consider whether any new precautionary measures might be appropriate, in addition to the safeguards in force now. It is our intention to subject every piece of available evidence on OPs to rigorous and transparent scrutiny. We are far from complacent about the continuing concerns about possible health effects of OPs.

Copies of both reports will be placed in the Library of the House.

Poultry

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what proposals he has to require residue testing of imported poultry meat. [47450]

Mr. Rooker: Any third country wishing to export poultry meat to the European Union must submit residue testing plans to the EU Commission. These describe the residue testing programme to be undertaken in respect of their meat production and must provide guarantees which have an effect at least equivalent to the requirements of the Community on EC producers.

EU Commission inspectors verify compliance with these requirements when they carry out periodic checks on third country slaughterhouses authorised to produce meat for export to the Community. Port Health Authorities (or local authorities in their absence) are responsible under Directive 90/675/EEC for checking 1 per cent. of all imported meat and meat products for residues of veterinary medicines.

Hunt Kennels

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for High Peak (Mr. Levitt) of 8 June 1998, Official Report, columns 452–53, if he will estimate how many fallen stock and what tonnage is disposed of by hunt kennels; and what proportion this represents of the total. [47239]

Mr. Rooker: Information on the numbers and tonnage of fallen stock disposed of through hunt kennels is not available. However, a small survey undertaken by the State Veterinary Service earlier this year indicates that around 55 per cent. of calves, 35 per cent. of adult bovines, 25 per cent. of sheep and goats, and 10 per cent. of pigs and lambs, which have fallen, may be disposed of through hunt kennels.

Food Safety Week

Mr. Maclean: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what initiatives the Government have taken to promote National Food Safety Week on 8 to 14 June. [47217]

Mr. Rooker: The Government regard National Food Safety Week, organised by the Food and Drink Federation, as a valuable way of promoting public health messages on food hygiene. I was pleased to launch the campaign, and in addition, the Government provided financial support. National Food Safety Week is distinct from the Government's own publicity initiatives on food safety. About £1.5m is committed by the Department each year on publicity material and media campaigns.

Kew Gardens

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to the oral statement of the Minister for London and Construction, of 17 June 1998, Official Report, column 335, if he will make a statement on his Department's future plans for Kew Gardens. [47292]

Mr. Rooker: As the sponsoring Department for the Royal Botanic Gardens, Kew, the Ministry will provide the body with funding of over £17 million grant-in-aid during the current financial year. We look forward to receiving shortly its corporate strategic plan for the period to 2002/03. My right hon. Friend will be discussing Kew's operations and scientific programmes with its Director and the Chairman of the Board of Trustees when he visits the Gardens on 7 July.

Potatoes

Mr. Paice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list all the years in which the former Potato Marketing Board implemented market support measures by purchasing potatoes for use as animal feed, together with the tonnage for each year. [47563]

Mr. Rooker: I am taking steps to obtain the information, some of which is held in store. I will write to the hon. Member with the information requested and, of course, place a copy in the Library.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Terrorists

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if she will list for each year since 1975 the number of persons accused of terrorist crimes who have been tried in Northern Ireland Courts under the Criminal Jurisdiction Act 1975, specifying so far as the information is readily available to the offence alleged, where it was committed and the outcome of the trial. [46742]

The Attorney-General: I have been asked to reply.

The information requested is set out in the tables. In respect of the more detailed information requested by the hon. Member for the period 1976–1989, that information is not readily accessible and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. The figures given are for all extra-territorial offences tried in Northern Ireland.

Table 1—Number of persons tried in Northern Ireland for extra-territorial offences under the Criminal Jurisdiction Act 1975 during the period 1977–1997

Year of trial	Number of persons Tried	Convicted	Acquitted

1994	3	[1]3	0
1995	2	2	0
1996	0	0	0
Total	24	23	1

[1] An Order was made that the extra-territorial offences should not be proceed with without the leave of the court. The defendants were convicted on other charges.

Table 2—Additional information in respect of persons tried in Northern Ireland for extra-territorial offences under the Criminal Jurisdiction Act 1975 during the period 1990–1997

Year of trial	Number of persons tried	Principal offence	Where offence was committed	Sentence imposed
1990	1	Counselling and procuring an explosion, contrary to section 2 of the Explosive Substances Act 1883 and section 6(2)(a) of the Criminal Jurisdiction Act 1975	[1]RoI	16 years' imprisonment
1991	1	Possession of ammunition with intent, contrary to Article 17 of the Firearms (Northern Ireland) Order 1981 and section 1 of the Criminal Jurisdiction Act 1975	RoI	7 years' imprisonment
1992	1	Conspiracy to Murder, contrary to Article 9(1) of the Criminal Attempts and Conspiracy (Northern Ireland) Order 1983 and section 6(2)(b) and (3) of the Criminal Jurisdiction Act 1975	[2]NI	15 years' imprisonment
1993	1	Counselling and procuring murder, contrary to section 6(2)(a) and (3) of the Criminal Jurisdiction Act 1975	RoI	[3]—
1994	3	Armed robbery, contrary to section 8 of the Theft Act (Northern Ireland) 1969 and section 1 of the Criminal Jurisdiction Act 1975	RoI	[4]—
1995	1	Possession of a firearm with intent, contrary to Article 17 of the Firearms (Northern Ireland) Order 1981 and section 1 of the Criminal Jurisdiction Act 1975	RoI	8 years' imprisonment
1996	1	Possession of explosives contrary to section 3(1)(b) of the Explosive Substances Act 1883 and section 1 of the Criminal Jurisdiction Act 1975	RoI	8 years' imprisonment

[1] RoI connotes an offence committed in the Republic of Ireland
[2] NI connotes an offence committed in Northern Ireland
[3] An order was made that the principal offence should not be proceeded with without the leave of the court. A sentence of 12 years' imprisonment was imposed in respect of other offences
[4] An order was made that the principal offence should not be proceeded with. Sentences of 2 years' imprisonment and 2 years' imprisonment suspended for a period of 3 years were imposed in respect of other offences

TREASURY

Public Debt

18. Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what are his objectives for the level of public debt in the long term. [46166]

Mr. Darling: We will ensure a prudent and stable ratio of public debt to national income. We are now planning on the basis that our debt GDP ratio will be 40 per cent. or lower.

Economic and Monetary Union

20. Mr. McNulty: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received from retailers on the Government's policy on economic and monetary union. [46168]

Mrs. Liddell: The retail sector is represented on our Business Advisory Group on EMU, which allows us to work with business on the strategic and practical implications of EMU. Retailers were involved in producing a report from the Business Advisory Group on EMU, published in January, and are helping us to prepare an outline national changeover plan of the steps which would be involved if the UK were to decide to join the single currency.

22. Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the preparations he is making for the introduction of a single currency. [46170]

23. Dr. Starkey: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the preparations he is making for the introduction of a single currency. [46172]

Mrs. Liddell: Our priority is to make businesses aware of the strategic and practical implications of the launch of the euro on 1 January 1999, and to help them prepare. The Treasury's Euro Preparations Unit is stepping up our communications campaign aimed chiefly at smaller businesses. It includes a telephone line, a website and factsheets, and we will soon publish a six-monthly report on preparations for the euro.

34. Mr. Loughton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the cost to public funds of the Captain Euro campaign. [46186]

Mrs. Liddell: There has been no public funding of the Captain Euro campaign by either the UK Government or by the European Parliament.

Mr. Derek Twigg: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the outcome of the most recent meeting of the Standing Committee on preparations for EMU; and what preparations have been made by public authorities to prepare for the launch of the euro in other member states on 1 January 1999. [47897]

Mr. Gordon Brown: The Standing Committee on preparations for EMU met for the second time on 20 May. A copy of the minutes of the meeting has been placed in the Library of the House. Government departments and other public authorities have been engaged in a wide range of preparations for the launch of the euro in other member states on 1 January 1999, especially to help businesses in the UK meet the challenges of responding to the change in the business environment across Europe. A copy of a booklet, "EMU: Steps for 1999", published by the Treasury on 18 May which describes these activities and which responds to recommendations made by the Business Advisory Group on EMU has also been deposited in the Library.

Pensions

21. Mr. Bill O'Brien: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he last met pensioner organisations to discuss the effect on pensions of his fiscal policy; and if he will make a statement. [46169]

Mr. Darling: My right hon. Friend and I receive representations from and meet with a number of organisations on this and other issues relating to the effects of fiscal policy.

Tax Harmonisation

24. Mr. Lansley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he last discussed tax harmonisation with fellow members of ECOFIN; and if he will make a statement: [46174]

Dawn Primarolo: The Government's view is that direct taxation is a matter for national Governments. Decisions on all European tax issues are subject to unanimity.

Offshore Oil and Gas

25. Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he expects to have completed the review of taxation of offshore oil and gas production. [46175]

Dawn Primarolo: A consultative document on the North sea fiscal regime is expected to be issued shortly. Industry and other interested parties will be able to give their views on the options for change.

Financial Incentives to Work

26. Mr. Hutton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what measures he is taking to increase the financial incentive to work. [46176]

Dawn Primarolo: The Budget contained a number of measures to help ensure that work pays, including the Working Families Tax Credit and reform to National Insurance Contributions.

Asian Financial Crisis

27. Mr. Beard: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the likely impact of the Asian financial crisis on his forecasts for the UK and other European Union economies. [46178]

Mrs. Liddell: Recent developments in Asia pose considerable risks to the world economy. The March 1998 FSBR took account of these in its forecasts for the UK and Europe. It incorporated a reduction in UK GDP growth in 1998 of up to half a percentage point due to the likely impact of financial difficulties in Asia. The Treasury and the Bank of England continue to monitor the situation closely.

Inflation

29. Mr. Amess: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent representations he has received on his latest inflation forecasts. [46180]

Mrs. Liddell: The Chancellor of the Exchequer receives numerous representations on all aspects of UK economic developments, including inflation prospects.

Foreign Earnings Deduction

31. Mr. Hammond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received from the charitable sector regarding the foreign earnings deduction. [46182]

Dawn Primarolo: Representations have been received from several charities, each concerned that the ending of the foreign earnings deduction might make work abroad less attractive to certain of their employees. The Inland Revenue have met with representatives of various organisations and it is clear that, despite the original fears of the charities, very few overseas aid workers will actually be affected by the abolition of the foreign earnings deduction.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer on what date the Department for International Development was consulted on Clause 63 of the Finance (No. 2) Bill as regards the implications for overseas aid workers of foreign earnings taxation. [47030]

Dawn Primarolo: All discussions regarding the tax treatment of overseas aid workers have been directly between the Inland Revenue and charities and their representatives.

Working Families Tax Credit

32. Mr. Derek Twigg: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the impact of the working families tax credit on low-paid families. [46183]

Dawn Primarolo: The Working Families Tax Credit will provide an income guarantee of at least £180 per week for low-income families working full-time, and mean that no family with earnings below £220 a week will pay net Income Tax. Together with the introduction of the National Minimum Wage and reform to National Insurance Contributions, it will make work pay and encourage the move from welfare to work.

Helen Jackson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received with regard to the impact of his working families tax credit on part-time employees. [46156]

Dawn Primarolo: The WFTC has been welcomed by a wide range of individuals and organisations.

Mr. Maude: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how payments made by the Inland Revenue under the working families tax credit scheme will be classified for the purpose of calculating (a) net taxes and social security contributions, (b) total managed expenditure, (c) annual managed expenditure and (d) public sector net cash requirement; and if he will make a statement on the rationale of the proposed system. [47122]

Mr. Darling: The WFTC is to be part of the Income Tax system. It will be paid by the Inland Revenue through the pay packet as an Income Tax Credit. Accordingly, as stated in the FSBR, the Government will treat the whole of the WFTC payments as Income Tax credits in the calculation of Net Taxes and Social Security Contributions.

When the results of the Comprehensive Spending Review are published, the presentation of the provision for Working Families Tax Credit (WFTC) in the expenditure measures will continue to follow established national accounts practice. As set out in the Financial Statement and Budget Report (FSBR March 1998 HC.620 paragraph B.59) some of the WFTC payments will be scored as expenditure in national accounts. Provision for these payments will be found in Total Managed Expenditure and within the Accounting and Other Adjustments in Annually Managed Expenditure.

All payments of WFTC are determinants of Public Sector Net Borrowing and of the Public Sector Net Cash Requirement.

Smuggling

33. Mr. Malins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what action he is taking to counter smuggling. [46185]

Dawn Primarolo: Customs and Excise give high priority to tackling the commercial smuggling of drugs, to the detection and forfeiture of drugs-related money, and to the smuggling of firearms, paedophile material, alcohol and tobacco. Their enforcement work is based on the deployment of frontline anti-smuggling officers at ports, airports and elsewhere, backed up by specialist investigators and intelligence staff and systems. Customs work closely with the police and other agencies, both in the UK and abroad.

Income Tax

Mrs. Betty Williams: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people pay income tax at (a) 20p in the £, (b) 23p in the £ and (c) 40p in the £ in (i) Wales, (ii) Scotland, (iii) England and (iv) Northern Ireland. [46452]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 24 June 1998]: Estimates of the number of taxpayers who are liable to pay tax at the lower, basic and higher rates of tax are given in the table for 1995–96, the latest year for which this information is available. The estimates are based on the 1995–96 Survey of Personal Incomes.

Number of people liable to tax

Thousands

	at lower rate (20%)	at basic rate (25%)	at higher rate (40%)
Wales	300	820	60
Scotland	500	1,600	170
England	4,800	15,000	1,900
Northern Ireland	160	390	35

Debt Relief

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many representations he has received about debt relief for the poorest countries; and if he will make a statement. [46171]

Mrs. Liddell: Since 1 January 1997, the Treasury has received over 12,000 letters and postcards on the subject of Third World debt.

Government Vehicles

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what information is held about the numbers of vehicles and types of vehicle owned or leased by each department and agency. [47564]

Mr. Darling: The National Asset Register provides, inter alia, information on the number and types of vehicle operated by each department and agency. It is the responsibility of each department and agency to keep information about the number and types of vehicle they own or lease.

Copies of the National Asset Register are available in the Library of the House.

Taxation (Church of England)

Mr. Luff: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the impact of the indirect and direct tax regimes on Church of England parochial church councils; and if he will make a statement. [46177]

Dawn Primarolo: We have made no assessment of the impact of the indirect and direct tax regimes on Church of England parochial church councils. Views from the Church of England on aspects of the tax regime are being considered in the Review of Charities' Taxation.

Interest Rates

Mr. Prior: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received on the level of UK interest rates. [46164]

Mrs. Liddell: We receive many representations on the monetary policy stance—some from borrowers wanting lower interest rates and some from savers wanting higher interest rates. None of them want a return to the boom and bust monetary policies of the past.

Tote

Mr. Spring: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what (a) consultations he had with or (b) representations he received from the horse racing industry prior to his announcement about the Tote of 11 June 1998. [47528]

Dawn Primarolo: HM Customs and Excise officials have regular discussions with members of the horseracing industry. The Chancellor of the Exchequer received in January 1998 a copy of the British Horseracing Board's Financial Plan for British Racing.

Taxation (Tourism)

Sir Peter Emery: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what (a) representations he has received and (b) consideration he has given to a reduction in the VAT rate for the tourism industry to a level comparable with that in the Irish Republic. [46253]

Dawn Primarolo: I have received a number of representations in favour of a reduced rate of VAT for tourist accommodation, and have seen a recent report on the subject prepared for the British Tourist Authority. The United Kingdom has a strong and well established tourism industry, attracting record numbers of overseas visitors and high visitor spending. Our position is not comparable with the circumstances of Ireland's package of measures to boost tourism, which included a reduced VAT rate for tourist accommodation.

Public Sector Investment

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimates he has made of net public sector investment in (a) 1998–99 and (b) 2003–4, expressed in 1997–98 prices. [46404]

Mr. Darling [holding answer 18 June 1998]: Projections of public sector net investment in 1997–98 and 2003–04 are published in table 4.4 of the "Economic and Fiscal Strategy Report". They can be converted to 1997–98 prices using projections of the GDP deflator in table 4.1 of the same publication.

Hospitality

Mr. Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the hospitality received by the Director of the Financial Regulation and Industry Team since 1 May 1997. [46948]

Mrs. Liddell [holding answer 22 June 1998]: The Director, Finance, Regulation and Industry, has extensive dealings with organisations in both the public and private sectors. These are conducted in line with Treasury guidance to its staff.

Saving

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to encourage more people to save. [46184]

Mrs. Liddell: The Chancellor recently released the "Economic and Fiscal Strategy Report" which sets out our economic policy to achieve stability and the right conditions in which individuals will be encouraged to save with confidence.

In addition, we are introducing plans for the Individual Savings Account (ISA) specifically to develop and extend the savings habit. To help savers to find good value for ISAs, the Government are currently consulting on proposals to introduce standards to ensure reasonable charges, easy access and fair terms, to be known as the CAT standards.

Mr. Loughton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer on the basis of what research he calculated the figure of six million likely new savers who will take up the new ISAs. [47084]

Mr. Geoffrey Robinson [holding answer 23 June 1998]: I refer to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Bognor Regis and Littlehampton (Mr. Gibb) on 22 December 1997, Official Report, column 473.

Budget Surpluses

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will estimate the cyclically adjusted current budget surpluses for 1998–99 to 2002–03 on the basis of gross domestic product growth figures of (a) 2.25 per cent. for 1998, (b) 2 per cent. for 1999, (c) 2.50 per cent. for 2000, (d) 2.50 per cent. for 2001, (e) 2.50 per cent. for 2002 and (f) 2.50 per cent. for 2003; [46360]

(2) what is his estimate of the cyclically adjusted current budget surplus for (a) 1998–99, (b) 1999–2000, (c) 2000–01, (d) 2001–02 and (e) 2002–03, based upon gross domestic product of (i) 1.5 per cent. for 1998–99, (ii) 1 per cent. for 1999–2000, (iii) 2 per cent. for 2000–01, (iv) 2.25 per cent. for 2001–02 and (v) 2.25 per cent. for 2002–03. [46376]

Mr. Darling [holding answer 18 June 1998]: Forecasts of the cyclically adjusted surplus on current budget are set out in Table 4.6 of the "Economic and Fiscal Strategy Report 1998". Changes to the forecast of GDP growth would change the forecast of the unadjusted surplus on current budget but not the cyclically adjusted surplus.

Control Total

Mr. Maude: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate what the control total would be for 1998–99 if the welfare-to-work programme, spending funded by capital receipts programme and expenditure funded by the National Lottery were included. [46437]

Mr. Darling: Figures for Welfare to Work expenditure and the Capital Receipts Initiative are given in table 3A.2, and expenditure financed by the National Lottery in table 3A.1, of the "Economic and Fiscal Strategy Report".

VAT

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the level of value added tax receipts in relation to (a) the latest Customs and Excise VAT forecasting equation and (b) the assumptions underlying the public finance forecasts. [46515]

Dawn Primarolo: The receipts forecast published in the Economic and Fiscal Strategy Report were an update of the budget forecasts taking account of the latest outturn data. The underlying economic assumptions are unchanged and the Customs and Excise equation was not run again. The forecast of VAT receipts for 1998–99 was reduced by £0.3 billion because the outturn for 1997–98 was lower than expected.

Minimum Wage

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the impact, net of deductions and benefit changes, on household income of hourly rate increases of (a) 10 pence, (b) 20 pence, (c) 30 pence and (d) 40 pence for workers on average hours with (i) one and (ii) two dependent children in one-earner households. [47238]

Dawn Primarolo: The net gain from an increase in hourly wage will depend on a range of factors. These include the rate of income tax faced, which will in turn depend on the hourly wage before the increase; the rate at which National Insurance Contributions (NICs) are paid; and the benefits received, which will in turn depend on family income, the age of children in the family, and the level of the family's rent (if any) and council tax.

The Working Families Tax Credit and the NICs reforms announced in the Budget will substantially reduce the number of families facing very high marginal deduction rates—that is, families will keep more of any increase in their earnings.

Budget Underspend

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he first was informed that (a) there was likely to be an underspend in the Budget for 1997–98 and (b) that it was likely to be of the order of £750 million. [47036]

Mr. Darling: The Treasury monitors public spending against plans continuously through the year. Data are collated from a wide range of sources and estimates of the outturn for the year as a whole are liable to fluctuate as new information comes in. As far as public spending in 1997–98 is concerned, the position at the time the Economic and Fiscal Strategy Report was published as described in section 4.3.3. Some uncertainty remains, mainly because final data for local authority spending are not yet available and will not be for some time. £750 million of the underspend has been carried forward into 1998–99.

Government Expenditure

Mr. Maude: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the factors underlying the difference between the estimates of General Government Expenditure as compared to Total Managed Expenditure for (a) 1998–99, (b) 1999–2000, (c) 2000–01, (d) 2001–02 and (e) 2002–03. [47120]

Mr. Darling: The differences between General Government Expenditure (GGE) and Total Managed Expenditure (TME) are: GGE is based on general government (GG), while TME relates to the public sector, that is GG plus public corporations (PCs); TME is made up of public sector current expenditure and public sector net investment, while GGE includes not only current and capital expenditure, but also two financial transactions: net lending and transactions in company securities (net); and TME nets of receipts of capital transfers, which are treated as revenue not reducing GGE.

Taxation

Mr. Maude: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the number of individuals with income below that necessary to pay the lower rate of income tax in the tax year (a) 1996–97, (b) 1997–98 and (c) 1998–99. [47227]

Dawn Primarolo: Information on the number of individuals with no income tax liability is given in the following table.

Year	Number of individuals with no income tax liability (000)
1996–97	19,800
1997–98	19,600
1998–99	19,800

An individual is defined as any person aged 19 or over and any person aged 16–18 who is not in full-time education and, hence, is not eligible to have child benefit received on their behalf.

These estimates are based on projections taken from the 1995–96 Survey of Personal Incomes, population estimates provided by the Government Actuary's Department, and case load estimates of the numbers of children for whom child benefit is received provided by the DSS.

Historic Buildings (VAT)

Mr. Todd: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what revenue has been collected by levying VAT on the repair of historic buildings in each of the last three years. [47033]

Dawn Primarolo: It is not possible to estimate revenue collected by levying VAT on the repair of historic buildings.

Electoral Registration

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the latest available estimates of those aged 17 years and over, plus 63 per cent. of those aged 16 years, for each district council area in England and Wales, together in each case with the equivalent electoral registration figures expressed as a percentage of these figures. [47710]

Mrs. Liddell: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Chief Executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mr. Harry Barnes, dated 25 June 1998:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your parliamentary question on electoral registration figures.

ONS have published 1998 electoral statistics for local districts in England and Wales, these are in respect of the electoral roll that became operational on 16 February 1998. The electoral statistics were published on 23 April 1998 in an ONS Population and Health Monitor Series EL 98/1, Electoral Statistics 1998—parliamentary and local government electors.

The mid-97 population estimates that are required to provide the answer to your question and to update statistics that have already been supplied in respect of the 1997 electoral statistics and mid-1996 population estimates, will be published on 27th August 1998. I will write to you with a full answer to your question shortly after that publication, and arrange for a copy to be placed in the House of Commons Library.

Drug-related Deaths

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many drug-related deaths occurred in each of the past 10 years. [47510]

Mrs. Liddell: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Chief Executive of the Office for National Statistics. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Tim Holt to Mrs. Gwyneth Dunwoody, dated 25 June 1998:

As Director of the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your parliamentary question on the number of drug-related deaths occurring in each of the past 10 years.

Deaths from drug-related causes in England and Wales, 1988–97

Year	Number of deaths
1988	2,061
1989	1,942
1990	2,041
1991	2,053
1992	2,287
1993	2,252
1994	2,405
1995	2,563
1996	2,722
1997	2,816

Note:

Deaths data for the years 1988–1992 and 1997 correspond to deaths registered in the year, deaths data for the years 1993–1996 relate to deaths that occurred during the year

The deaths correspond to those with an underlying cause of death of drug psychoses, drug dependence, non-dependent abuse of drugs, accidental poisoning by drug or medicament, suicidal poisoning by drug or medicament, poisoning by drug or medicament undetermined whether accidentally or purposefully inflicted, or assault by poisoning—drugs and medicaments.

Sierra Leone

Mr. Fallon: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer on what date the Financial Secretary to the Treasury was informed of the investigation into Sandline by HM Customs and Excise. [41914]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer on what date (a) the Financial Secretary's private office and (b) the Financial Secretary were told that allegations of a breach of the UN arms embargo on Sierra Leone had been referred to HM Customs and Excise. [41883]

Mr. Hogg: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when Treasury Ministers were first informed that Her Majesty's Customs and Excise were undertaking an inquiry into the allegations that Foreign and Commonwealth Office officials may have acted unlawfully in connection with the coup in Sierra Leone. [42340]

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer on what date a Minister in his Department was first advised by officials that Customs and Excise had been asked to investigate the allegations against Sandline International; and who was the Minister in question. [43929]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answers 14 and 18 May and 3 June 1998]: I refer the right hon. and hon. Members to the statement made by the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs in the House during the debate on 18 May 1998, Official Report, columns 604–11, in which he announced the investigation by Sir Thomas Legg KCB

QC into allegations about Government involvement with the supply of arms to Sierra Leone by UK citizens and firms, and said that the Terms of Reference would be placed in the Library of the House. The Foreign and Commonwealth Secretary intends to publish the report of the investigation.

Asset Disposals

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the level of asset disposals, at real 1997–98 prices, for each year from 1985–86 to 2001–02 for (a) central Government, (b) local authorities and (c) other public bodies. [46379]

Mr. Darling [holding answer 18 June 1998]: Figures on the receipts from the sale of total fixed assets by both central government and local authorities for 1992–93 to 1998–99 were published in Public Expenditure statistical Analyses 1998–99 (Cm 3901), Table 1.6.

Receipts from the sale of fixed assets by public corporations from 1992–93 to 1998–99 are shown in cash terms in the table.

Year	£ billion
1992–93	0.7
1993–94	1.0
1994–95	0.9
1995–96	0.9
1996–97	0.9
1997–98	0.7
1998–99	0.6

Data on receipts from the sale of assets in earlier years are not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

The "Economic and Fiscal Strategy Report" 1998 (Cm 3978) said that the Government were now projecting fixed asset disposals in the future years in question of around £1 billion a year for central government and £2¾ billion for local authorities.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Pensioners (Worcester)

Mr. Michael J. Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many (a) pensioner households and (b) pensioners there are in Worcester. [46113]

Mr. Denham: The administration of Retirement Pension is a matter for Peter Mathison, the Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Michael J. Foster, dated 24 June 1998:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking how many (a) pensioner households and (b) pensioners there are in Worcester.

The information is not available in the format requested. Records do not show the number of pensioner households. Data is available for the number of pension accounts held by each Benefits Agency (BA) office. Records show that the BA office in Worcester maintains the pension accounts of 27,199 pensioners. This figure does not include pensioners paid by Automated Credit Transfer (ACT). However, the national ratio of order book cases to ACT payments is approximately 2:1.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Benefits (Minimum Wage)

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is her Department's estimate of the likely savings in benefits paid to people in work from the introduction of the minimum wage. [47520]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The information is set out in the table.

Estimates of the effect on the Department's benefit expenditure of the introduction of the minimum wage

£ million

Benefit	Savings 1999–2000
Income Support	10
Jobseeker's Allowance (Income-based)	10
Housing Benefit	110
Family Credit/Working Families Ta Credit	185
Council Tax Benefit	25
Total	340

Notes:

1. Savings figures are calculated by raising the earnings of current benefit recipients to the level of the minimum wage. No other factors are taken into account
2. Estimates are based on the 1995–96 Family Resources Survey, imposing the 1999–2000 tax and benefit structure, assuming 1998–99 levels of caseloads, prices, benefit rates and earnings. Estimates are rounded to the nearest £5 million
3. Family Credit will be replaced by Working Families Tax Credit in October 1999, assuming the approval of relevant legislation

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if the rates of benefit withdrawal are to be altered when the minimum wage is introduced. [47522]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The national minimum wage is a key element in a range of policies introduced by the Government to help make work pay. There are two other main measures in this area:

First, a more generous Working Families Tax Credit will be introduced, subject to the passage of the necessary legislation, to replace Family Credit from October 1999. The Working Families Tax Credit will reduce the rate of benefit withdrawal from 70p in the pound in Family Credit, to 55p in the pound; and is accompanied by a child care tax credit which provides significant extra help with child care costs for low and middle-income working families with children.

Secondly, the introduction of major changes in the National Insurance system from April 1999 will reduce contributions for lower paid workers and simplify the system.

There are no plans to make further changes to the Social Security system as a consequence of the introduction of the national minimum wage.

National Insurance Numbers

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will make a statement as to the scale of the use of bogus national insurance numbers in the claiming of benefits. [46411]

Mr. Field: National Insurance numbers play a key role in identifying individual accounts held on DSS and Inland Revenue systems.

Under the previous Administration, the Social Security Select Committee identified a number of concerns about the security of national insurance numbers. The Government are now taking action to improve the security of the way numbers are issued and maintained.

This work is at an early stage, and will provide us with the best assessment of the scale of the use of bogus numbers in the claiming of benefit.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is her estimate of the total number of national insurance numbers in circulation. [46412]

Mr. Field: There are 79 million accounts on the Department's central register (including 11 million accounts in respect of children for whom child benefit is in payment and who are due to be issued with a national insurance number shortly before they reach the age of 16).

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is her assessment of the reliability of the national insurance database. [46413]

Mr. Field: National Insurance numbers play a key role in identifying individual accounts held on DSS and Inland Revenue systems.

Under the previous Administration, the Social Security Select Committee identified a number of concerns about the security of national insurance numbers. The Government are now taking action to improve the security of the way numbers are issued and maintained. This work is at an early stage, and will provide us with the best assessment of the reliability of the national insurance database.

We cannot, at this stage, provide the assessment requested.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is her estimate of the number of birth certificates of dead people being fraudulently used for national insurance purposes. [46414]

Mr. Field: The Government have not estimated the number of birth certificates of dead people being used fraudulently for national insurance purposes. The Government are taking action to improve the security of the way numbers are issued and maintained. This work is at an early stage, and the initial results will determine the action necessary to tighten up the security of national insurance numbers, including action specifically surrounding the use of birth certificates.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is her estimate of the number of persons who are fraudulently claiming benefits where the national insurance number in use has formerly been used by a person who has left the United Kingdom. [46416]

Mr. Field: The Government have not yet estimated the number of persons who are fraudulently claiming benefits where the national insurance number in use has formerly been used by a person who has left the United Kingdom.

The Government are taking action to improve the security of the way numbers are issued and maintained. This work is at an early stage, and the initial results will determine the action necessary to tighten up the security of national insurance numbers, including action specifically surrounding the use of numbers formerly used by persons who have left the United Kingdom.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is her estimate of the number of persons who have acquired national insurance numbers illegally with the complicity of a member of her Department's staff in the last two years. [46417]

Mr. Field: The Government do not yet have an estimate of the number of persons who have acquired national insurance numbers illegally with the complicity of a member of the Department's staff.

The Government are taking action to improve the security of the way numbers are issued and maintained. This work is at an early stage, and the initial results will determine the action necessary to tighten up the security of national insurance numbers, including action specifically surrounding numbers illegally obtained with the complicity of Departmental staff.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many numbers have been removed from the national insurance database in each of the last 48 months. [46419]

Mr. Field: The information is set out in the table.

Numbers of National Insurance numbers which have been removed from the database since the start of the cleansing programme

Benefit Fraud

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is her estimate of the number of asylum applications where documents supplied as a result of rejected applications were used for the purposes of fraudulent benefit claims in the last two years. [46415]

Mr. Field: The Government have not estimated the number of asylum applications where documents supplied as a result of rejected applications are used for the purposes of fraudulent benefit claims. The Select Committee on Social Security under the previous Administration identified a number of concerns about the way asylum applications were handled. The Government are taking action to improve the security of the way numbers are issued and maintained. This work is at an early stage, and the initial results will determine the action necessary to tighten up the security of national insurance numbers, including action specifically surrounding asylum applications.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is her estimate of the number of persons who are claiming benefits on behalf of other persons who are unaware of benefits being claimed in their name. [46418]

Mr. Field: The Government do not yet have an estimate of the number of persons who are claiming benefits on behalf of other persons who are unaware of benefits being claimed in their name.

The Government are taking action to improve the security of the way numbers are issued and maintained. This work is at an early stage, and the initial results will determine the action necessary to tighten up the security of national insurance numbers, including action specifically surrounding persons claiming benefits on behalf of other persons who are unaware of benefits claimed in their name.

Mr. Goggins: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is her current estimate of the extent of family credit fraud. [46203]

Mr. Field: Tackling fraud and abuse is a top priority for the Government. Operational issues are the responsibility of Peter Mathison, the Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Paul Goggins, dated 24 June 1998:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking for current estimate of the extent of Family Credit (FC) fraud.

The Benefits Agency (BA) carries out a Benefit Review Programme in order to reach reliable estimates of the level of fraud on BA benefits. In 1997 the Agency (BA) conducted a pilot Benefit Review of FC in preparation of a main review. The pilot gave us information on methodology and indications about types of fraud, but was a test sample with no statistical validity. Work on the main Benefit Review of FC has been suspended for the present following the decision to move to a Working Families Tax Credit next year.

The BA is now in discussion with the Inland Revenue over the results of the pilot review and to explore whether any additional work is needed to further assist and inform the security of Working Families Tax Credit. Although the results from the pilot were not statistically valid, we have put work in hand to follow up weaknesses highlighted by the pilot review, in order to make Family Credit more secure. The "Securing Family Credit" project was initiated in January this year in order to do this.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Ms Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what assessment she has made of the impact of Section 20 of the Social Security Administration (Fraud) Act 1997, which confers powers to require postal services not to redirect mail and return it to the issuing authority, on benefit fraud detection. [46267]

Mr. Field: This Government are committed to taking tough action against all benefit fraud. These new powers will permanently stop the abuse of the postal redirection service by organised fraudsters. The Department is currently concluding negotiations with Royal Mail and the Local Authority Associations on the application of Section 20 powers to Housing Benefit and Council Tax Benefit post issued by local authorities. We plan to implement the powers nationally from this summer and will monitor their impact. In addition, Royal Mail will carry out regular quality assurance checks to ensure that items of Social Security post are not being redirected.

At the same time, the Department is actively considering the best practical application of Section 20 to other Social Security post. In addition, the Department, together with local authorities, is looking at the use of Section 21 of the Social Security Administration (Fraud) Act 1997 which provides for the Post Office to supply information about postal redirection to the Secretary of State and local authorities.

Motability

Mr. O'Hara: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) on what basis the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, having been approached for her approval for the proposals contained in the paper, "Motability: MFL's Maintenance and Residual Value Proposals", indicated that she was generally content; [47291]

(2) what consultation she or her Department have held with hon. Members who have constituents who believe their jobs are at stake if the proposals in the paper, "Motability: MFL's Maintenance and Residual Value Proposals", are implemented; and when such consultations took place; [47247]

(3) to whom and when the paper, "Motability: MFL's Maintenance and Residual Value Proposals", was released by (a) Motability Finance Ltd. and (b) her Department; [47244]

(4) when copies of the paper, "Motability: MFL's Maintenance and Residual Value Proposals", were sent to the motor manufacturers who supply motability cars. [47245]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 23 June 1998]: Motability and Motability Finance Limited have presented their proposals in outline to Ministers in this Department for their information and have consulted widely with motor manufacturers and other interested parties. We understand no final decision has been made by Motability as yet regarding their plans. Officials forwarded details of Motability's proposals to Department of Trade and Industry officials who copied them to the National Franchised Dealers' Association on a confidential basis. No papers have been released to motor manufacturers and there has not been any formal consultation with hon. Members about the proposals.

Benefits Agency (Complaints)

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many complaints per client have been made about each Benefits Agency office in London in each year over the past five years; [46188]

(2) how many complaints have been made about each Benefits Agency office in London in each year over the past five years. [46187]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The administration of the Benefits Agency is a matter for Peter Mathison, its Chief Executive. He will write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Andrew Love, dated 24 June 1998:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions asking how many complaints per client and how many complaints have been made about each Benefits Agency (BA) office in London in each year over the past five years.

The information is not available in the format requested. The Benefits Agency defines complaints as any expression of dissatisfaction either written or spoken about the service provided that needs a response. Collation of complaints data was introduced in October 1997. Such information as is available is shown in the attached table.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Disability Living Allowance

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when an internal audit of DLA reviews and appeals was last conducted; and if she will publish the result. [46238]

Mr. Denham: The administration of Disability Living Allowance is a matter for Peter Mathison, Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Dr. Vincent Cable, dated 24 June 1998:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking when an internal audit of Disability Living Allowance (DLA) reviews and appeals was last conducted and if she will publish the result.

There has not been an internal audit specifically aimed at DLA reviews and appeals. A review of appeals and reviews covering a number of benefits, which included DLA, was conducted in 1996–97. The results of this internal review were reported to Managers in 1997

It may be helpful if I explain that under current legislation there is ongoing monitoring of the standards of decision making. The Chief Adjudication Officer (CAO) is responsible for monitoring the operation of the decision making system, including decisions on DLA. The CAO reports his findings annually to the Secretary of State. His last annual report for 1996–97 was published in July 1997.

In addition, The Social Security Act 1998, which received Royal Assent on 21 May, contains important changes to decision making and appeals procedures for all benefit and child support customers. These measures form a key part of the Government's programme to build an active, modern social security system and are expected to be implemented during the second half of 1999. Amongst other measures the changes will streamline the decision making procedures, making easier to understand; allow Agencies to correct errors early; simplify and streamline the appeals system; and speed up the clearance of appeals.

I hope you find the reply helpful.

Benefits Agency Medical Service

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security for what reasons reports by the Benefits Agency Medical Service are no longer available to individuals who are appealing against a decision of the Benefits Agency until tribunal stage. [46215]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The administration of the Benefits Agency is a matter for Peter Mathison, its Chief Executive. He will write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Barry Gardiner, dated 24 June 1998:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking for what reasons reports by the Benefits Agency Medical Service (BAMS) are no longer available to individuals who are appealing against a decision of the Benefits Agency (BA) until tribunal stage.

No changes have been made to the instructions covering the availability of medical reports to individuals who appeal to the Independent Tribunal Service (ITS) against a decision by an Adjudication Officer. Once an appeal is made the local BA Office will pass all the documents to the ITS. This will include a copy of the BAMS report where appropriate. An information package which includes a set of the appeal documents is sent to the individual by ITS, and any representative, at least seven days before the date of the hearing. This is the minimum period required by law.

ITS advice is that appeal documents are on average issued three to four weeks before the appeal hearing date, but that in some areas the documentation is issued in accordance with minimum legal requirements. We are aware that some BA Offices provide additional copies of All Work Test medical records but this is not standard practice.

In light of these inconsistencies we are undertaking a review of current procedures. This will aim to meet the requirements of "Open Government" and the emerging requirements of the Social Security Act 1998. The aim of making these changes is to make the information timeously available.

I hope that this is helpful.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Bill O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many cases have been referred to the Child Support Agency independent case examiner in each month since its inception; [46086]

(2) how much has been paid in total in compensation by the CSA to people who have been successful in claims against the agency. [46107]

Mr. Keith Bradley: We expect the Child Support Agency to provide a consistent, fair and efficient service to all its clients. We are looking closely at all aspects of the child support scheme to see where improvements can be made and we aim to bring forward a consultation document on our proposals.

The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mrs. Faith Boardman. She will write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Faith Boardman to Mr. Bill O'Brien, dated 24 June 1998:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Questions to the Secretary of State for Social Security about Child Support Agency cases referred to the Independent Case Examiner and Child Support Agency compensation payments.

The Office of the Independent Case Examiner commenced work in April 1997. When the Agency responds to a complaint the customer is given details about the services of the Independent Case Examiner to enable them to contact her directly.

Between 1 April 1997 and 31 May 1998, 1305 customers of the Agency made applications to the Independent Case Examiner. A monthly breakdown is shown in the attached table.

The Agency is committed to providing a good quality customer service and is continuing to develop a close working relationship with the Independent Case Examiner and her staff to identify ways in which their expertise may best be used.

The Agency's Business Units adopt a case study approach with cases referred to the Independent Case Examiner whereby the Business Unit Manager and staff involved with the case identify lessons learnt, introduce improvements and good working practices and regularly liaise with the office of the Independent Case Examiner.

Compensation payments are normally referred to as special payments. A special payment is considered where a clear and unambiguous error by the Agency has resulted in distress or in actual financial loss to the customer which is not recoverable through other means.

From its launch in April 1993 to 31 May 1998 the Agency has paid out a total of £2,168,485 in special payments. The number of payments made (3,235) is relatively small compared with our overall caseload of over 770,000 live and assessed cases (less than half of one per cent.). The numbers of payments have risen recently as a result of increases in the Agency's current workloads and of our actions over the past year to clear the backlog of maintenance applications which had accumulated in the Agency during its first 2–3 years. In 1997–98 the Agency cleared 595,000 maintenance application compared with 357,000 in 1996–97 and reduced the number of maintenance applications over 52 weeks old from 225,000 to 110,000.

I am conscious that there are still far too many complaints about the standards of basic customer contact and the service we provide, and we recognise that doing things right first time is the key to preventing complaints. We are aware that as we further tackle our backlog of cases from the Agency's first 2–3 years, there is potential for the volume of complaints to rise in the short term. During 1997–98 we developed the Customer Service Strategy, our customer service improvement plan for the next four years. The Strategy will improve performance standards; information and openness; consultation and choice; courtesy and helpfulness and provide value for money. We have begun action on some of our customer service initiatives but it will take three to four years to deliver everything. However, we expect customers to see some real improvements by the end of 1998–99.

I hope this helpful.

Marginal Deduction Rates

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if she will list the marginal deduction rates that will apply from October 1999 to a married couple receiving (a) the working families tax credit, (b) housing benefit and (c) council tax benefit with gross weekly earnings of (i) up to £49, (ii) £50-£99, (iii) £100-£149, (iv) £150-£199, (v) £200-£249, (vi) £250-£299 and (vii) £300 and over; and what are the numbers expected to fall into each category. [45999]

Dawn Primarolo: I have been asked to reply.

The Working Families Tax Credit will be withdrawn at a rate of 55p for every £1 of income, net of income tax and National Insurance Contributions (NICs), over £90 a week. Housing benefit is withdrawn at a rate of 65p in every £1 of net income (including Working Families Tax Credit) over an 'applicable amount' (which depends on the composition of the recipient family). Council tax benefit is withdrawn at a rate of 20p in every £1 of net income (including Working Families Tax Credit, but excluding housing benefit) over an 'applicable amount' (which depends on the composition of the family).

The exact marginal deduction rate a given family will face will depend on a range of factors, in addition to the level of their earnings. These include the rate of income tax they face, the rate of NICs they pay, and the combination of benefits they receive—which will in turn depend on the number and age of children in the family and the level of their rent and council tax.

Available estimates of the number of families facing high marginal deduction rates can be found in table 3.3 of the "Financial Statement and Budget Report".

INDEX TO THE

PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES

OFFICIAL REPORT

SIXTH SERIES VOLUME 314

SESSION 1997–98

15th June—25th June 1998

SCOPE OF THE INDEX, ARRANGEMENT AND ABBREVIATIONS

This index is derived from the House of Commons Library's Parliamentary On-Line Information System (POLIS), and the subject terms used are based on those used in POLIS. There are often changes in column numbering, etc., between the daily part or weekly Hansard (which simply collects together the daily parts without revision) and the bound volume. The index for the bound volume is revised to take account of these changes and cannot therefore, be used in connection with the daily part or weekly Hansard. For these versions use the Fortnightly Index.

Scope and arrangement of the Index

Oral and Written Parliamentary Questions are indexed under subject headings and the names of Members asking and Ministers replying to them. Questions are not listed under the names of Departments replying. Departmental listings can be arrived at indirectly by looking under the names of the Minister(s) of that Department. There are, however, the headings 'Northern Ireland', 'Scotland', and 'Wales' under which one can find not only most Questions answered by the Northern Ireland Office, Scottish Office, Welsh Office but also Questions about these areas of the United Kingdom which are answered by other Departments. Ministerial statements are indexed under subject headings, under 'Ministerial statements' and the names of Ministers making them and Members speaking on them. General debates are indexed under broad subject headings and under the names of all Members and Ministers taking part. Debates on legislation (Bills, Orders, Regulations etc.) are indexed under the name of the Bill, Statutory Instruments etc, under subject headings and under the names of those taking part.

Rulings and Statements by Speaker and deputies are brought together under the heading 'Speaker's rulings and statements'.

Other contributions by Speaker and deputies appear under the heading Speaker.

Opposition Day Debates and Estimates Day Debates and Standing Order No. 10 applications are listed under those respective headings and under subject headings too.

The date of each item except Parliamentary Questions is inserted immediately before the reference.

Members' names are given in the form by which they prefer to be known and are printed in bold italics. Under their names, entries are arranged under one of the two headings Debates, etc. (to include interventions on statements, points of order and so on) or Questions.

Abbreviations

Bills 1R = first reading, 2R = second reading, Money res = money resolution, Comm = Committee stage, Rep = Report stage, 3R = third reading, amendt/amendts = amendment/amendments, * = matter taken formally, without debate.

Column numbers followed by the letter W refer to Written Questions. These appear at the end of each daily part or volume with their own sequence of column numbers printed in italics.
